CLEARING THE LINE.

Mexican Agitators in Law's Grip.

Seven Conspirators Put in Tombstone Jail After Hearing at Douglas.

Col. Greene Says Reports from Border Are Not Veracious.

Letter of Half-Crazy Anarchist Foundation for False Reports.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The Department of Justice has received a telegram from United States Marshal Daniels of Arizona, stating that a large number of warrants have been issued and served upon Mexicans in that Territory, who were organizing expeditions against the government of Mexico. The Marshal stated that hearings are going on today at Douglas, Ariz.

HEARINGS CONTINUED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Sept. 8.—Hearings in the conspiracy cases against seven Mexican agitators were continued today until September 17, by which time the authorities hope the unrest will be settled. These prisoners were removed in the jail at Tombstone today for safe keeping.

The charge of violation of the immigration law was entered against Trevinio, Sacildo, Humbert and three others, at the request of the Mexican government, which will deal with them should their deportation be ordered. These prisoners will be confined at Tucson.

REPORTS DEVOID OF TRUTH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

[illegible] referring to the sensational articles that have appeared in the press of the country during the last week in relation to a movement having for its object an armed insurrection in Mexico:

"All such reports are absolutely devoid of truth. I have daily telegraphic information from El Paso, Douglas, Bisbee and Cananea, from which it appears that certain parties there, from interested motives, have been sending up reports as to the massing of revolutionists at different points along the boundary line, large movements of troops to Agua Prieta, fortifying the customhouse at that place and contemplated attacks on the customhouse at Nogales.

"The press of this city published a dispatch from Nogales, Ariz., stating that on the person of one Trevino, who had been detained at Mowry, a mining camp near Nogales, was found a letter from one Magoon, dated Toronto, Canada, in which he was instructed, as soon as he could collect a sufficient force of armed men, to attack the customhouse and invade Mexico.

"This letter from a half-crazy anarchist in Toronto, Canada, written to a compatriot 4000 miles away, instructing him to invade Mexico, appears to have been the basis and foundation for the reports of armed invasion."

STANDARD OIL OVERRULED.

FINDLAY (O.) Sept. 8.—Judge Banker today overruled motions to quash the information filed against John D. Rockefeller and all the Standard Oil cases. A plea of abatement given until next Tuesday to file motion was filed in each case and all were also overruled and the defendants given until Tuesday to file motions.

SOME NEWSPAPER FACTS.

The Los Angeles Times is the biggest daily and Sunday paper printed in the United States. It has printed more columns of advertising in the last two years than any other daily paper in the world. It has a larger percentage of the people in its field as its patrons than has any other paper in the country. It prints more want advertisements, both daily and Sunday, than the aggregate amount printed by all the other five Los Angeles daily papers, and its Sunday edition contains more classified advertising than the aggregate printed by any other three Pacific Coast Sunday papers. Its field includes, in addition to Southern California, all of Nevada, portions of Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and the northern tier of Mexican States. No other section of the United States is richer in natural resources and no other section has made as rapid gains in population and wealth as has the field of The Times during the last decade.

It is the aim of The Times to print all the news, every day in the year, to print it accurately, classify it intelligently, present it rationally, and tell the truth.

FINES HIM BY 'PHONE.

Kansas City Defendant Calls Up Justice and Wants Case Finished and Is Assessed $1.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Justice H. F. Wieman took down the receiver of the telephone in his office on Independence avenue this morning, he was surprised to hear, in a male voice: "Judge, I want to plead guilty to the charge of assault you have against me. I haven't time to go into court, so I want you to accept my plea and fine me by telephone."

The judge thought at first that some friend was trying to have a little fun at his expense, and began to treat the matter lightly. Soon, however, he was convinced that the man was in earnest. The defendant was George Harman of Sheffield, a Kansas City suburb, who was charged with striking Mrs. James Wilkinson, a neighbor.

"How much do you think I ought to fine you?" asked the court.

"Oh, any old thing; I am not exactly guilty of the charge, but I want to get rid of it."

"All right. I'll fine you $1 and costs. Come in and settle as soon as you can."

NEW LAW BARS THE FALL VOTE.

ILLINOIS DEMOCRATS ALARMED AT OUTCOME.

Only Nineteen Days Remain to Naturalize Prospective Citizens and the Party Had Contemplated Ringing in Twelve Thousand Full-Fledged Men to Register.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Consternation reigned in Democratic circles today when it was discovered that the new law regulating naturalization and requiring ninety days' notice before an adopted citizen can vote for the first time becomes effective this fall.

A hurry-up call was sent to W. L. O'Connell, who has buried himself in the wilds of Northern Wisconsin for a few days with some party advisers, to summon the county committee together for a conference on this matter.

It has been planned by Democrats to naturalize at least 12,000 persons this [illegible]

The new law goes into effect September 21, and after that time ninety days must elapse before a new citizen can cast a vote. This would make it impossible for any one naturalized under the new law to vote at the fall election, and only nineteen days remain in which to naturalize under the old law.

DRASTIC ACT IN ICE CASE.

OMAHA MAYOR THREATENS THE TRUST COMPANIES.

Declares That If Short Weight Instances Are Reported, Prosecutions Will Follow and Continuations Will Result in Destruction of Wagons and Throwing Away of Product.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] What has been the fight of the people of Omaha against the ice trust was taken up today by Mayor Dahlman when he issued a signed statement as a notification to the companies that high-handed tactics would not be tolerated.

"Hereafter," the Mayor said, "when people complain of being short-weighted on ice in the city of Omaha and will file a complaint, the same will be prosecuted. If the offenders are convicted and they then refuse to furnish ice to the complainant, I will instruct the Chief of Police to send a policeman to take charge of the driver, wagon and ice. I will further instruct him to put the driver in jail, throw the ice away and smash the wagon."

Following the publication of the Mayor's announcement a small piece of ice was rushed out in a buggy to the homes of two persons who had made complaint. This was the first ice served to these families in a week.

HEIRESS BREAKS SHORTAGE.

Smith College Girl Returns to Her Home in Nunda, N. Y., and Works in Field.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NUNDA (N. Y.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because harvest was ripe and laborers few, Cora Dowling, a Smith College girl and the daughter of a millionaire contractor who formerly lived here, has been working as a day laborer for the past week picking corn on her farm.

Miss Dowling is athletic, fond of walking, swimming, horseback riding and other outside sports. Several days ago when she returned from a yachting cruise on the St. Lawrence with a wealthy chum, she found the corn ready to pick but laborers at a premium.

Throwing off her summer girl costume, she donned a wide brimmed Fedora hat, gloves, thick boots and short working skirt, and mixed in with the farm hands. Her two sisters, Mabel and Minnie, helped her.

MRS. OELRICHS STARTS WEST.

NEWPORT (R. I.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs left late last night for San Francisco, her departure having evidently been suddenly determined upon. It is understood here that her visit to the West has to do with the settlement of the estate of her husband.

BRYAN OFF HIS BASE.

Democrats Pulling Down Idol.

Editor of Omaha "Herald" Declares He Is Not Capable of Leadership.

Predicts Defeat if Government Ownership Idea Is Insisted Upon.

William's New Whim Worse Than Free Silver, Says Hoosier.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OMAHA, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a letter addressed to Judge Edgar Howard, a prominent Nebraska Democrat, Dr. George L. Miller, for twenty-five years editor of the Omaha Herald and long a member of the National Democratic Committee, says:

"The declaration of William Jennings Bryan for the government ownership of all trunk lines of railroads in our country shows that he is no more a Democrat than you are an anarchist."

"Alexander Hamilton, in his wildest zeal, would never have dared," says Dr. Miller, "to propose such a sweeping measure of centralization of power at Washington as that which is now boldly proclaimed by Mr. Bryan in the name of the Democratic party.

"I ask your attention to Mr. Bryan's attitude toward all Democrats in the service of the corporations. He openly declares that every such Democrat must cease to serve the corporations or he must suffer the penalty of outlawry from the Democratic party and the freedom of American citizenship. Is not this a monstrous state of affairs?

HE'S NO STATESMAN.

"Bryan may be the greatest man in the world, as Mayor Dahlman of Omaha and others say he is. But Senator Bailey and John Sharp Williams and other Democratic leaders now declare he is not a statesman and is not capable of leadership of the Democratic party.

"No man can be a Democrat who openly tramples upon the original foundation principle of the national Democracy and of republican freedom in the United States."

In conclusion, Dr. Miller predicts that if Bryan insists upon government ownership of trunk lines of railroads in the next national Democratic conventio he will not be nominated for President by that covention, and if he is nominated "he will be his own platform, no matter what the written platform may be, and will be worse beaten at the ballot-boxes in 1908 than he was in 1902."

HOOSIER BRANDS IT BLUNDER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sterling R. Holt, former chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, spoke for himself and other Gold Democrats today when he said it was time the party was getting rid of Bryan.

When asked his opinion of Bryan's government-ownership scheme, Holt said: "I am absolutely opposed to it. I think that Bryan has been guilty of one of the greatest blunders ever made. The American people are not ready for government ownership and I hope they never will be.

"The Democratic party ought not to waste any more time with Bryan. The sound-money Democrats have begun to warm up, believing that ten years' experience had taught them the necessity of casting aside his vagaries, but now he bobs up with a new whim that is worse than free silver."

TO PUT HIM OFF PEDESTAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Roger C. Sullivan's reply to Bryan's "bull of excommunication" was accepted by Chicago Democrats today as the first gun in a great struggle to pry the Nebraska chosen one off his pedestal as the party's own and only practical candidate.

Sullivan's reply, issued in New York yesterday was prepared and given out only after conference with eastern and southern Democratic leaders, who see in Bryan's rise their own political eclipse. John P. Hopkins, who is in England, was consulted by cable before Sullivan put the finishing touches in his torrid retort.

Bryan's declaration for government ownership of railways is what rallied the southern and the eastern Democrats around the Sullivan standard.

"This reply is the beginning of a concerted fight to regain control of the party and eliminate the dictatorship of any aspirant for office," said John McGillen, one of Sullivan's stalwart friends. "The plans are to carry the fight even into Nebraska, and see if it is not possible to control the next Democratic convention in the interest of the party and not one man."

NOT PREPARED TO ANSWER.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 8.—"You can expect that kind of attack from that kind of people," said W. J. Bryan this morning regarding the attack made on him last night by Roger Sullivan of Illinois.

Bryan said he was not prepared to answer Sullivan's charges, and could not say just when he would issue a statement regarding the Illinois situation. The inference from his replies was that he would have a formal declaration ready within a few days.

Bearing on Sullivan's assertion that Bryan had told an untruth, the latter was asked this afternoon: "Is it not a fact that you did not write a personal letter to Sullivan asking him to resign?"

"I did not write to Sullivan," replied Bryan. "I wrote to Judge Thompson and asked him to show the letter to Sullivan. I did not assert that I had written a personal letter to Sullivan."

"Have you the signed request of a majority of the delegates to the St. Louis convention, asking for the repudiation of Sullivan?"

"I do not care to make any statement on that point. I expect to make a statement on the matter within a few days, but do not want to give it out in an interview."

"Did you notice the challenge made by Sullivan?"

"Yes, but I must be excused from making any reply in an interview."

BAILEY VIGOROUS OPPONENT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Bailey of Texas, who, since his trip to New York, and his public opposition to Bryan's speeches, has been boomed for the nomination for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket, arrived in Washington today and announced that he would give out a carefully prepared statement either tomorrow or Monday.

Bailey is vigorously opposed to Bryan's ownership scheme. He thinks it is all nonsense, and just such a sort of foolishness will kill what is left of the Democratic party.

WON'T TAKE THE STUMP.

The Democratic campaign management is thoroughly chagrined at the way it is being treated by Bryan. Bryan, before his return, was expected to hurry into the Congress campaign and help carry the House. Secretary Edwards sent him a letter to New York, in charge of one of Bryan's warm friends. Bryan has never answered the letter and shows no disposition to work under the Congress committee. Instead he will go South to talk government ownership, just what the committee does not want. There is no doubt the Democratic campaign management has lost all hope of carrying the House, and they blame Bryan's government ownership address for the situation.

CALL SULLIVAN CRIMINAL.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

JACKSONVILLE (Ill.) Sept. 8.—Judge Owen P. Thompson and Millard Fillmore Dunlap today issued statements denying the charges made against them in National Committeeman Sullivan's rejoinder to W. J. Bryan's recent speech at Chicago. In addition, Thompson and Dunlap accuse Sullivan of various political crimes.

WILL ADDRESS UNIONISTS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

OMAHA, Sept. 8.—The labor unions of Omaha are preparing for a festival at a local summer resort, to last all next week. Among the speakers who will be in attendance are William J. Bryan, Eugene V. Debs and Samuel Gompers.

RABBIT COURSING DEPLORED.

English "Sport" Is Condemned by the Fair-Play Loving Portion of the People.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rabbit coursing probably is the most degrading and brutal of all forms of "sport" in this country. It is a standing disgrace that the practice as carried on in many places should be tolerated by the authorities for one minute.

At Hounslow it is the custom to spend Sunday torturing rabbits in a large field and last Sunday's gathering was especially notable for cruelty, owing to the excessive heat.

The correspondent of the Globe draws attention to the disgraceful proceedings and says that about one thousand persons paid sixpence each to witness the "fun."

Between fifty and sixty dogs took part and it was pitiable to see them panting, with parched tongues hanging out, many of them being subjected to kicks and blows when they became the least bit obstreperous.

LUNACY INCREASES IN BRITAIN.

In Less Than Fifty Years, the Number of Insane Has More Than Trebled.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A sad result of the heat wave has been the large number of people who have been driven mad by it and sought relief by drowning themselves.

A most disquieting volume for the British reader is the sixtieth report of the Commissioners in Lunacy. From this it would appear that lunacy is increasing in the British Isles in a most alarming fashion, while the cost of maintaining the pauper lunatics appears to be rapidly mounting out of all proportion to the numerical increase.

In less than fifty years the number of insane has more than trebled.

GARDENS ON WOMEN'S HATS.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Grapes and apricots and pears and plums and everything almost, except canteloupes and watermelons, will be used to trim women's hats this fall, according to Mme. President Hunt of the National Milliners' Association.

Mme. Hunt imparted this information in advance of the association convention which will meet next Tuesday. The hats also are going to be higher in the crown and price, but no hat will be complete unless it has fruit upon it and the orchards of the world have been searched for models to furnish the bonnets of world's beauties this year.

DIPLOMAT VICTIM OF JOKE.

Paris Finds Solution of the Blue Diamond Mystery, Involving Russian's Reputation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Various reports keep up interest in the blue-diamond mystery. There is confirmation for the report that the case is about to be "classed;" that is, that no legal proceedings will be taken. This is the opinion of legal authorities at Brest and also of Greger's counsel. No further mention is now made of the return to Brest of the Russian diplomat.

People in Brest are inclined to be skeptical with regard to the alleged theft of the ring. Their opinion is similar to that expressed by Greger from the beginning—that the affair is a practical joke in very bad taste. A former maid of Mme. Greger, however, claims to have reason to suppose that Greger will confess sooner or later. Greger says she is in the pay of the Comtesse de Rodellec du Porzic.

WOMEN WAR FOR CASSIER ESTATE.

TWO CLAIM TO BE WIDOWS OF RICH MAGAZINE PUBLISHER.

Brother and Sister of Deceased Magnate Join Issue With Mrs. Gertrude Spooner Cassier Against the Admitted Common Law Spouse of Man Killed in Railway Wreck.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRIDGEPORT (Ct.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Adolph Cassier of Dedham, Mass., and Helena Cassier Hellman of Boston, brother and sister of Louis P. Cassier, magazine publisher, who was killed last July in the railroad wreck at Salisbury, England, have joined issue with Gertrude Spooner Cassier of Scituate, Mass., to prevent the division of the estate, estimated at $500,000.

Gertrude Spooner Cassier claims she is the real widow of the late publisher, and that Agnes Nichols Cassier of Trumbull, Ct., is not his wife.

Lawyers representing the brother and sister of Cassier claim the bulk of the estate is being concealed by persons unknown to them, and that Mrs. Cassier of Trumbull was not the lawful wife of the deceased.

Counsel for Mrs. Cassier of Trumbull [illegible] any marriage certificate, for the reason, he says, that his client became the common law wife of the dead publisher under the New York State law.

CANADA AFTER A NEW TARIFF.

COMMISSIONERS FRAMING BILL OF CHANGES.

Dominion Parliament Expected to Meet in November When New Features Will Be Presented That Will Aid the Countries Favorable to the Home Government.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is anticipated that the Dominion Parliament will be summoned to meet November 15 next. Tariff commissioners are busy framing a new tariff bill in order to have it ready for presentation to Parliament at an early date. The new acts have three chief features.

The idea is to have a maximum tariff to apply to countries whose tariffs are hostile to Canada, such as the United States and Germany; minimum general tariff to apply to countries disposed to trade with this country on fair terms, and preferential tariff for Great Britain and the colonies.

The government is desirous of encouraging trade with Japan, which country is likely to become one of Canada's best customers.

POSTAL CLERKS GET A SETBACK.

DEPARTMENT WARNS AGAINST LABOR ALLIANCE.

No Organization May Be Joined Except for Social Purposes and Any Appeal to Congress Must Come Through the Postmaster-General and Not Sent by Any Society.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There has been much talk among employés of the local postoffice of organizing and becoming affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Today the Postmaster-General caused to be posted conspicuously in the building a circular letter, in which he made it clear that the Federal government would not tolerate such an organization, or any, in fact, formed for other than purely social purposes or to improve the service.

After stating that the men must understand that they are expected to individually give the government efficient service, the Postmaster-General said it must be clearly understood that the officials of the department and not the officials or members of any organization, are the proper persons to present the department's needs to Congress.

"You must keep ever before you the fact that over the organization is the authority of the department, an integral part of the government to which you owe your supreme allegiance."

Bitter Pill for San Francisco Unions After Their Former Stand.

Calhoun Firm and All But Stationary Engineers Accept Inevitable.

Electrical Workers to Be Segregated from Fellow Non-Unionists.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Calhoun of the United Railways has won a complete victory today for the open shop.

Last night's meeting of the affiliated unions, which was a turbulent wrangle until after 2 o'clock this morning, resulted in a final decision of the unionites to remain at work and abide by arbitration.

With the whines and threats of naughty boys under the rod, the strikers have gulped down the bitter pill prescribed by Calhoun in his ultimatum of yesterday against the closed shop.

Calhoun sugared the pill well by magnanimously agreeing to reëmploy without discrimination all strikers who desired to go to work. It was this coating which made it possible for the strikers to take their medicine.

There is, for the present at least, little danger of further rupture. It may be said that the strike is really over, but the burr of unionism still wrankles under the industrial saddle at San Francisco.

LINEMEN BALK.

While union men will return to work with the United Railroads, it may be said authoritatively that union linemen [illegible] by side with non-union men. An endeavor will be made by the United Railroads to segregate crews so that they will not conflict in their work, but there is grave danger, after the matter of hours and wages has been satisfactorily arbitrated, that the unions will again show their teeth by attempting to make things hot for the "scabs."

When interviewed in regard to this danger, President Calhoun said: "All men in the employ of this company will be treated with equal fairness, and any attempt on the part of either union or non-union men to hinder each other in the performance of their duties will be considered a violation of the rules of the company, punishable by immediate discharge."

DISCIPLINE TO RULE.

Strong discipline is to be embodied in the regulations of the company. Undoubtedly the unions realize this fact, and while employés individually are willing to abide by just ruling, not so the agitators, the walking delegates, the human fire-brands and jawsmiths, who unquestionably are responsible for the recent strike, and who again will attempt to inspire dissatisfaction among union laborers.

However, while this condition still confronts the situation, the public of San Francisco has learned that Calhoun never will tolerate bulldozing by the unions and will stand immovable for those principles which he has successfully established in defeating the recent strike.

NEGOTIATIONS WAVER.

Last night's meeting of the affiliated unions came to a climax at 2 o'clock with a motion that all arbitration be declared off and the strike again be declared and fought out to the bitter end. The motion was made by the striking firemen and was supported by a portion of the electrical workers.

It was defeated and was immediately flanked by a motion that the men remain at work and that the unions submit to arbitration in accordance with the agreement of Wednesday.

Wiser judgment won the vote and the meeting came to an end with the striking firemen stubbornly refusing to abide by the decision.

Today the following silly statement made in an endeavor to disguise their unconditional surrender was given out to the public:

STATEMENT OF COMMITTEE.

"Concerning the statement of differences recently arising between President Calhoun of the United Railroads and representatives of the unions recently on strike and particularly with reference to the signed statement of Mr. Calhoun on the subject, published in the morning papers, the conference committee desires to say that when the joint conference of last Wednesday decided to advise the striking street carmen, electrical workers, firemen and construction workers to return to work pending arbitration of hours and wages, every representative of the unions present understood that discrimination against either individuals or classes was not contemplated by Mr. Calhoun, and each and every man, without hesitancy, interpreted the letter of Mr. Calhoun then before conference in but one way.

CALHOUN'S TERMS.

"In that letter Mr. Calhoun said: 'I write at once to say to you that if, and when, the members of the respective unions who are now striking are directed by their unions to return promptly to work, I will cordially receive the officers of the said unions, and will immediately proceed with arbitration questions of hours and wages.'

"That sounds like a straightforward, clean-cut proposition, and bears none of the earmarks of double-dealing. It makes no distinction whatever between several groups of strikers, consequently members of the conference were justified in assuming without hesitancy that Mr. Calhoun not only referred to the striking street-car men, striking electrical workers, striking firemen, and striking construction workers, as groups, but that he included each and every issue between the unions and Mr. Calhoun.

OPPOSING IDEAS.

"The idea was whether strikers, all groups of strikers, would promptly return to work and then open negotiations for a settlement, or whether they would continue the contest until one side or the other was forced to make unconditional surrender."

"The conference, having faith in the justice of the demands of the strikers, and having faith in Mr. Calhoun's integrity of purpose, agreed to the very unusual condition imposed by Mr. Calhoun as essential to the commencement of the direct negotiations for a settlement of the existing controversies. From the unions' standpoint, the strike conditions were thoroughly satisfactory and the probability of defeat did not commend consideration.

"Had any phrase of Calhoun's letter or any verbal statement attributed to him excited the slightest suspicion in the mind of any member of the conference that Calhoun contemplated discrimination against any class of strikers or even against individual strikers, his terms of settlement would have been rejected.

NO WORK AT HAND.

"When, on Thursday morning, striking members of the firemen and electrical workers' unions reported for work they were told that their services were not required. To say that the union men were surprised is to use an expression that but mildly suggests the situation.

"Later, in personal interviews between representatives of the electrical workers and firemen, Calhoun confirmed the action of his subordinates in refusing employment to the striking firemen and electrical workers who had reported for work and informed the union representatives that he would reëmploy their striking members only as vacancies occurred.

"At the same time, Calhoun declared his readiness to negotiate with the electrical workers and firemen on the questions of wages and hours. Wages and hours for whom? Wages and hours for members of unions' who might be employed at some uncertain time in the future or wages and hours to affect Mr. Calhoun's strike-breakers? The situation was only not absurd, but involved a breach of faith.

CHANCE FOR RUPTURE.

"At this point there arose grave danger of a complete rupture of negotiations to effect an amicable adjustment of controversies between the United Railroads and the unions' joint conference.

"Friday, acting on direct reports of the unexpected attitude of Calhoun toward the striking electrical workers and firemen, the joint conference committee of five called on Mr. Calhoun and presented the objection of the men to the policy he had announced with respect to firemen and electrical workers. The result of this interview was a formal statement by Mr. Calhoun that he would at once reëmploy all of his former employés who promptly reported for work; in other words, he agreed, in unequivocal terms, to conditions that were absolutely essential to further proceedings in the direction of a consummation of the amicable adjustment of the industrial controversies with the United Railroads contemplated in the joint statement of Mr. Calhoun and the conference committee issued September 5.

SILENT ON OPEN SHOP.

"The issue of 'closed shop' or 'open shop' has not been raised by the unions during these negotiations, notwithstanding statements to that effect attributed to Mr. Calhoun, or originating in other quarters.

"The unions in good faith accepted arbitration on the conditions stipulated by Mr. Calhoun in his letter of September 5. The unions have not asked and do not contemplate asking alterations or amendment of those conditions by the United Railroads, especially when such alterations or amendments involves the sacrifice of confidence and respect of the men whose bread and butter interests they have been delegated to guard and protect."

[Signed] "WILLIAM P. M'CABE,
"Secretary Joint Conference."

CALHOUN ANSWERS COMMITTEE.

Calhoun was amused when he saw a copy of a statement given out by the conference committee.

"Really, this is getting tiresome," he said; "these fellows are trying hard to square themselves with the public, but you know it is best of all to unfurl no red flags by fighting out each little point with them. They know what principles I am standing for, and they know that there is absolutely no possibility of my retreating from the position I have taken.

"I want to see them all back at work, and the sooner the better it will be for San Francisco. However, they expect an answer, so I will have to dictate one," and with a sigh that bespoke the long-enduring patience he has maintained in his dealings with these strikers, who care not for the city's welfare, he dictated the following:

"Referring to the statement issued by William P. McCabe, secretary of the Joint Conference, I will only say that any insinuation affecting perfect good faith of the United Railroads is absolutely without foundation. I have no controversy with the joint committee, and am surprised that Mr. McCabe should have thought it necessary to make a statement which has been called to my attention.

LETTER IS MAGNIFIED.

"The so-called signed statement is a letter written by me at the wish of the joint committee for the express purpose of being laid before the joint conference.

"It was read to the joint committee and delivered to them in person, and clearly states the position of the United Railroads.

"The facts are, that yesterday afternoon I was requested to receive a call from the joint committee, as the members stated to me that some misapprehension existed in regard to the position of the United Railroads. I was informed that some question had been raised in regard to the reëmployment of firemen and some of the electrical workers in shops.

"I had instructed my officials to take back all former employés who reported for work promptly. There has been friction over the old men working with new men in my employment. This was fully discussed with the joint committee, and, as I have said before, the letter which was written to the joint committee was read to the members and delivered to them in person.

STATES COMPANY'S POSITION.

"No question was raised, but it properly embodied questions under discussion between us and clearly stated the position of my company. It was written at the express request of the joint committee, in order that there should be no misapprehension in regard to the position of the company on the points discussed between us."

Secretary McCabe, after reading Calhoun's comment on the statement of the joint conference, said he had no reply to make other than this: "Had not Mr. Calhoun given to the press his letter yesterday, the conference committee would not have deemed it necessary to make public a statement regarding the matter covered in Mr. Calhoun's letter."

McCabe said that he hoped that further conversations between Calhoun and newspaper representatives would be avoided. He fasely accused Calhoun of double dealing saying: "He says one thing to newspaper men, and then says another to us. I don't see as it is any of the public's business what our dealing with Mr. Calhoun is in this matter. We don't care a damn about the public. We are fighting for our own bread and butter."

CALHOUN'S FAIR ATTITUDE.

No one talking for five minutes with Calhoun can misunderstand his attitude in regard to unionism and the open shop. His discussions of the principle of industrial freedom crackle and snap with logic.

Speaking to a Times reporter today he said:

"If capital has made great progress in combination, labor has made greater. Unionism has sought control of employés of every important transportation and manufacturing industry in the country. The problem presented by combined capital and combined labor is the most important of the day. The principle of individual right and individual liberty affords its proper solution. It is the right of every man in a free country to unite with his fellows to advance their mutual interests.

UNIONS LEGITIMATE.

"Unions among any class of free citizens for promotion of their general welfare and advancement are entirely legitimate. The employer is fatuitously blind who denies a recognition of the unions. As well deny sunlight at midday.

"Unions exist. They are a tremendous social force. Men have a right to act individually or in combination, to work, and to cease working. Up to this point, we should not only recognize union, but recognize its rights and its legitimate powers. There is nothing so far that conflicts with the principle of industrial liberty and individual right.

"But when a union goes a step farther, and seeks to introduce the socialistic principle that no man shall labor in a given occupation unless he belongs to the union, and that he must conform his hours of labor, and his terms of labors to its dictation, it breaks a sacred law, human and divine.

MAN'S INHERENT RIGHT.

"Every man has an inherent right to labor. Every man has an inherent right to labor for such wage and for such time as he individually may determine. When a man is deprived of it, he is deprived of his liberty. Every civilized government guarantees this right.

"For any combination of men to deny it is a crime. Such a combination ought to be condemned at the bar of public opinion and punished by law. Every power of the government should be utilized to enable its humblest citizen to work when and where and as he pleases.

"Self-preservation demands that the government should strictly enforce law and order everywhere. This is a rule of action that admits of no compromise. When under stress of peculiar hardships we pander to public clamor, we establish a precedent which undermines every foundation of free constitutional government."

ONE ARBITER CHOSEN.

M. L. Worthington probably will represent the electrical workers, construction workers and firemen, if the latter consent to arbitrate. The carmen offered a strong opposition to Worthington as the affiliated unions' representative on the board of arbitration.

Here is a loophole which may enable the carmen to object to the third member of the board of arbitration, which Worthington for three unions and Thornwell Mullaly for the United Railroads will select. In this event, it will be necessary for Mullaly and Cornelius to decide upon a new third member of the board.

Farley's men are still housed in various car barns of the United Railroads, and it is safe to say that they will be kept subject to a moment's call until such time as it is certain that a further rupture between the company and the unions will not take place.

INDIVIDUAL SETTLEMENTS.

The indications are that the differences between the United Railroads and the strikers will have to be settled between the company and each individual union by arbitration.

Calhoun's attempt to settle the matter without arbitration in the case of the Carmen's Union by offering an increase of 10 per cent. wages, and a ten-hour day to continue, was refused by the Executive Committee of the union at a meeting tonight. Cornelius was chosen by the carmen to represent them on the arbitration board.

Cornelius said today that he would not agree to waive arbitration unless the company would offer $3 for an eight-hour day.

MEN DECRY STRIKE.

A Times reporter talked with sixteen motormen and eleven conductors of the United Railroads today, and twenty-five of the men said that they would be satisfied to work on the basis of 30 cents an hour, and were willing to work ten hours.

"Cornelius is making a fight to get all the money he can for us, for an eight-hour day, but a big majority of the platform men feel that he is pressing matters too far," said a motorman. "We want this fuss settled. All this arbitration is grand-stand play. I tell you that this row has not been made by men of the union individually, but was stirred up by our business agents. They have to do it to earn their salaries," he added, with a smile.

VOTE NOT LEGITIMATE.

"The meeting at which it was voted to strike was a slim turnout, and a rising vote was taken when the constitution calls for a secret ballot. All of us who attempted to talk against the strike were cut short, and I got so disgusted that I did not attend another meeting of the union. I turned my card in, but I guess I will have to pay toll again or have my life made a hell by business agents."

The United Railroads today addressed a letter to W. C. Fuller, president of the Street Railroad Construction Workers, stating that after September 11 the following wages will be paid by the company: Track laborers, 9 hours, $2.25; after thirty days' continuous employment, $2.50; handy men, 9 hours, $2.50; after continuous employment thirty days, $2.75; pavers, 9 hours, on repairs, $2.75, on construction $3.25. This attempt of Calhoun to settle with workers without arbitration will be considered by their union tomorrow.

Engineers Tie Up Steel Mill.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Owing to the attitude taken by the officials of the Republic Iron and Steel Mills at East Chicago toward the organization of the engineers, twelve engineers have walked out after a fruitless conference with Superintndnt Crap. The officials objected to the presence of representatives of Chicago unions in the plant, which is an open shop. When the twelve engineers struck the machinery was tied up and 1200 men were thrown out of work.

SAYS RELIGION IS NECESSITY.

THE PRESIDENT TALKS AT EPISCOPAL MEETING.

Bi-Centenary Celebration of Christ Church Is Held at Oyster Bay, and Chief Executive's Words on Spiritual Life Show Worth of Self-Support as Aid to Individual.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 8.—In an address at the bi-centenary celebration of the Christ Episcopal Church here today the President talked of the necessity of religion and clean living for the welfare of the nation.

"I cannot understand any American citizen," he said, "who has the faintest feeling of patriotism and devotion to his country failing to appreciate the absolute essential need of religion in the broadest sense to the welfare of his country."

He further said that our material foundation of wealth was but a base for the spiritual growth of the nation, and while the material ought not to be disregarded, its real object ought not to be lost sight of. The mission of the church was not to work in the interests of one sect, but for humanity as a whole.

The President read several verses from the Bible to point out that not the hearers, but the doers of the word were the true followers of Christ.

On the subject of riches the President said:

"There is nothing I abhor more than the telling of an untruth, whether an unconventional untruth or not, and I would on no occasion be understood as affecting to depreciate wellbeing. To tell men to disregard either entirely is to preach to them a doctrine which it is impossible for them to live up to, and which the preacher knows perfectly well they will not try to live up to.

"Put riches below the things of the soul. Give to the body what the body is entitled to. The multi-millionaire is not a harm, but a good to the community if he appreciate that he is only a trustee for that great wealth—that he is a trustee for the cause of goodness."

The President emphasized the necessity of every man being thoroughly self-supporting as a basis for spiritual life. He concluded with the sentiment that the only life really worth living was one that made others better because it had been lived.

NUDE MAN STARTLES CROWD.

Visitors at New York Polo Game See Apparition Scoot Across Field in Nature's Garb.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Spectators at the Squadron A polo game at Van Cortlandt Park today were thrown into a state of trepidation and the contest was temporarily suspended on account of the advent of a stranger garbed like Truth. He had no clothes, no home and no sense of congruity.

He arrived in the midst of the game, when the grounds were thronged with those who were interested in the playing. Tall and gaunt, with a scraggly beard, and waving his long, thin arms, he appeared on the fringe of the crowd. He walked unconcerned and unabashed and gazed dreamily at the game.

Women screamed and ran toward the Van Cortlandt mansion. The game was suspended and the rival teams turned to and helped capture the intruder and consign him to a horse blanket. He was lodged in the Psychopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital, where he will be examined as to his sanity.

FISHING SMACK HELD UP.

Mexican Gunboat Reported to Have Sent Men to Board American Vessel Outside Limit.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GALVESTON, Sept. 8.—The fishing smack Hatteras, belonging to the Gulf Fisheries Company of this city, reached here today from Mexican waters, where her commander states he was held up by a Mexican gunboat, August 25.

While seven miles off Triangular Reef in the middle of the Gulf of Campeche, armed Mexican marines boarded the American boat and ordered the captain to show his papers. The captain of the Hatteras was much agitated when the warship gave orders to lay to, as he was a great distance outside the shore limit and under full sail for the fishing banks.

Manager Munn of the Gulf Fisheries Company wired the State Department requesting immediate action for the protection of American vessels while fishing in the open sea or proceeding to and from the fishing waters.

TEACHERS FAVOR NEW SYSTEM.

SCRANTON (Pa.) Sept. 8.—After a lively discussion the city teachers at the close of the annual institution declared themselves in favor of a gradual reform in spelling and the adoption of a phonetic system. Resolutions were adopted expressing the belief that the "ultimate adoption of a completely phonetic system of spelling would be a great benefit to every English-speaking adult while to foreigners who wish to study English and to school children it would mean a shortening of their labor by several years."

FORMER SLAVES WANT HOME.

FORT WORTH (Tex.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Former Texas slaves will hold a meeting at Sherman on the 12th inst to organize a movement for an ex-slave home. Appeals are to be made to the negro race and all former slave owners. There is also an intention of appealing to the next State Legislature to make a liberal appropriation in the same direction. The movement will be pushed by the most influential negroes of the State.

PIONEERS ENJOY OUTING.

"California as it Used to be in the Days of '49," was the main theme of the discussion at the sixteenth annual picnic of the Western Association of California Pioneers held today, in celebration of the fifty-sixth anniversary of the admission of California to the Union. And to judge by the lurid descriptions by the venerable gathering, the California of old was a wondrous strange place. From the tongues of thirty gray-headed pioneers came remarkable reminiscences of the time when the valley of the Sacramento was the greatest gold field in the world.

DIES WHILE BEING SUED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. F. W. Blees, Civil War veteran and millionaire founder of Blees Military Academy, at Macon, Mo., was found dead at the Southern Hotel, here tonight. When clerks forced an entrance to his room he was lying in bed with his clothes on, apparently asleep. No trace of poison could be found, while his body bore no marks of violence. A Coroner's investigation will be held to determine the cause of death. Last Friday Col. Blees was sued in the Federal Court at Hannibal by Dr. Julius Auler and his wife, who charged that Col. Blees had retained $130,000 bequeathed by his mother to Mrs. Auler, her niece.

BALLOONIST IN SAD PLIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GAYLORD (Mich.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Matteray, who landed here after a flight of 200 miles across Lake Michigan in his disabled airship, recounted today his thrilling experience. He swept over several big lake boats and once when within fifty feet of a vessel called to a man on deck to catch the anchor ropes. A little later the airship was skimming the water with Mattery half submerged. He threw out ballast and the Columbia responded by shooting into the higher atmosphere where Matteray's clothes froze to his body and the big gas bag was covered with a thick coating of ice. Matteray became drowsy then and lashed himself to the framework. He was awakened by bumping against a tree in a forest of the Michigan peninsula.

ENDS THREE LIVES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EAU CLAIRE (Wis.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While a band was playing and people thronged the east side streets at 8 o'clock tonight, Bert Tondler, a frenzied husband, firing as he ran, chased his wife and a man named Johnson past the city building and around a corner to the front of a leading hotel, where the two fugitives fell dead, each pierced by two bullets. The pursuer then backed off and shot himself, dying instantly.

HIPPLE NOTES BEAR MYTHICAL SIGNATURES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—Additional evidences as to the method employed by Frank K. Hipple, the suicide president of the wrecked Real Estate Trust Company, was revealed today by the State and county investigators.

The District Attorney found two notes, one for $65,000, and the other for $133,000. The first note was made to "J. W. Schwarz," and the collateral named was 40,000 shares of International Match Company and 40,000 shares of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company. The other note bore the name of J. A. Wabeet, and the collateral entered against it was 150,000 shares of the new Alexandria Land and River Improvement Company.

"It is my opinion there are no such persons as 'J. W. Schwarz' and 'J. A. Wabeet,'" said Mr. Bell. "At least, I have been unable to discover the addresses or any evidence that they exist. The collateral which they are purported to have furnished is worthless.

"I believe that Hipple took the money for his own use and entered the bogus collateral with the mythical names to deceive the trust company officials. This theory is supported by the fact, which I learned today, that Hipple always paid the interest on these loans himself. There is no record of any interest having been received from 'Schwarz' or 'Wabeet.'"

Attention is now being paid to the possible liability, criminal and civil, of the directors of the institution. Regarding this, Mr. Bell, said:

"Up to tonight, I have found no absolute evidence of criminality so far as the directors are concerned. This does not mean, however, that such evidence is not in existence. But one thing is certain—if we find such evidence you may rest assured that prosecutions will follow."

While the State bank examiners are going through the books and papers of the wrecked company, looking for further evidence of criminality, Receiver Earle is busy perfecting his plan to reorganize the company. The directors said today they fully expect the bank to resume business within two weeks.

The deeper the probers go into the affairs of the ruined company, the more amazed they become at the boldness of its late president. It was discovered today that he had recommended to the directors a 5 per cent. dividend on the stock of the trust company last July, because of the great prosperity of the institution.

Adolph Segal, who succeeded in borrowing $5,300,000 from the bank through Hipple, is ill in his magnificent apartments at the Hotel Majestic, which he owns. His condition is not serious.

FRANCE MUST MAINTAIN PEACE.

Revolution at Mogodor Is in Territory Which Was in Question at Algeciras.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The newspapers here this morning contain little further news of the revolution at Mogodor, one of the Moroccan ports which the Algeciras conference decided that France should police.

According to a dispatch from Tangier to a news agency here, the raiders committed many excesses, several persons were killed and the Jewish community was compelled to retire to Mellah.

A Tangier correspondent says that dispatches from Mogodor dated September 4 declare that a Berber chief entered the town and demanded that all Jewish merchants, many of whom were Portuguese or subjects of European powers, should retire to the ghetto, and on their refusal to do so threatened to seize and burn their effects.

The dispatch does not make it clear whether or not the chief had begun to do this, but showed that a great panic existed in Mogodor.

T. K. Settler, general agent at San Francisco of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, had his leg broken in a collision with a loaded lumber truck.

BANK GETS DEVLIN MONEY.

First National of Topeka Will Be Enabled to Pay the Depositors in Full.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Sept. 8.—An amicable division of property valued at $600,000 belonging to the estate of the late C. J. Devlin, was arranged today between the trustees of the Devlin estate and the receiver of the First National Bank of Topeka.

The bank will receive property valued at about $300,000 as its share, which will make possible the payment in full of all depositors according to Receiver James T. Bradley of the institution.

Dividends totaling 55 per cent. already have been paid by the receiver, and the remaining 45 per cent. will be paid in three separate dividends at an early date, thus closing up the affairs of the bank, which failed in July, 1905.

The formal entry by Judge Hollock of the United States District Court authorizes the compromise.

SMALL TERM FOR POACHERS.

Three Months in Prison Given to the Japanese.

Surprise at Light Penalty Follows Announcement.

Believed Episode Will Be Closed With Sentence.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Valdez dispatch says:

"Judge Gunnson, in the United States Court here yesterday, sentenced the Japanese seal poachers to serve three months each in prison. The men were convicted after a brief trial.

"That the Japanese who raided the St. Paul seal rookeries escaped with a short sentence will cause some surprise locally and throughout the Coast.

"The raid was one of the boldest violations of the law known to the Coast. Seals to the value of nearly $10,000 were killed and the poachers made away with hides worth nearly that sum. It was believed that Japan would protest if the men were given harsh treatment in the courts of the United States, and it now is considered probable that there will be no more international discussion concerning the incident."

MAKING CALL LOANS EAST.

SAN FRANCISCO BANKS "FLUSH."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—The San Francisco banks have out in the way of call loans in New York between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 at very favorable rates of interest, so great is the eastern demand for ready money with which to move the unusually big crops. There is a surplus of money in San Francisco at present and the banks are finding it profitable to use it in the way of call loans in the East. The local surplus is owing to the influx of insurance money and for the further reason that, pending preparations of plans for buildings and other local investments, many people with money have no present use for it and are filling the banks with it.

The site of the old Flood building, at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, was yesterday leased to the Pacific Company for a term of fifty years. This is the most important real estate deal in San Francisco since the fire. It is figured that the lease will cost somewhere between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 during the half-century of its existence. An eight-story class A building costing $750,000 will be erected without delay.

SMELTING COMPANY ACTIVITY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

REDWOOD CITY, Sept. 8.—The Selby Smelting and Lead Company has placed on record its contract with the Healy-Tibbetts Company for the construction of a pier, slip and wharf at San Bruno Point, near South San Francisco. The contract price is $100,000. The contract calls for a pier, slip and wharf extending out into the bay a sufficient distance and of size enough to permit docking and unloading the large deep-water vessels which will come to the smelting works with ore from South American and Asiatic ports.

A corps of civil engineers of the Peninsular Railway Company is surveying a line through the principal streets here to connect with that company's right of way into the town on the west side of the Southern Pacific track. A portion of the route being surveyed is included in the petition of Gen. H. H. Hart for a franchise from the town.

STOCKTON, Sept. 8.—Charles P. Robertson, who is accused of embezzling about $1000 while a deputy in the Assessor's office in Tuolumne county, was brought to the Stockton jail tonight by Deputy Sheriff Squires, who has been tracing the man since a warrant was issued for him. He was last heard of in Modesto, and says he drove to Lathrop, passed through Stockton, and went to Sacramento four days ago. He went into hiding while awaiting funds to leave the State, but was located through a party who knew him. He is said to have admitted that he took the money.

COLONIES WORRY KAISER.

African Dependencies to Be Investigated and Endeavor Made to Benefit Them.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—Emperor William has determined to discover what is wrong with the German colonies, and after returning from the maneuvers will receive in audience Herr Dernburg, the new director of the Colonial Office, and discuss plans for reforms. Director Bernburg already has declared his intention to visit the African colonies forthwith to study the situation on the ground and see what can be done to set the colonies on the road to prosperity.

The contracts of the great colonial trading and mining companies will be subjected to rigid scrutiny in the interest of the colonies.

CELEBRATED CHEMIST COMING.

DESERTED COWBOY A SUICIDE.

CODY (Wyo.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arthur Plumb, a picturesque cowboy with whom an Indiana belle had fallen in love and married, yesterday killed himself with a bullet because his wife had tired of the simple life of the plains and returned home. Three Months in Prison Given to the Japanese.

Surprise at Light Penalty Follows Announcement.

Believed Episode Will Be Closed With Sentence.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A Valdez dispatch says:

"Judge Gunnson, in the United States Court here yesterday, sentenced the Japanese seal poachers to serve three months each in prison. The men were convicted after a brief trial.

"That the Japanese who raided the St. Paul seal rookeries escaped with a short sentence will cause some surprise locally and throughout the Coast.

"The raid was one of the boldest violations of the law known to the Coast. Seals to the value of nearly ... were killed and the poachers made away with hides worth nearly that sum. It was believed that Japan would protest if the men were given harsh treatment in the courts of the United States, and it now is considered probable that there will be no more international discussion concerning the incident."

MAKING CALL LOANS EAST.

SAN FRANCISCO BANKS "FLUSH."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—The San Francisco banks chave out in the way of call loans in New York between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 at very favorable rates of interest, so great is the eastern demand for ready money with which to move the unusually big crops. There is a surplus of money in San Francisco at present and the banks are finding it profitable to use it in the way of call loans in the East. The local surplus is owing to the influx of insurance money and for the other reason that, pending preparation of plans for buildings and other investments, many people with money have no present use for it and are filling the banks with it.

CASHIER HERRING HITS STENSLAND.

AFFIRMS THAT BANK BECAME A RENDEZVOUS FOR WOMEN.

Declares That President of Wrecked Financial Institution Gave the Other Officers no Chance to Examine Loans and That He Originated Secret Ledger in Fear.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Henry W. Herring, cashier of the wrecked Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, when arraigned today to answer charges of larceny and embezzlement, declared that the looted bank was the rendezvous for women who were entertained by Stensland. He said that the women friends of the bank president made merry in the bank and that the employés smiled sneeringly and maintained a discreet silence.

In answer to Stensland's charges that Herring helped to wreck the bank, Herring said:

"Stensland gave the officers of the bank no opportunity to examine the loans. He relieved them all of their duties in this respect. Stensland had his clerks sign notes which were accepted as ample security to cover overdrafts. He used the forged notes without hesitation to make good any overdraft.

"Stensland conceived the idea of a secret ledger after Bank Examiner Sherlock had threatened to make an investigation."

GOLD LEAF IS SHORT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because of a general strike for increased wages among the gold beaters of New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities, the gold-leaf industry of the country is practically at a standstill.

Book binderies, gilders, picture-frame dealers, sign painters and other who use large quantities of gold leaf are beginning to feel the effect of the strike, and unless a settlement be soon affected the price of the material will go up and dealers will be obliged to either stop business or go into the import trade.

FLIES INCREASE CONSUMPTION.

ROME, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Recent experiments by medical experts disclosed the fact that the increase in consumption and contagious diseases is due to flies, just as the spread of malaria is due to certain kinds of mosquitoes. It is proposed to kill the flies by means of inoculated diseases, and it has also been suggested that money prizes be given for destroying a certain quantity. If such a law passes and the killing of flies is encouraged in other ways, advocates of the policy says flies will be extinct within a year.

ALIEN WOULD-BE LEGISLATOR.

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three more men were arrested today for alleged naturalization frauds and arraigned before Commissioner Hayes. One is a candidate for the Legislature and another is a city employé, naturalization "expert" and runner for many Democratic ward committees. He has involved many Federal and city employés, and has confessed that many naturalization blanks were stolen from the court clerk's office. A searching investigation is to be made of the naturalization court's methods.

SEEK ST. JOHN BELOSSE.

SEATTLE, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Seattle detectives are searching the city for Major, the honorable R. E. St. John Lynch Belosse, the third son of a wealthy British family and the late solicitor for the Seattle Commercial Club, whom they desire to place in jail on a charge of passing a large number of worthless checks and drafts in Seattle. The pitiful side of the case is that his wife, a good-looking, highly-educated English woman, is left in Seattle very ill and almost penniless.

WASHINGTON.

WILSON TAKES HOPEFUL VIEW.

Does Not Fear the Loss of Heat Producers.

Secretary Sees Substitute in Denatured Alcohol.

Commends Hill for His Astuteness in Economics.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, today commented on James J. Hill's review of economic conditions in the United States, a resumé of which was published in The Times of last Monday.

"I have read Mr. Hill's article," said the Secretary, "and regard it as a complete and statesman-like paper. He outlines the situation with accuracy and an ability that nobody less familiar with the national interests could have applied.

"With regard to the exhaustion of wood, oil and coal, the farmer will meet that. Congress has taken the first step in granting free alcohol, and this department is at work learning what can be done to develop its possibilities.

EXPERIMENT AT CANNERY.

"Chemists are working a big cannery in Illinois to learn how to produce alcohol cheaply from by-products of that business, and an expert has been sent to Europe to study and bring back supplies of seed for production of the big stock potato raised there for alcohol and stock food. It is not the ordinary edible potato we know, but will give twice the alcohol an acre.

"Still other experts are studying the uses of alcohol for heat and power. I have no uneasiness about the prospective lack of coal and oil.

"We will irrigate more. The government is doing what it can for the land which lies below the level of the ditch. But what of the land which lies above the ditch—to which water cannot be taken? Well, we are working still more for it. We are finding crops that will grow on it. We are searching the ends of the earth for them."

BOOKBINDER SUSPENDED.

PROMINENT UNIONIST RASH.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The Government Printing Office received another shake-up today, when Acting Foreman of the Bindery Ashion suspended Jacob Hale, a bookbinder and prominent officer of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

It was declared at the printery that dissatisfaction had been found with some of Hale's work. Friends of Hale, however, asserted that his suspension was due to a vigorous address made by him last night at a meeting of the members of the Bookbinders' Union who are employés of the Government Printing Office, in which they discussed the recent order of the Public Printer requiring binders to produce a greater output of work.

FISH OUTPUT INCREASED.

PACIFIC SALMON CULTIVATION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A preliminary statement made by George M. Bowers, United States Commissioner of Fisheries, to the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor of the operation of his bureau for the past year says that the aggregate output of fish from the commission's hatcheries during the year was 1,938,854,609, an increase of nearly 200,000,000 over the output of 1905.

The cultivation of the Pacific salmon affects, directly or indirectly, according to Commissioner Bowers, more people than any other branch of the work.

The quantity of salmon eggs taken and hatched by the bureau at its stations on the western streams was last year over 1400 bushels.

SHASTA VALLEY TO WAIT.

ENGINEERS TABOO PROJECT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The engineers of the Reclamation Service, who have made a survey to determine the advisability of the irrigation of the Shasta Valley from the Klamath River, have decided that it would not be wise to recommend consideration of this work until the Klamath project begins to return revenue.

The great cost of the Shasta work, estimated at $3,785,000, and the present state of the reclamation, have influenced the engineers in their decision. They also say that it manifestly would be unfair to the State of California to begin work which, for lack of funds, might not be completed for many years, when other work could be taken up and completed quickly.

PALMA CALLS SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS.

Neither Government Nor Railway Able to Communicate With Country Around Pinar del Rio—Guerra More Active.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HAVANA, Sept. 8.—President Palma tonight issued a call for a special session of Congress to convene September 14 and consider the disturbed condition of the country and measures for ending the situation. The President is weary of the complicated conditions and is anxious to divide the responsibility with Congress.

The principal features in the revolt today were attempts by the Eastern Railway to get trains toward Pinar del Rio and the advancement of an armored train, with machine guns and recruits to the country now occupied by the insurgents.

Wire communication both by railroad and government lines was cut repeatedly further east tonight, and neither the government nor the railroad is able to communicate beyond Passo Real, two miles east of Pinar del Rio City.

It is rumored the train which returned to Passo Robles Friday night started west from Paso Real, between La Herradura and Consolacion del Hur, it encountered insurgents, but the result of the engagement is not known. It is believed, however, that the troops train got through to the vicinity of Puerta Golpe, where two more railroad bridges were blown up this morning.

REINFORCED FROM HAVANA.

Four hundred more reinforcements left Havana to coöperate with the machine gun corps in an endeavor to reach Col. Avalos at Pinar del Rio, and another machine gun battery started for Santa Clara in an armed train, which is taken to indicate that the government does not overseriously regard the "unofficial" armistice. The government considers that the use of the word "armistice" would mean recognition of belligerency.

The veterans who are searching for a peaceful settlement profess that the Santa Clara and Havana insurrectionists are ready to quit and turn against Guerra if he does not show a similar tendency. But Guerra's conduct, and especially the attitudes of the Liberals in Havana, who supposedly are members and advisers of the revolutionary junta, preclude the probability that peace is at hand.

A permanent veterans' Peace Committee was constituted today. It includes Gens. Menocal, Nodrase, Cebreco, Reicio, Agramonte, Molinet and Padro and Col. Lazo.

The cigar and cigarette manufacturers and their 25,000 men and women employed in Havana are awakening to an appreciation of the consequences of there being no tobacco crop in Pinar del Rio. The number of persons more or less directly employed in the Havana factories, with their dependents, is estimated to approach 100,000. The factories use only Pinar del Rio and Havana tobacco.

CIGAR FACTORIES MUST CLOSE.

The Havana factories must, unless the insurrection ends soon, suspend work next summer for a year or more, or until the crop planted a year hence is available. It is claimed that the tobacco regions never were before tied up by an insurrection.

The Western Railway has received a telegram from Paso Real saying the band commanded by the Pais brothers was still holding up the armored troop train between Herredura and Consolion del Sur and that firing was continuing.

The Associated Press correspondent at Paso Real telegraphs that countrymen report that several skirmishes have occurred in that district. They say that Col. Avolos camped Friday night at Puerta Goipe and moved east today. The statements of the countrymen, however, have not been authenticated.

The Mayor of Guayabal, near Guanajay, has joined the insurgents. He was accompanied by seventeen Rural Guards, who deserted.

It is learned tonight that Speaker Freyre Andrade and Carlos Zenldo, ex-Secretary of State, strongly opposed the extra session of Congress, but that President Palma and the Cabinet insisted.

MORE BRIDGES BLOWN UP.

Two more bridges of the Western Railway were blown up last night, one of them situated twelve miles east of Pinar del Rio, thus cutting off railroad communication with that city.

There are large forces of rebels south and west of Havana, and rumors are current that it is their intention to attack the city, aided by rebels within.

A strong party of rebels is engaged in destroying telegraph lines near Herradua, thirty miles east of the city of Pinar del Rio.

Gen. Menocal said today that the leaders of the rebellion in the province of Santa Clara have intimated that they will negotiate for peace on the basis of new municipal elections, a national election, immunity for all insurgents and the appointment of a special commission to investigate the death of Congressman Villuendas, the national Liberal candidate for President, who was shot and killed in a fight with the police at Cienfuegos, September 12, 1905, and who is said to have been deliberately murdered.

When questioned regarding the rebels in Havana province, Gen. Menocal said they also had intimated that they would agree to practically the same terms, leaving the forces of Pino Guerra the only one in the field. Menocal declares that if Guerra did not agree to accept reasonable peace terms, all the rest of the country would be against him. Meanwhile, Guerra's attitude is increasingly warlike.

SAILS WITH WAR SUPPLIES.

HERRERA LEAVES SUDDENLY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Cuban government steamer Maria Herrera, which has been loading arms and ammunition at the foot of Forty-second street, South Brooklyn, this evening sailed, supposedly for Havana.

The vessel's departure was unexpected, as Aldemo, the Cuban official who was in charge of her, said Thursday that he would not leave New York before Tuesday or Wednesday next.

According to Acting Consul-General Antonio Altimira, she was to ship 800 tons of arms and other munitions of war. At noon today, scarcely one-fourth of her cargo had been put on board.

It was rumored that the sudden sailing of the vessel was to a dispatch from Havana, where an attack by rebels is feared.

Tomorrow the Locomotive Collision takes place at Agricultural Park.—Adv.

Missouri Will Make Formal Call on President.

Republicans Will Urge Reconsideration of Note.

Other States Are Expected to Join in the Move.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A formal call by the Republicans of Missouri upon President Roosevelt to reconsider his intention not to run for the Presidency again is expected at a meeting of all the county, Senatorial and Congressional chairmen at a meeting set for next Saturday.

State Chairman Neidringhaus issued the order for the convention of the chairmen today, and shortly afterward a member of the State Committee let it out that the meeting was to start a boom for the President which that gentleman could not down.

It is believed that a boom from this State, which has just swung into the Republican column, would have great weight with the President, and would start a general call by all the States. And it is also the belief of the wily chairman that a Roosevelt boom will help toward keeping the State in the Republican column this fall.

Each chairman and each secretary will be asked to have his county and district go on record in favor of the President's renomination.

Chairman Neidringhaus and his lieutenants express lots of confidence of carrying Missouri this fall. With the President as a drawing card they believe the party's chances of repeating the majority of 1904 will be improved.

HEARST HAVING TROUBLE.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE SCHEMES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Serious difficulties have been encountered by the managers of the Independence League over their plans to nominate W. R. Hearst at the State convention of the league to be held in Carnegie Hall Tuesday, leaving the remainder of the candidates to be named by a committee appointed after the Democratic State Convention has been held in Buffalo.

So pronounced has the opposition to this plan become that Hearst has taken personal charge of the situation, and yesterday attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the league, at which plans for the convention were discussed.

Desiring to perfect a deal with the Democratic leaders of the State by which they shall name Hearst as the head of the ticket, in return for which the league will indorse the remainder of the Democratic ticket, the leaders of the league have encountered unexpected opposition on the part of the minor leaders from the interior of the State, since their plans became known.

One of the arguments put forward yesterday was that unless the league obtained the indorsement of the Democratic convention, all hope of electing Hearst would be lost, as the league would have no share in the election machinery in the State, and its ticket could be counted out.

M'CARREN OFFERED BRIBE?

BOMB EXPLODES IN TAMMANY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That he received an offer of the Democratic nomination for Assemblyman, with an assurance that it could be made worth $10,000 a year, if he would support Edward J. Meany, candidate of Senator P. H. McCarren, for leader of the Second Assembly District in Brooklyn, was declared today by John J. Delaney, a young Democratic worker of the district, who made public a letter declining the offer.

Delaney said the offer came from Meaney and John S. Bennett, a lawyer, who went to his home by appointment and there said that if he would desert Judge John J. Walsh, the present leader, who has consistently opposed Senator McCarren, that he could have the nomination, which, as the district is overwhelmingly Democratic, would be equivalent to an election.

Bennett declared today that the entire statement had been made public for its influence on the primary fight, and that it was untrue.

MAY UNITE ON SULZER.

WARRING FACTIONS HOPEFUL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Efforts are being made by friends of Timothy Sullivan to unite the warring Democratic factions in this city on Representative William Sulzer as the candidate for Governor. Charles F. Murphy has been asked to support Sulzer as against William R. Hearst, and Mayor McClellan will be asked to drop Dist.-Atty. Jerome and turn to Sulzer.

The reason for this move is that Sullivan and his following in Tammany do not wish to take sides as between the Mayor and Jerome on one side and Murphy and Hearst on the other. If they cannot get a tentative agreement between the Mayor and Murphy, with Sulzer as the basis, then they will be forced to take sides.

"Big Tim" has always been a peacemaker in the Wigwam. Sulzer has a strong following in the East Side and hosts of friends up the State. It is said that many members of the State committee favor him and he will have a large block of rural delegates.

MAINE CAMPAIGN CLOSES.

LITTLEFIELD WILL WIN OUT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PORTLAND (Me.) Sept. 8.—The political campaign in Maine closed tonight. The election for four Congressmen, a Governor, State Senators, State Representatives and county officers will take place Monday.

The campaign, which has been the liveliest in years, has aroused national interest because of the attack upon Congressman Littlefield of the Second Maine District by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The outcome of the campaign against Congressman Littlefield is said to be awaited with concern by the leaders of several other States because of President Gompers's announced intention to campaign against Congressmen who refused to support labor bills.

Littlefield's friends tonight predicted his reëlection by a reduced plurality. His opponents are Daniel L. McGill of Lewiston, Democrat; W. T. Eustis of Dixfield, Prohibitionist; and Walter R. Pickering of Auburn, Socialist.

The candidates for the head of the State ticket are Gov. William Cobb, of Rockland; Cyrus W. Davis, of Waterville, Democrat; Henry Woodward, Prohibitionist; and Charles L. Fox, Socialist.

Among the speakers who have taken part in the campaign were Speaker Joseph G. Cannon and William T. Taft, Secretary of War; Senators Lodge and Beveridge and several Congressmen.

The principal closing rallies of the campaign were held tonight. At Ellsworth, Speaker Cannon and Senator Hale made addresses. Speaker Cannon shows the effect of making nine addresses in five days. He addressed a largely attended Republican rally in the City Hall last night. Mr. Cannon said that, so long as he was Speaker, he would prevent the passage of a measure advocated by Samuel Gompers. He also alluded to the return of W. J. Bryan to this country and said that evil results would attend his nomination and election to the Presidency.

SEYMOUR NOT CANDIDATE.

DIGGS GETS HIS WORD FOR IT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In spite of the fact that Senator Marshall Diggs has announced his candidacy for the Governorship on the Democratic ticket, a persistent rumor has attributed similar ambitions to Dist. Atty. Arthur M. Seymour.

Interviewed this morning, Senator Diggs said that he had refrained from coming before the public until he had arrived at a definite understanding with Seymour, but he and his friends visited Seymour at his house and had received his definite assurances that he was not a candidate and that he would not become one. Diggs had accepted these assurances in good faith and upon the strength of them had announced his candidacy.

It is only fair to say that the rumors connecting Seymour with the Governorship did not emanate from him but from some of his political admirers.

Journalist Publishes Card in His Paper Denying That He Has the Sorehead Because the Gubernatorial Nomination Did Not Fall to His Lot and Floors His Traducers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES, Sept. 8.—Editor George D. Perkins of the Sioux City Journal published a card in his paper today addressed, "To the newspaper fellows of Iowa, good, bad and indifferent," in which he makes a satirical denial of the charge that he is broken-hearted and sore-headed over his defeat for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The card says: "The doctor says there is no indication of a broken heart. In fact, the doctor says the heart is in good shape, better, perhaps, than might be expected, considering its years. There has been so much said about its being broken that it is a pleasure to know that the report is untrue. The doctor also examined the head for sores, and he found none.

"When one is feeling well and enjoying his work, it is unpleasant to be told that he should quit everything and go off somewhere. It is calculated to frighten one, and many people get sick just on fright."

The card is signed, "Uncle George," and is interpreted here as meaning that Editor Perkins is disposed to resent the freedom with which his case has been diagnosed since his defeat.

LOS ANGELES GIRL WEDS IN RUSTIC STYLE.

Goes With Her Preacher Father to Montana to Be Claimed as a Bride and Circulation of News of Approaching Wedding Causes Hastening of the Event.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Romance manifests itself in strange ways, but rarely does it have more picturesque culmination than is found in the unexpected marriage, or rather the marriage ahead of formal schedule, of Robert L. Henderson, cashier of the Bank of Kendall, Mont., and Miss Olivia A. Smith of Los Angeles, Cal.

Miss Smith, accompanied by her father, Rev. J. N. Smith, also of Los Angeles, arrived in Helena last week, the wedding arrangements having already been made for the home of the bride's brother. The groom arrived a few days ahead of the day selected and arrangements were made for a camping party to go into the mountains. The happy couple was to be members of the party as also was the pastor father.

Meanwhile news of the approaching wedding had quietly circulated among the friends of the bride and groom-to-be, which was entirely contrary to their wishes, and they consulted secretly. The result of the conference was not known to the rest of the party until the camp on Beaver Creek in the shadows of some majestic mountains to the north of Helena had been reached, when Rev. Smith was presented with a marriage license hastily secured that morning before leaving Helena.

The couple demanded that the wedding take place instantly. The entire party was taken completely by surprise, while the bride's father and brother realized that the joke was on them. They good-naturedly acquiesced, however, to the importunities of the romantic young couple and there around the camp fire in a wild mountainous country in the light of the setting sun, in their unconventional camp garbs, the marriage rites were solemnized.

Albert made his first ascent in a snowstorm, and during the siege of Paris was the first to leave the beleaguered city by balloon. Tissandier brothers did much to further the advance of aeronautics.

State Officials Accused of Sending Out Jobs.

The Strikers Meet With Rebuffs at Every Turn.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The discovery that Iowa officials have been sending Iowa printing and binding work to Chicago for completion because of the printers' strike in this city, has aroused the wrath of the Iowa State Federation of Labor and the Des Moines Trades and Labor Assembly.

Communications have been sent to Secretary of State William B. Martin by President Urick of the federation protesting against this action of sending $2000 worth of work to Chicago by Binder Howard Tedford on the dual ground that it deprives home labor of the work and that it is contrary to the Iowa statute.

The Trades and Labor Assembly under the Iowa statute will protest against the State paying the bill to the Chicago firm which is doing the binding work.

PRINTERS MEET REBUFFS.

The printers have met with nothing but rebuffs and discouragements since they inaugurated their strike and there is apparently no hope of their meeting with anything else in the future.

The protest against the sending of printing and binding work to Chicago is simply intended to compel the employers to make terms with the strikers in order that they may be able to do the State's work.

The strike has interfered somewhat with some kinds of work and in order to avoid delays and inconvenience the State has sent some of its work to Chicago, but the employers are getting on very well indeed on the whole and will not be bluffed into making concessions to the strikers.

Premonition That High Explosive He Had Compounded Would Finally Slay Him Was Strong Upon Expert Who Had Tempted Destroyer a Thousand Times by Detonations.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Premonition of death, it developed today, was strong upon Franz W. Wartenberger of this city, who was killed in Lynn, Mass., yesterday by the premature discharge of a high explosive of his own invention.

He died as he so often said he wished to die, and as he had felt ever since last April he would, and that was by the force generated from the destructive compound, which he himself had called into being.

He still bore marks of the accident which befell him last spring in his laboratory, in East Chester, on the outskirts of Mt. Vernon, and his recovery from the injuries which he then sustained was unparalleled in the history of surgery.

He had tempted fate a thousand times, and always with the air of a man who felt that the powerful agents he defied would one day slay him.

The Beit Brothers.

THE EASY-GOING BACHELOR, OTTO, HAS SUDDENLY BECOME ONE OF WORLD'S RICHEST MEN.

By P. M. Higgins.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 30.—By the death of his brother Alfred, Otto Beit, a bachelor, aged 50, becomes practically the richest man in England—certainly the richest untitled citizen. The fortune of the dead millionaire is conservatively estimated at any figure between $60,000,000 and $50,000,000, and as the bulk of this is left to his brother, Otto Beit must be regarded as the king of English men of wealth. It is lucky for Otto Beit that he had a brother possessing such tenacity of purpose—so keen, shrewd and enterprising—because if left to his own devices it is doubtful whether he would ever succeed in controlling [illegible].

There were no two brothers who [illegible] more widely different characters. In the midst of all his financial worries and excitements the late Alfred Beit was always devotedly attached to his own family and relatives, and when fortune came, he shared it liberally with them all. The happy-go-lucky disposition of his brother appealed to him, though he [illegible] one of the most matter-of-fact [illegible] who ever invested a dollar. "[illegible] enough to establish us [illegible] millionaires," he was once [illegible] at a convivial gathering [illegible] African millionaires. "Otto [illegible] might or might not [illegible] own fortune, but it is a [illegible] on the 'might not.' [illegible] the controller of a [illegible] something like that, [illegible] material in him for a [illegible]millionaire."

[illegible] man of method and [illegible] in everything he had. [illegible] Otto, on the other hand, [illegible] to take things easy and [illegible] slide. Perhaps it was [illegible] that his brother had accumulated sufficient wealth to supply [illegible] wants a thousand times [illegible] keep their old mother in [illegible] supplied with luxuries that [illegible] to incline more to the [illegible] and enjoyments of society [illegible] otherwise would. There is no [illegible] he shouldn't so far as his [illegible] concerned, for the old lady [illegible] at the family home [illegible] and finds apparently some [illegible] getting through with the [illegible] which it was Alfred Beit's [illegible] to secure for her.

[illegible] Alfred Beit saw the [illegible] of his own fortune laid, [illegible] all his confidences and the [illegible] investments with his [illegible] that Otto Beit developed [illegible] back in 1889 quite as [illegible] quite as unexpectedly as [illegible] become a multi-millionaire, though he has been now for [illegible] years personally acquainted with almost every detail of [illegible] brother's financial and industrial [illegible], he has taken but [illegible] share in directing or controlling them. His brother used him [illegible] a courier when important [illegible] relating to hurried finance [illegible] carried between London, [illegible] and South Africa. At [illegible] of the great firm of Wernher, [illegible] & Co., he was seldom seen. [illegible] heads of the departments, [illegible] his experiences of the two [illegible] said: "The governor, although humane and considerate [illegible] excessively exacting in all [illegible] relating to business. We always [illegible] a rough time of it when [illegible] the office at 9:30 or 10 in [illegible] and found him already [illegible] piles of correspondence. [illegible] Otto took his place, we [illegible] prepared for an evening [illegible] have what we liked in [illegible] cigars."

[illegible] not be right to say that [illegible] been a man about town, [illegible] foolish extravagances of [illegible]," but he likes the theatre, [illegible] hall and the opera, both [illegible] behind the scenes. Indeed, [illegible] suggested that if he married, he was sure to succumb [illegible] of some one of the [illegible] beautiful actresses who [illegible] ready to share his hospitality [illegible] or other of the restaurants [illegible] he is wont to entertain.

[illegible] new multi-millionaire is [illegible] the excitements of London, there is nothing [illegible] in his manner of doing [illegible]. He dresses with great care, [illegible] his late brother in abundance [illegible]. He carries sometimes [illegible] oxidized metal watch, to [illegible] a leather strap held [illegible] button hole by means [illegible]. He likes sport, from [illegible], billiard playing, to [illegible], and has now succeeded [illegible] racing stables in Germany, however, of no great [illegible]. His patronage of sport [illegible] of the quiet, unassuming [illegible] than of the senseless extravagance of the youth who has just [illegible] unexpected inheritance. [illegible], both at fashionable [illegible] at his private residence, [illegible] for the absence of [illegible] butterfly lordlings [illegible] sports. Every person [illegible] carry in his pocket a [illegible] character and respectability [illegible] Father Bernard Vaughan, [illegible] thundering lately against [illegible]. No one even in his [illegible] days ever accused Otto [illegible] with shady people. [illegible] for reading; his books [illegible]papers. He has not as [illegible] any particular inter[illegible].

[illegible] brother, Otto does not believe in early-to-bed and early-to-rise, [illegible] he does not saturate [illegible] wine and keeps in form [illegible] plenty of physical exercise [illegible] sleep satisfies him. A [illegible] in Hyde Park in the [illegible] is a luxury he never [illegible] in London. He and a couple of his dogs may be seen having their bath any morning during the summer months. In the choice of his food, he is peculiarly simple in his habits, and prefers a chop or steak to anything else. For this reason he has no distinguished continental chefs or cooks of European fame on his premises at No. 49 Belgrave Square. Incidentally, he inherits his brother's beautiful house in Park Lane, but it is understood that he is going to sell it.

When he has a dinner or a supper party at his house, all the food is supplied by a firm of caterers from outside. Cooking on the premises, he says, destroys the atmosphere of the place and encourages insects and microbes of every description. He is on terms of personal intimacy with the King and the Prince of Wales, and his house is one of the few in London where His Majesty visits to have a hand at cards and a game at billiards. While Alfred Beit was accumulating millions for himself and his friends, his brother Otto was cultivating the society of London's proudest aristocrats. One was the financier, the other the sprightly Bohemian courtier, and in this way the brothers succeeded in bringing together a variety of influencial forces.

Perhaps there was no man among the whole legion of English financiers to whom King Edward was indebted more for sound investments than to the late Alfred Beit. The knighthood conferred on his partner, Julius Wernher, was an indication of the relations that existed between the royal family and the late millionaire. Had Alfred Beit lived a few years longer he, too, would have gone a step toward the peerage. As matters stand at present, Otto Beit may live to enjoy the honor which his brother lost. But even his most intimate friends can't guess what he will do with all of the vast wealth that luck has thrust upon him.

Upon whom is Alfred Beit's mantel likely to fall? As the great banking-house of Wernher, Beit & Co. is now the leading firm in Europe operating in Africa, it is reasonably supposed that Sir Julius Wernher, Baronet, must take the lead in bossing South African finance. The fact is not overlooked, however, that he is well over 60 years of age, and that since South Africa began to cut such an important figure in the world's money, young men have been chiefly responsible for developing her resources. Rhodes, Jameson, Barnato, Joel and Beit were all young men and practically the pioneers of South Africa's activities—industrial, financial and political. There can be no doubt that Sir Julius Wernher will continue to control and direct the huge interests of the house with which his name is associated, but whether he has the capacity for "thinking in continents" which Rhodes and Beit displayed, is another story. He has not, it is said, the breadth of view of Alfred Beit. He is keen, shrewd and enterprising enough in finance, but when it comes to looking at things imperially—as Joseph Chamberlain would say—he is rather at sea.

Beit was as much at ease in manipulating millions as Wernher would be in dealing with thousands. Beit could compel attention where his partner would court resentment or perhaps invite defeat. There is no secret about the fact that Alfred Beit was mainly responsible for the millions which the firm has accumulated. Sir Julius, although described as a good-natured man is a rigid disciplinarian, but he is hardly the hustler that the activities and complex situation of South Africa demands. At the moment, however, he appears to be the only possible successor to Alfred Beit, not because he is a man of striking capacity or originality or initiative, but because his personal wealth and huge commercial and financial interests place him head and shoulders above any other multi-millionaire aspiring to fame or prominence in South African affairs.

There are other men whose names have loomed larger on the South African horizon than Sir Julius Wernher's, because they have interested themselves more in its internal affairs. They are Abe Bailey, Rochefort Maguire, ex-Parnellite M. P.; Max Neumann and Sir George Farrar. They are all millionaires, and they all pull many of the strings that control the Dark Continent, but they do not control the money that has fallen to the share of Sir Julius Wernher and his partners. They must, therefore, wait.

Personally, Sih Julius Wernher is one of the most modest men of wealth in London. He dresses more like a poor grocer than like a man of many millions. When he does not walk all the way, his traveling expenses to his office and back home never cost him more than 10 cents daily. He stands on the doorstep of his mansion in Piccadilly almost every morning when living in town to wait for the omnibus that carries him to the door of his office in the city. Like his partner he was punctual to the extent of being almost eccentric. If anything occurred in his home that might delay him in the morning beyond the usual time he would not go to the office at all that day. "The only way," he would say, "to encourage punctuality is to punish your staff and punish yourself." Eight solid hours' work at his office is his usual day. Frequently he does not go out to lunch, and then the office boys are heard to giggle among themselves that the governor must have brought sandwiches in his pocket from home that morning. Away from business, he enjoys life mostly as other men do. He smokes, drinks, likes a modest gamble and plays a good game of billiards. In this latter connection, it is said that he has the most luxuriously fitted billiard table in Europe. When it is pointed out that $35 to $40 is considered a good price to pay for the cloth on a professional match table, it is easy to imagine the luxuriousness of Sir Julius Wernher's table when the cloth cost $250.

Since his elevation to a baronetcy he has entertained on a lavish scale, both at his town house and at Looton Hoo Park, in Bedfordshire. Hitherto he confined his entertaining to persons in his own immediate circle, but now many of the best people in London are seen at his parties.

MURDERER COOK TRAVELS NORTH.

GETS FOOD FROM TRAVELERS IN THE TUJUNGA CANYON.

Lad Tells of His Journey from San Francisco and How Wife-Slayer Was Met as He Was on His Way Northward—Dispatches Are Sent to Officers for Capture.

"Three days ago I ate dinner with Fred Cook," was the startling statement made last night by Paul Kietz of No. 650 Antonio street, as he was being released from the City Jail. Kietz is a lad of 15 years and was held in the city prison on suspicion.

Kietz was arrested on San Fernando street by Patrolman Banks yesterday morning. The suspect was attired like a tramp and refused to tell Banks much about himself until he arrived at the City Jail. Then he confessed to having run away from his home last May. Kietz said that after leaving home he had made his way to San Francisco to see the ruins.

The lad was informed last evening that his father, J. Kietz, an employé of the Los Angeels Gas and Electric Company, was coming to have him released, and it was then that the youth began to tell the story that made the officers start.

The lad said that while tramping toward this city he fell in with a man and a woman traveling in a wagon along a road a hundred miles south of San Francisco. They inquired of him where he was going and he told them that he was coming to Los Angeles. As they were on their way to this city they invited the lad to ride with them.

Two days before they arrived here they camped for the night in the Tujunga Cañon. When dawn broke, the lad said that he was awakened by a strange voice. Rousing himself, he saw a man of medium stature and red hair shaking hands with his companions.

As the man said he was very hungry, the campers prepared food for him at once. He spent most of the morning about the camp, and about noon became nervous and said that he thought that he would be on his way. After holding a whispered conversation with the man of the party, Cook was given food and a large parcel was prepared for him to carry.

The last seen of Cook, according to to the lad's statement, was when he was making his way on foot along the cañon.

Young Kietz said that after arriving in Los Angeles he learned about the crime, and that from reading the descriptions of the wife-murderer in the papers he is convinced that the man he saw in the cañon was Cook. He said that Cook had food enough to last him for two days when he left the camp, and he believes that he went north.

The lad's statements conform to the views of the officers, and created much interest at the Central Station Steps were taken at once to notify the northern authorities that Cook had been seen going in that direction.

Although the local authorities have been searching diligently for Cook in this section, it is now the general opinion that he has gone North.

CABINETS TABOOED.

Spiritualists' Association Declares Against Means Encouraging Charlatanism.

The California State Spiritualists' Association, at its convention at Burbank Hall yesterday afternoon, fought long and hard over a set of amendments which practically established, by their adoption, the tenets of the faith in California.

Cabinet materialization and allied demonstrations, which the exponents of the conservative spiritualism maintain admit of opportunities for the practice of charlatanism, are, now tabooed by the sense of the resolution which precipitated the wordy war.

The gist of this declaration which was finally adopted, contained in a single sentence of the annual report of the president, Arthur S. Howe of Los Angeles, "Your president believes that ordination by this association should be granted only to those who can creditably present the philosophy or phenomena upon the rostrum, and that some definite rules covering the necessary qualifications—educational and otherwise—should be adopted."

The spiritualists, in their material forms, appear to be rather poor parliamentarians for the meeting yesterday afternoon, which was part of a three days' session which will close this evening, was conducted in nerve-racking confusion. The delegates were conversing all of the time that the chair was talking and while other speakers had the floor and impatient raps from the lavendar ribbon-decked gavel of the president were accompanied by frantic appeals for less confusion, and a little breathing space between arguments and nominations of electors from the floor.

The "truth seekers" talked informally to one another across the floor while deliberations were in progress and the chair was obliged continually to ask that one speak at a time. The close of the nominations was greeted with a loud whistle from one of the delegates.

While the incessant talking was going on the names of the candidates were placed on the board and balloted upon. From these names of people selected from various parts of the State the electors were chosen.

The evening programme included numbers by Mrs. Lettie Allen, Miss Freda Geitzer, Rev. G. E. Chesbro, Mrs. E. R. H. Stoddard, Mrs. Florence Robson, Mrs. A. Shaw and Miss Maud Chesbro.

For today are announced a conference at 9:30 a.m., conducted by C. V. Imeson, followed by a musical programme; for 10:30 a.m., lyceum exercises by children, and addresses; for 1:30 p.m., a programme of music, messages and addresses, and for 6:30 p.m., a musical and literary programme by the Young People's Society of Soul Development, Ralph Ulmer, president.

BEAT AND ROB VICTIM.

While Hewitt Street Man Is on Way Home Is Assaulted by Two Ruffians.

Without weapon, mask or any paraphernalia of highwaymen, two bandits held up and robbed Frank Roth of No. 106 South Hewitt street on South San Pedro street between Third and Fourth streets, last evening about 10:30 o'clock.

The ruffians knocked Roth down and kicked him in the abdomen. While in an unconscious condition the thieves secured $76, but overlooked a fine gold watch.

Roth was walking slowly along the thoroughfare towards his home, when one of the hold-up men stopped Roth and asked him for a match. Before he could answer the other man struck him in the face and forced him to the pavement. The other man kicked Roth and the two proceeded to rifle his pockets. After robbing Roth they ran north to San Pedro street.

NO DISTURBERS, THEY SAY.

Arthur Brown, William Armstrong and Field Blackburn were arrested at the Monarch skating rink near Fourth on Hill street last evening on a charge of disturbing the peace. According to the police the young men had been creating a disturbance and had become involved in a quarrel. The officers say at the time of their arrest the men were waiting to assault one of the skaters. It is understood that the defendants deny the charge and claim that they were attending to their own affairs. They were released on bail.

A SWEDISH MINISTER

Regains Health By the Use of Pe-ru-na After Three Years Illness.

September is the month of bowel diseases, typhoid fever and malaria. Catarrh of the bowels is very common at this time of the year. It produces the condition ordinary called diarrhoea. Catarrh sometimes affects the mucous membranes lining the bowels very extensively.

Catarrh of the internal organs predisposes its victims to malaria, typhoid fever and bowel diseases. Peruna prevents these autumn ailments by ridding the system of catarrh.

Good sound mucous membranes protect the internal cavities of the body from infection the same as the skin protects the outside of the body.

So many people have experienced relief from bowel troubles by the use of Peruna that there can be no doubt of the efficacy of Peruna in such cases.

Acute Malarial Complaints.

Mr. W C Rollins, Prairie View, Tex., Secy. State Normal and Industrial College, writes:

"For five years I was a victim of chills and fever as a result of acute malarial complaints.

"Peruna was recommended to me and after taking the first bottle I felt better, and after taking three bottles my appetite returned, I became stronger and the fever left me. I am now in excellent health."

A Case of Obstinate Chronic Diarrhoea.

REV. P. E. SWANSTROM

Rev. P. E. Swanstrom, Swedish Baptist pastor, box 228, Grantsburg, Wis., writes:

"I feel that it is my duty as well as a pleasure to let you know that I am perfectly well—entirely cured of chronic diarrhoea and catarrh.

"I thank you for your directions how to use Peruna and for your kindness to me.

"I have used Peruna according to your personal directions and I am very glad that I found a medicine which would cure me after three years' suffering."

Stomach Trouble After Typhoid.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, R. F. D. 2, Shelby, Mich., writes:

"I had a run of typhoid fever and was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without its causing distress and sour stomach.

"I consulted our physician. He said he did not know what I could do except being careful as to what I ate, and as everything I ate disagreed with me, that was not much consolation.

"I finally came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peruna advertised, I began taking it.

"It helped me soon and after three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble and can now eat anything."

The rational cure for stomach and bowel troubles caused by catarrh is the removal of the catarrh.

CAR HITS AUTO; HURLS FOUR.

Motor Car Party Is Thrown by Violent Crash.

Two Occupants Hasten Away from the Wreck.

High Speed Is Charged to Buzz-Wagon Driver.

Four of its occupants were hurled from the machine, the motor car was wrecked and a fender was torn from an electric car last evening about 8 o'clock at Eighth and Flower streets, in a collision between the automobile and east-bound Inter-urban car No. 844. J. Ellington and Miss Adelia Ellington, the names given to witnesses, were the injured auto passengers.

The driver of the automobile, it appears, was running his machine at high speed south on Flower street. Two Inter-urban University cars were running rapidly, and passed each other at the street intersection. It is thought that the driver saw the west-bound car coming and attempted to avoid it, but ran in the path of the east-bound car.

Mrs. D. Eastman, No. 341 South Hope street, was on the car which struck the horseless carriage. "Apparently the motorman of our car did not see the automobile," said Mrs. Eastman, "but several of the passengers did. The automobile was dashing down Flower street, and as we passed a west-bound University car on Eighth street, it loomed up a few feet in front of our car. There was an awful crash and the auto was hurled into the gutter on the south side of Eighth street."

C. H. Westcott says that he was on the front end of the car, and that the motorman reversed his current and made every effort to avoid a collision, but failed. He says that the fender of the car caught the rear of the auto and tossed it along, hurling out its occupants. The machine and the car, he says, were running very rapidly.

According to Mrs. C. W. Ball, No. 1506 West Thirty-sixth street, the occupants of the machine were thrown out. A young man and a young woman, attired in black, ran away from the auto, leaving two others, who appeared to be injured, on the scene.

One of the witnesses to the accident claims to have recognized Ellington, formerly a druggist at Temple and Spring streets, as one of the injured parties. The young woman, who gave the name of Miss Adelia Ellington to a witness, was badly bruised about the body, and her arm was badly lacerated.

As soon as a carriage could be procured from Pierce Bros.' undertaking establishment on Flower street, near the scene of the accident, the party was driven to the Good Samaritan Hospital. The hospital authorities claim to know nothing of the condition of the persons, and deny any knowledge that they called at the hospital.

Conductor Frank Gookins and Motorman T. Folley of the car say that they were not running at very high speed, and that they were using every precaution. Although the machine was badly wrecked, and the fender was torn from the car, it is thought that the impact was decreased by the fender, and saved the autoists from serious injury.

CONSUMED IN CANNERY FIRE.

Warehouse and Plant of Alaska Packers' Association Burn and Seven Perish.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—The steamer Nushagak, arriving yesterday from Bristol Bay, Alaska, brought news of the destruction of the Coffee Creek salmon cannery on Kvichak River by fire in the latter part of May.

The warehouse and the entire cannery plant, consisting of several buildings, besides the wharf and a lighter, was destroyed, and all within forty-five minutes.

In the ruins of the cannery building the following day the bodies of seven men were found, these victims presumably having been asleep at the time of the fire.

The Coffee Creek Cannery was owned by the Alaska Packers' Association, and was the largest in the Bristol Bay section, employing 250 men and boys, in addition to fishermen and other outside men.

A hearing on the matter of elevator allowances by various railroads will be held in Chicago September 17 by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The hearing is likely to develop some important features. It is known that the old complaint against the Peavy Company that it was being favored by the Union Pacific Railroad Company will be renewed at the hearing.

HURLS GEMS AS HE RUNS MADLY.

CRAZED BY WIFE'S DEATH, HE LEAPS FROM TRAIN.

Denver Restaurateur Escapes from Detective and Flees Wildly Across Arizona Desert, Scattering Valuables in Brush—Overpowered After Struggle and Brought to City.

John McCrary, a Denver restaurant man, crazed by the death of his wife, fled from a Santa Fé passenger train on the Arizona desert and as he ran threw away $800 worth of diamonds. Captured by trainmen and a special officer of the road, McCrary was brought to Los Angeles where Detectives Davis and Roberts met the train and took him to the Central Police Station.

McCrary's ride to this city will linger long in the memory of those who were with him. In Arizona his dementia was noticed. P. Rivera, a railway detective, was placed in charge of the man. A short time later Rivera had a desperate fight with McCrary in the chair car. With difficulty he subdued the madman.

Between Kingman and Hackberry, Ariz., the train was delayed by a washout. It stood several hours while workmen repaired the track. McCrary, apparently passive, nodded sullenly when Rivera bade him stay in his seat a few moments. The officer went forward to get a drink. As soon as Rivera was out of sight McCrary was on his feet, stealthily moving toward the door. He reached it: leaped from the steps and ran swiftly into the desert. The alarm was at once given.

Rivera, the engineer, the conductor and the forward brakeman followed the fugitive, who ran as only a madman can run. They caught him after he had gone about a mile.

During his flight, McCrary had opened two pocket books. A roll of bills was in one; in another $800 worth of diamonds. These he threw wildly over his head. The bills floated away in the wind. The diamonds fell among the greasewood. A small portion of the money—about $10 was recovered—also McCrary's gold watch and heavy Masonic charm. None of the diamonds was found. The insane man fought hard and was locked up in a lavatory. Yesterday he became quieter and last night gave the officers little trouble on his way to the station.

McCrary owns the Crystal Maze Chili Parlors in Denver and considerable real estate. From what he said to the officers it seems certain that his wife's recent death brought on despondency and then insanity.

ORMOND BEACH

THE FINEST BEACH PROPERTY ON THE COAST TODAY

Investment Features Supreme

If you have money to invest place it in Ormond Beach lots. An old port of call in the most picturesque cove of the coast, it is to the country north of Los Angeles what Long Beach is to the southern section. Equipped with large freight pier and immense warehouses, its commerce, already important, will develop faster than ever now. At the terminus of the Bakersfield & Ventura Railway the entire San Joaquin valley becomes tributary to it, swelling its commerce daily. As the chief point of interest on the new Santa Monica, Malibu & Ormond Electric Railway, now building along the coast from Santa Monica, it will soon become the play-ground for thousands who will enjoy the beauties of that scenic route and patronize the resort and amusement features of Ormond Beach. Lots are only $100 and upward now, without interest or taxes, but will be higher soon.

In Its Commercial Importance

Another full trainload of Los Angeles investors goes forward this morning. Every seat was sold before Friday night. Great crowds from the principal cities of Ventura and adjoining counties will also be at the beach today. Over $70,000 worth of lots were sold last Sunday without effort. Another train will be chartered for next Saurday. A nominal charge of $1 will be made, as usual, about one-fourth of the regular rate. Get ready and go next Saturday morning. Call early this week for tickets, so as to be sure of your seat, as we will not sell seats beyond the capacity of the train.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS HAPPILY ADJUSTED.

THE deadlock which has threatened to throttle the spirit of athletics among the colleges of Southern California was broken last night at the second meeting of representatives from Pomona, Occidental and the University of Southern California, held at the headquarters of the University Club on Hill street. Everything appeared to be "cut and dried," and the delegates followed what seemed to be a prepared programme. U.S.C. scored a signal victory.

When the committee broke up a week ago to meet again last night the members had spent hours wrangling on a point of eligibility which seemed to be the rock on which athletic relations between the colleges of the South must be sundered. When the question of the interpretation of the one-year residence clause was broached last night every delegate at once sat up and took notice.

There was a motion, and a short, sharp discussion, and then, to the surprise of several, the resolution bearing on this radical clause was railroaded with lightning-like rapidity. The committee voted to continue under the present agreement until September, 1907, at which time the famous new rule will become effective.

Prof. Sumner of Pomona, who had hoped to make the one-year clause effective this year, did not take part in the discussion, and allowed the action of the body to go unchallenged. It is understood the Pomona delegation decided to vote as it did in order to insure pleasant relations among the schools.

St. Vincent's and Whittier College were not represented last night, though it is said both schools intend to compete in athletics this year, and will enter under the agreement signed last year.

PERSIAN MERCHANTS WRATHY.

Appeal to British Legation to Have Revised Ordinance Signed and Put in Operation.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TEHERAN (Persia) Sept. 8.—The bazaars here remain closed and people once more are flocking to the British legation in protest against the delay in signing the revised ordinance proposed by the clergy, relative to the projected national assembly.

The clergy rejected the ordinace drafted by the Grand Vizier and submitted one of their own, to which the Shah has not yet assented. A crowded meeting of clergy and merchants yesterday severely criticized the procedure of the government.

The clergy advised a few days' patience, but the merchants and others decided to close up their businesses and proceed to the British legation, where they declare they will remain until the Shah signs the ordinance drawn up by the clergy, and exiles the late Grand Vizier and others who are opposing reforms.

Besides other places, he studied in Rome eleven years; hence he could not fail to learn Italian thoroughly, in addition to Latin, which he studied in the Roman college so famed for its Latin scholars.

Prof. Charles S. Durham, the accomplished Latin scholar of Cornell University, says of him: "I have met few men even in my circle of acquaintances in the universities of America, who have the linguistic ability and culture of my old teacher, Prof. Von Fingerlin, for whose talents I have a respect that increases as the years go by. His wide knowledge of the world and its ways makes a lesson under him something more than the accurate acquirement of a foreign tongue. His is the broader personal knowledge of the history, development and inner life of our European friends, and his language training carries with it a most luminating presentation of the civilization of the Latin and German races."

Prof. Fingerlin has held the chair of languages in many of the leading educational institutions of the South, and comes to the Methodist university directly from the University of South Carolina, at Columbia, S. C.

Besides the regular and advanced courses to be offered in French and German, Prof. Fingerlin will make a decided innovation in the local colleges by offering instruction, elementary and advanced in Italian, and it is hoped this new department will meet the needs of the musical public of this section, who may desire to receive coaching in Italian.

Prof. Fingerlin visited the university for the first time but a week ago and was so favorably impressed with the future possibilities of a strong institution that he almost immediately decided to cast in his lot with the university, and contribute of his best talents toward the upbuilding of a great university.

The new professor is expected to arrive from the East Tuesday, and will immediately make preparations to handle the classes at the opening of college next Monday.

KERN RIVER SUIT.

Kern Corporation Brings Water Action in Circuit Court Against Formidable List of Defendants.

The Kern River corporation has begun a water suit in the United States Circuit court, facing a list of defendants whose names fill half a typewritten page.

The action concerns property on the Beaty ranch and the Stavert place, in Kern county land owned by the Kern River corporation. The real action is based upon the Neill and Stavert ditch, and two cubic feet of water per second, supposed to flow through it.

The complainant alleges that large quantities of water were diverted unlawfully by certain of the defendants; that others of the defendants virtually aided and abetted the action, and that when the plaintiff demurred, the ditch was dammed so that even the "two cubic feet of water per second" could not flow through, thereby causing great loss to the ranch properties of the Kern River corporation through drought.

Defendant individuals are Joseph Cyrus, Andrew Brown, P. S. Brown, Emil G. Ross, Charles C. Taylor, H. L. Cook, Mamie Ross, W. G. Long, John Doe Vegas and James Doe Sweet.

The trustees of the Kernville school district are also named. They are Robert Palmer, Jr., W. E. Tibbetts and S. J. Rhymes.

Defendant corporations are the A. Brown Company, Miller & Lux, the Kern Land Company, the Farmers' Canal Company, the Pioneer Canal Company, the Buena Vista Canal Company, the Kern Island Irrigating Company, the James Canal Company, the Anderson Canal Company, the Stein Canal Company the Plunkett Canal Company, the James & Dixon Canal Company, the Joice Canal Company, the Kern River Canal and Irrigating Company and the Central Canal Company.

A blanket list covers certain unknown parties, named "A Doe, B. Doe, C. Doe, D. Doe and E. Doe."

The plaintiff asks a clear and sole title to the Neill and Stavert ditch, and perpetual enjoinment of the defendants from conspiring to interfere with the conduct of its water system or ranch property.

The Kern River corporation is represented by Bicknell, Gibson, Trask, Dunn and Crutcher.

PARADE BEATS ALLITERATION.

Forepaugh-Sells Circus, Coming Soon, Retains Street Spectacle and Drops the Language.

Circus day is again drawing nigh, for on September 23, the Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circus will be here for three days. They will open on a Sunday, which is rather unusual, as most circuses aim to travel on Sunday if it is possible.

The circus this year has as a feature a fire show called "Fighting the Flames," which employs full-sized apparatus and all the paraphernalia of a full department. But the real feature of the show is the street parade, always blessed because it doesn't cost anything.

Many of the circuses in the country have cut down this feature more and more, but the Forepaugh-Sells combine retains it. Perhaps they think they have evened up by omitting the glittering alliteration dear to the press agents' hearts. No more dare-devil death-defying delirium of delight dazzles into demonstrations of despair defenceless bill-boards. Instead the parade.

The parade is said to be three miles long. It would be joy to see it in Boston's crooked streets. If that parade wouldn't meet itself so often that it finally got to going in a circle, the leader ought to get a medal. Anyway, the parade is three miles long, and contains 500 horses, a wild animal collection of unusual magnitude, three herds of elephants, and many other features.

The little folks are not forgotten, and a special division of vehicles is included bearing Fairyland Heroes.

There will be two performances every day, one at 2 o'clock and one at 8 o'clock.

DRAMATIC COMPETITION.

Burbank School Inaugurates Play Writing Contest, With Production Guarantee as Chief Prize.

The Burbank Theater School of Acting will soon inaugurate a play competition, under the direction of Leo Cooper, that should be productive of lively and entertaining results at least.

The play is to be limited to a one-act study, open to all Southern California aspirants. The principal prize is a guarantee of public production, with small financial compensations in gold for first and second places.

The plays will be judged upon originality of plot, characterization and literary value, and general knowledge of stage technique.

Manuscripts must be in Mr. Cooper's hands not later than January 1, and the names of the judges will be announced later.

ALIEN LEAK FOUND.

Under-Steward of White Star Liner Arrested, Charged With Smuggling Undesirables.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] United States officers today arrested Tito Fogione, an under-steward of the White Star liner Romanic, in the officers' quarters, charged with illegally attempting to land aliens into this country.

Fogione is believed to be one of a gang that has been operating extensively for some time on Mediterranean liners.

The officers believe they have uncovered a conspiracy for the wholesale smuggling of undesirable aliens. Recently they intercepted eighteen stowaways, whom they found tucked away in the Romanic's lifeboats when she docked, all afflicted with various diseases.

POINT TO FIRE SERVICE NEEDS.

CRITICISM OF DEPARTMENT IN PASADENA.

One Engine is in Poor Condition and Has on Two Occasions Within the Past Six Months Failed to Do the Work Demanded of It—Horses Allowed to Escape from House.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Sept. 8.—That the fire department needs reorganizing is pretty generally admitted and probably some steps will be taken in the immediate future to secure better service. One great demand is for more apparatus and the territory which now has to be looked after cannot possibly be properly protected until at least two more engines have been secured. But there appears to be a lack of proper organization in the department and there is a feeling that all of the results that are possible even with the apparatus at hand are not being obtained.

Attention is called to the fact that the engine horses from the Dayton-street house were allowed to escape twice without a driver within ten days when answering fire alarms. The work of fighting the Valley Hunt Club blaze has also received considerable criticism and the suggestion has been made that the department might advantageously be given a complete overhauling.

The Dayton-street engine is not in the best of condition and it has refused to do the work demanded of it on at least two occasions within the past six months. When the new engine arrives it will be possible to have the machine overhauled and put in better condition and the suggestion has been made that it might be a good plan to inquire into the matter and find out why the engine is not in better condition.

OFFERS FREE CURE.

"Brother John," who claims to have the power of curing all ills by the simple laying on of hands, has sent out circulars calling attention to his powers and offering his services to all the needy, "without money and without price."

Modesty is not one of "Brother John's" virtues, whatever other good points he may have to recommend him, and he is not backward in urging himself as a healer of all ills, both of the body and the soul. One of the passages in his circular reads thus:

"I am divinely inspired to take a leading part in the coming great change which is to result in the realization of heaven on earth. I know of what Christ was thinking when he said, 'I have yet many things to say unto you but you cannot hear them now.' I am he whose coming Christ foretold thus: 'It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you.'"

"Brother John" prophesies that there will soon be a great change in the condition of things in this world and hints that when the change comes he will have a prominent part to play in making the arrangements. For this reason he calls upon all believers to come to him now and prepare themselves for the ordeal through which they will have to pass.

In addition to curing the physical ailments which frail man is heir to "Brother John" promises to cure any one, who comes with proper faith, of bodily weaknesses and vice of all sorts.

The man is apparently sincere in his actions for he not only does not demand any pay for his services, but he absolutely refuses to accept any remuneration. He has an attractive presence and, with the exception of his fanatical claims seems to be rational.

SIGNS LIGHTING CONTRACT.

The contract between the city and the Edison Electric Company whereby the company is to furnish energy for the lighting of the streets until the municipal plant shall be completed and in running order was received back from the company this morning, properly signed and legalized.

The terms of the contract were practically agreed upon before the document was presented to the City Council and the lighting service was allowed to go on without interruption although the time of grace allowed by the company had already expired.

When the City Attorney declared that the contract under which the street lighting was being done was null and void and that the Council had no authority to pay out any money for service rendered under it, it became necessary to enter into a new agreement at once in order that the street lighting might be continued.

The new contract may be terminated by either party by giving thirty days' notice. This will make it possible to light the streets from the municipal plant as soon as it is ready for service.

FAIL TO TRACE WOMAN.

All efforts to locate Mrs. Adelaide McClure, the domestic who disappeared suddenly from home Tuesday afternoon, have so far proved unavailing and the police are unable to suggest any solution of the mystery. Detective Schultz has been at work on the case all day, but this evening was forced to confess that he had met with scant success.

Rumors of women who resembled the missing one have flocked into the police station, but on being run down they have turned out valueless. A woman thought to resemble Mrs. McClure was seen in East Los Angeles yesterday morning, and for a while it was hoped that the missing woman had been found, but the hope was vain.

Mrs. Quee, sister of the missing woman, is prostrated with worry over the unaccountable disappearance of her sister and is making every effort to locate her. She does not put any confidence in the suicide theory, and thinks that her sister must have been taken ill somewhere. All of the acquaintances of Mrs. McClure have been communicated with, but none of them have seen the woman since Tuesday morning.

WILD GOOSE CHASE.

A very much excited woman telephoned to Humane Officer McAney this afternoon, stating that some small boys had tied a greatly-frightened little dog to a car track and left it there to be killed by the passing train. The humane officer hurried to the scene of the trouble, and found the mangled body of the unfortunate animal lying near the track. The woman claimed to have seen the proceedings, but was unable to give any description of the miscreants.

This evening, Mr. Deford, who runs a grocery store on East Villa street, called up Dr. Conger, president of the Humane Society, and gave quite a different version of the affair. He stated that the unfortunate dog was his property and was following his auto when it was run down by a car. As he was in a hurry he left the dog lying there, as he saw that it was dead, and went on to transact his business. Later he returned, thinking to bury the carcass, but in the meantime the woman had called up the humane officer. The officials of the Humane Society are now wondering whatever prompted their informant to send the officer off on his "wild-goose chase."

PASADENA SIFTINGS.

R. H. Allen was arrested by Detective Mulvane of the Santa Fé this morning and locked up in the Police Station charged with having stolen a bunch of tickets from a railroad station at Lamanda Park. The man emphatically denied his guilt and demanded to be released. He was taken before Justice Congdon, who allowed him to go after having put up $15 cash bail to assure his appearance in court when wanted.

No arrangements have been made for observing Admission Day in Pasadena, and, with the exception of the banks and municipal offices, all places of business will be kept open as on any other day. At the City Hall all of the departments will be closed, however, and all Police Court cases will be carried over until Tuesday morning. Legal holidays falling on Monday are much enjoyed by city employés, as it makes it possible for them to take from Saturday noon until Tuesday morning off duty.

Rev. Dr. Cherrington of Lamanda Park, will occupy the pulpit at the First Methodist Church tomorrow morning. In the evening Rev. Dr. F. D. Mather, pastor of the Lincoln Avenne Methodist Church will preach. On next Sunday morning Dr. Lamport will be back and will himself preach. Dr. Lamport, who has been at Santa Barbara for some time, is now at Santa Monica, and will return home during the coming week.

The Rev. Charles H. Hibbard, rector of St. Andrews' Episcopal Church, has returned from Lake Tahoe, where he has been for the past six weeks, and will conduct all of the services at his church tomorrow. Dr. Hibbard enjoyed his much-needed vacation greatly and returns prepared to take up the arduous work connected with the building of the new church with renewed vigor. Ground for the structure has already been broken and construction work will be rushed along as rapidly as possible.

Tomorrow the Pasadena baseball team will go to Los Angeles in order to try conclusions with the Hoegee Flags. The home players feel that they have struck a winning pace now, and are out in earnest after the pennant. The home team now stands third on the list of clubs with Nos. 1 and 2, tied, and the members feel that they have an excellent show to win out in the end.

ENTERTAIN IN HOLLYWOOD.

Outdoor Reception Charming Affair at Whitley Home in Foothill Town.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Whitley entertained this evening at a large out-door reception for which over eight hundred invitations were issued. The event was arranged on an elaborate scale and was carried out with the utmost attention to details.

The Whitley grounds, on Prospect and Wilcox avenues are admirably suited for out-of-door entertaining. This evening they were illuminated at every point. Gay-colored lanterns hung from fir trees and shrubbery and rows of glittering electric light lined each avenue of approach.

The big house itself was lighted from basement to attic and the rooms were fragrant with the heavy odor of roses massed on mantels and forming huge bouquets on tables and taborettes. Ahrends' orchestra was stationed on the gallery overhanging the portecochere. Below long tables were laid from which a buffet lunch was served by the Hotel Hollywood management.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitley stood to greet their guests on the vine-covered porch at the west of the house and with them stood George Hanna and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Jepson. Mrs. Whitley was lovely in a Paris gown of white French crepe, over a brocade silk under slip. The gown was accordion-pleated, and cut princess, with sweeping train. The neck was high with a bertha of rose point lace over soft pleatings of chiffon. The white gloves reached to the shoulder. Her jewels were amethysts necklace and pins. Mrs. Jepson was attired in a handsome gray silk costume with bertha of spangled chiffon.

Assisting about the grounds were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kays, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. S. Hammond, Dr. and Mrs. Alan Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Brokaw, Charles E. Boag, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Elliott, Rev. and Mrs. J. Arthur Evans, Capt and Mrs. A. B. Fitch, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Glass, Miss Glass, Roy Milner, Stanley Anderson, Ben Bogy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hanchett, Mr. and Mrs. Rodenhouse, Miss Elizabeth R. Knudsen, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. George, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. McJohnston, Mr. Kays, Miss Kays, Miss Elizabeth Fitch, and Miss Emma Fitch.

Several hundred people thronged the grounds during the evening. Two special cars and automobiles conveyed a large number out from Los Angeles.

Mrs. Whitley will spend the winter in Berkeley, where her son and daughter are in school.

VETERAN'S RETREAT.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Sept. 8.—General orders, No. 29, just issued, announce that "the following-named members upon their own application and representation that they are able to support themselves outside the Home, are hereby discharged: Marvin H. Conklin, James H. Deck, Reuben J. Elliott, Miguel Gilber, Urias Keeler, James Kennedy, Jonathan M. Miller, James McGuire, Eli Newsom, Isaac N. Robertson, Charles Tebant and James Williams."

The contract for a "carriage, wagon and implement shed" was yesterday awarded (subject to approval by the president of the board of managers) to Crookshank & Somers of Los Angeles for $1187. The plans for the building show it to be an open-front structure 104x25 feet in depth, intended as the title indicates to house the rolling stock and farm implements of the Home.

Extra-duty men and civilian employés were paid Wednesday for the month of August.

Sacred Concert.

A series of fortnightly sacred concerts are to be inaugurated at Church of the Unity, 925 S. Flower st., this evening, to alternate with lectures by the pastor, Burt Estes Howard; those taking part are Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Colby, Miss Beresford Joy and Messrs. Zinck, Bowes and Walper.

TEN NEW WELLS NEAR OIL SAND.

GREATEST NUMBER DRILLED AT ONCE IN WHITTIER FIELD.

Sudden Death of Mrs. A. J. Wilson. Good Financial Showing for New City Waterworks—Charming Social Event—High School Classes Elect Officers for Present Term.

WHITTIER, Sept. 8.—The summer months just past have witnessed an increased activity in the Whittier oil fields, and the concensus of opinion among oil men, seems to be that better days are at hand for the producers of crude oil. The local field for each of the three months just over has averaged nearly 100,000 barrels—a production which might be largely increased, did market conditions warrant it. At the present time ten wells are being drilled, a number of which are in or near the oil sand. The Murphy Company has preparations made to put down two new wells. The Central company is building the rig for one new one on their property, and the Turner company will soon start drilling operations for two.

MRS. WILSON'S SUDDEN DEATH.

This community was deeply shocked today when the message went over the city that Mrs. Allan J. Wilson, one of the most popular young matrons of the place, was dead. Only yesterday Mrs. Wilson was greeting her friends on the street, in the best of health. Last evening she was taken ill with symptoms of ptomaine poisoning, but her condition was not considered serious until this morning. Then everything possible was done to counteract the effect of the poison, but without avail, and the end came about 3 o'clock this afternoon. The cause of her death, according to specialists who were hurriedly called to the aid of the family physician, was clearly ptomaine poisoning, but from what source is entirely unknown to the family. No canned goods had been used, and no other article to which it could be traced.

Mrs. Wilson leaves two little children, Marion, 2 years old, and Jean, aged 5 months, a widower, two sisters, Mrs. Crawford of Los Angeles, and Miss Black of Berkeley, and a brother, Mr. Black, who recently came to Whittier to make his home.

No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral services.

WATERWORKS SAVES MONEY.

The city water department officials are rejoicing over the showing being made by the big new plant lately installed by the city. Last month several hundred dollars in operating expenses was saved to the city treasury, the capacity of the new plant making the night shift unnecessary, while the citizens, for the first time in many months, had the right to use all the water they wished on lawns, trees and gardens.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Miss Geneveive Charles was the hostess at a charming gathering of maids and matrons on Thursday afternoon, the occasion being denominated a "parcel shower." The guests of honor were Misses Susie Reynolds and Ethelyne Hutchins, both of whom will become brides within the next month. The affair was held at the home of Mrs. F. H. Hadley, sister of the hostess, and the pretty rooms of the dwelling were artistically decorated for the occasion.

The two upper classes at the High School have elected officers as follows: Fourth-year class, Howard Way, president; Miss Wood, vice-president; Miss Gray, secretary; Miss Tabor, treasurer. Third-year class: Mr. Buckmaster, president; Miss Fensome, vice-president; Miss Cox, secretary.

LOG ROLLING BY WOODMEN.

ANNUAL OUTING OF MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA.

Parade and Regimental Evolutions Held the Crowd—South Los Angeles Team Wins the Banner—Other Sports Create Good Interest Among Contestants.

PLAYA DEL REY, Sept. 8.—The seventh annual log rolling contest and seaside outing of the Modern Woodmen of America attracted a large crowd of excursionists to this beach today. The weather was ideal as marking the blending of summer into the days of autumn and served to unite the two seasons.

Upon arrival at the beach the morning hours were devoted to the parade and regimental evolutions on the newly-prepared athletic grounds facing the amphitheater. These uniformed exercises were participated in by the members of the Third Regiment, under command of Col. Harry Morgan, assisted by Major-Surgeon L. D. Jones, Adjt. B. H. Mobley, and Quartermaster R. B. Kimball. The officers of the First Battalion were: A. M. Newton, major; Claude Johnson, adjutant. Second Battalion, T. E. Mills, major; C. A. Williams, adjutant; Third Battalion, C. J. Stoneham, major; J. B. Green, adjutant.

Following a picnic luncheon on the sand, the uniform drill contest entertained the crowds.

In the pony class drill, for twelve-men teams, Lordsburg carried away the flag, defeating Pasadena.

The junior class drill, for teams of sixteen men, was won by San Diego against Garvanza.

The senior class drill, for teams of sixteen men, was between the Golden State and California Camp teams of Los Angeles. The trophy cup was awarded to the former.

The trophy banner, offered for the most efficient drill team of Royal Neighbors, was won by the South Los Angeles team, over the California Camp delegation.

A programme of athletic and sporting events held the attention of the crowds during the afternoon hours.

The 100-yard dash for men was won by John Laspada of Pasadena.

Mrs. Jessie Parkhurst of California Camp, Royal Neighbors, won the 50-yard dash for women.

Clarence Bach was the victor in the 50-yard dash for boys, and Louise Carroll carried off the honors in the girls' race.

C. Johnson of East Los Angeles outran everybody in the half-mile race for men.

R. Burnar of Golden State Camp ran away from all of the other fat men in the 25-yard dash, and then turned around and won first prize in the wood-chopping contest.

In the wood-sawing contest the first award went to J. E. Limor of East Los Angeles.

The half-mile relay race was won by Garvanza's four sprinters.

The 200-yard relay race for four-member teams of Royal Neighbors was won by California Camp.

In the tug of war for a trophy cup, Garvanza's eight heavyweights outpulled California Camp's strong men.

The visitors spent the evening in dancing and skating and enjoying nail-driving contests for men and women. Prizes were awarded in these events and much interest was evinced.

The annual picnic is conducted under the auspices of the Southern California Log Rolling Association. This organization held the annual meeting here tonight, and arranged for next season's outing by the election of the following officers: William E. Ross of Pacific Camp, president; Harry E. Morgan of Pacific, vice-president; J. B. Green, secretary; G. M. Guzman, treasurer.

Many people are apt to doubt the fabulous value of RADIUM, and to such I can only point to the extract from the Tulare (California) Register, which appears as a part of this advertisement, in which RADIUM is referred to as worth $12,600,000 per pound. Since the appearance of this article the price of RADIUM has been lowered some, but it is still quoted at a figure that makes it prohibitive for the general treatment of disease. And that is why you have never before been offered RELIEF BY RADIUM.

[Extract from The Register, Tulare, California.]

A Speck of Radium Arrives in this City

Dr. Root, of the firm of Keniston & Root, a medical supply house of Los Angeles, was in Tulare today and exhibited a particle of radium to the doctors and others interested. The piece of radium the doctor had with him was indeed a small piece, so small, in fact, that it had to be magnified 400 times before it could be seen with the naked eye. The radium was placed in a spectroscope and when placed in a dark room it gave off a white light, which appeared to be about the size of a cat's eye, and on placing it close to the eye the little rays were plainly visible. On first entering the dark room with radium nothing can be seen, but after about two minutes, when the eye becomes accustomed to the darkness, the light becomes visible. The amount of radium the doctor had with him was valued at about $20. When it is known that the commercial value of this article is $12,000,000 a pound, an idea can be gained how small the piece exhibited here was. Radium not only gives off light, but heat. The Doctor says that it is his opinion that dwellings will be heated and lighted entirely by this means within a few years.

In this connection the following dispatch of a recent date will be of interest:

L. D. Gardner, an importer of radium, with offices in the Temple Court Building, gives out the startling news that the price of radium has increased $4,200,000 a pound in two days. The commercial rate last week was $8,400,000, now it is $12,600,000. Mr. Gardner believes the rate will be higher. "By April 1st," he says, "it will be almost impossible to buy radium at any figure. Bohemia has forbidden the exportation of pitchblende because the government discovered that this industry was interfering with the Bohemian glass industry. That edict prohibits the radium manufacturers in Paris and Hamburg from obtaining the uranium ore, and thus, until new discoveries are made, there will be no radium made."

NEW CITY'S FATHERS MEET.

HUNTINGTON PARK, Sept. 8.—One of the first meetings of the Board of Trustees of this new municipality was held Thursday evening at the residence of Dr. L. Weber. The question of the construction of a city hall, to be used jointly as a temporary schoolhouse, was discussed. The question of a legal adviser to the board was considered, and a committee, consisting of Dr. Weber, W. Glass and C. J. Johnson was appointed to wait on J. H. Foley of Los Angeles. The meeting was adjourned to Wednesday.

ALL IS READY

For the Locomotive Collision.

The big locomotive smash-up to be given at Agricultural Park Monday afternoon promises to surpass anything ever attempted in the amusement line.

The locomotives, weighing over 160,000 pounds each, have been running over the mile track the past few days. The public will be admitted free today (Sunday) to see the locomotives try out.

The gates will open on Monday at 1 o'clock and until the collision takes place at 3 o'clock Donatelli's band will play.

NOVEL EXIT FROM COURT IN LONG BEACH.

Defendant Accused of the Slaying of Belden Gets a Month in Which to Prepare for Preliminary Examination—School Board Is Hard Pressed for Room for Pupils.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 8.—Attorney Earl Rogers, engaged to conduct the defense of W. T. Wilson, charged with the murder of Wallace B. Belden, whom he thought had misused his stepdaughter, Nathalie Herrin, secured a month's delay today in the preliminary hearing, thereby allowing the feeling against the defendant to subside.

Wilson was brought down from Los Angeles this morning. He sat sullenly looking into the eyes of a hundred curious spectators and not a muscle twitched. Saving for the loss of some color, he appears the same Wilson who was arrested a month ago for exhibiting a deadly weapon, cool and collected, except for a far-away look in his pale blue eyes, which never rest for more than an instant on one object. His only movement was the crossing and recrossing of his feet, and a patting of one foot on the floor and the constant chewing of a toothpick. Mrs. Wilson came early, with her brother, and seeing her husband, hurried across to his side and kissed him.

When Justice Downing, who is presiding in Justice Brayton's court, called the case, Attorney Rogers asked for a continuance. He said that Monday will be a holiday and he wished to leave Sunday night for a rest. Deputy District Attorney Donnell, whose vacation will begin Tuesday, said he was willing for a continuance, and so was Attorney Lawson, who is assisting the State. Justice Downing, therefore, continued the case until October 1. Most of the spectators dispersed, but hung about the door of the courtroom, waiting for a glimpse of Wilson, who escaped them by being taken out the back way and down a swaying ladder, which was held in place by Deputy Marshal Folsom, while Constable Lynn and Wilson climbed down, and hurried through alleys to American avenue, where a car was boarded for Los Angeles.

SEASHORE NEWS POINTS.

A boy named George Siegert, who says he is from Watts, was arrested yesterday with a small hand satchel containing a watch, revolver, fob, two knives and a ring, which he claimed to have bought from another boy. He had sold a pretty gold watch for 50 cents, which led to his arrest. He was released today, and sent home, but the Marshal retained the plunder until Siegert's ownership can be investigated.

The grammar schools of Long Beach district will open Tuesday morning. Indications are that the school board will have a hard time arranging for room. The schools have a seating capacity of 3040, but new districts will have to be arranged to avoid overcrowding of some of the buildings.

Local merchants last night effected a temporary organization by electing W. C. Smith chairman and W. H. Nielson secretary. A committee of four, Messrs. Pascoe, Wise, Wright and Neilson, were appointed to draft bylaws and an adjournment was taken until next Friday.

Capt. Art Paschall of the launch Eagle attempted to harpoon a sleeping sunfish yesterday, but the blade glanced off, throwing the end of the pole into the captain's face, cutting a gash on his nose just under the left eye.

Mrs. T. P. Ham, aged 85, fell last night and dislocated her right shoulder. Because of her age the injury [illegible] a serious one.

Henry P. Barbour was on [illegible] streets this morning, debonair [illegible] ever and greeting old friends with his old-time cordiality. He expressed his astonishment at the progress [illegible] Long Beach and reiterated his faith [illegible] the inner harbor project, which [illegible] started.

Last night he arrested [illegible] violators of the ordinance, [illegible] caught them on Holt avenue, and [illegible] was fined $5.

HELD BY FROG AND KILLED.

Switchman's Body Severed in Twain as Result of Singular Mishap.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Engine Foreman James Lough, one of the most capable railroad switchmen in the West, met a shocking death in the Santa Fé yards here at an early hour this morning. He caught his shoe in a track frog, and, being unable to free himself, was run over by a train, the trucks cutting the body completely in twain. He had gone between two cars of a moving train to uncouple them, the coupling lever having failed to work. The engineman and fireman saw the car lurch which was to be cut off, and supposed the train had jumped the track. Not seeing Lough quickly, they stopped the train, and, investigating, found the severed body, Lough's foot still being held like a vice in the frog. It was necessary to unbolt the rails before the foot could be removed. One of the peculiar features of the tragedy is that Lough was a roommate of Switchman Allison, who was mangled in the yards last week.

Try Coronado and be healthy.

SANTA ANA'S BUILDING RECORD.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 8.—September promises to be a record breaker for the city of Santa Ana in the building line. Up to the present time there have been eleven permits issued by City Building Inspector H. H. Roper, which is in excess of one a day. The most notable among the permits is one for a one-story cobblestone cottage, which is estimated to cost $2500. This will be erected at No. 403 Walnut avenue for H. E. Carter. William Keseman is excavating for a one-story brick building on his lot south of the Odd Fellows' Hall on Main street. It will cost $1500.

The prospective groom was only 19 and it was necessary for the young man's father to accompany him on his mission to the Courthouse, and give his written consent to the marriage. The young man and his bride-to-be are popular young people from the northwestern end of the county. The wedding will take place Sunday evening at the home of Miss Durier's uncle, Charles Damron, at Cypress. Charles W. Sanford and Lillian I. LIVE FIVE YEARS IN ZONE OF ICE.

PHYSICIAN AND WIFE SEE NO TREES FOR LONG PERIOD.

Only White People on Island in the Bering Sea, Where Steamer Comes but Once a Year—Employed by the Government to Care for the Eskimo Indians.

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 8.—After being isolated for five years in a drear region of perpetual ice, treeless and desolate, Dr. and Mrs. E. O. Campbell of Goleta have returned to the home of Dr. Campbell's father, D. W. Campbell, at Cathedral Oaks in this county.

Dr. Campbell is in the employ of the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior and during the period named he and Mrs. Campbell lived on the bleak island of St. Lawrence in the Bering Sea, 200 miles north of Nome and forty miles from the Siberian coast. They will return to their post next July.

Dr. and Mrs. Campbell were the only white residents on the island, the rest of the population consisting of 279 Eskimos. The Campbells were in charge of the island affairs, looking after the welfare of the Indians as medical missionaries, educating the children, and caring for invalid adults. They received but one mail a year, that being brought by the revenue cutter carrying stores.

"From the 25th of August, 1905, until the 15th of July last," said Dr. Campbell today, "we received no news from the outside world. When we landed at Nome on our way out, we found five sacks of mail waiting for us. The Eskimos on St. Lawrence Island are unlike the Alaskan Indians. They are more like the Siberians, and they speak the Siberian language.

"Domestic reindeer are being introduced from Siberia, and there is now on the island a herd of 253. As the herd increases, the price of meat becomes lower. Meat was worth $1 a pound there several years ago, and is now worth 25 cents a pound. The reindeer do well on the island, as there is much moss; but the long, cold winters are trying. There can be no agricultural production there, and we did not see a tree for five years, until we reached Vancouver."

VENTURA YOUTH TENNIS VICTOR.

VENTURA, Sept. 8.—Walter Argabrite is now the tennis champion of the local High School, yesterday defeating Neill Sheridan, who had reached the finals by defeating John Reppy. Argabrite had previously defeated Flint, one of the school cracks of last year. In the game with Sheridan the new champion showed excellent work and won out by the one-sided score of 6-0, 6-0. According to the rules of the tournament, Argabrite will have to defend his title right along during the school term, but he is considered equal to it. He will probably be the selection of the school for appearance at the Ojai games in the spring. He will also be the school representative in the series of games to be inaugurated between the high schools of this county and Santa Barbara county.

The County Clerk's office was the scene of a wedding today, when Jesus Contreras Ramirez, 26, was married to Rosa Valenzuella, 15, both of Saticoy. Clerk Farrand, Cupid Knox and a newspaper man were the witnesses to the ceremony, which was performed by Justice of the Peace Beling.

It is stated the Board of Supervisors will pass up the proposition to build the Saticoy bridge to the people, who will be asked to vote bonds for the building of the structure. It is estimated the bridge will cost something like $150,000, which is thought too large a sum to raise by direct taxation during the same year as money is raised in the same way for the building of the two other bridges. The county has no bonded indebtedness.

There will be a baseball game in this city on Monday afternoon between the High School team and the Native Sons' team.

COMPROMISE BLOWS UP.

Amount of Whitewash Not Satisfactory Then Creditors Interfere in General Securities Co.

The affairs of the Tempered Ductile Metals Company have taken another turn, and the neatly-arranged compromise has blown up. Fight, pure and simple, seems to be the further order of the day. The disgruntled stockholders have determined to go ahead with their suit to oust Jacob Meyer and William V. Holley, officers and directors of the company. Civil suits are not enough now. Several sections of the Penal Code are mentioned in connection with the attacked officers, and various stockholders do not hesitate to make serious charges.

A complete and satisfactory compromise was arranged Friday, by which Holley and Meyer agreed, through Theodore Martin, their attorney, to return 316,000 shares of stock, resign as officers and directors, and make several other concessions. In return the stockholders assumed certain obligations, and also agreed to appoint an Investigating Committee to look over the books of the General Securities Company, of which Holley and Meyer are the heads. This committee was to be as lenient as possible.

The first ruction yesterday came when the committee made its report. The report was mild, and amounted to a coat of whitewash for Holley and Meyer. But Meyer wanted a full bath, and trouble started. Finally about a coat and a half was agreed on by both sides.

But further trouble for the metals stockholders appeared. When they went to the office of Meyer, they found experts from the Wholesalers' Board of Trade at work on the books. The General Securities Company apparently has various bits of trouble on hand. It owes, according to statements made last night, several sums to various merchants for supplies used in connection with the San Bernardino mine it is running. Of these one is $2000 to J. R. Newberry, the grocer.

Suddenly Meyer last night repudiated the agreement he had made the night before and absolutly refused to accept the compromise which had been prepared. Attorneys for the stockholders stated last night that this action was due to the demand of J. R. Newberry that the assets of the General Securities Company be not reduced until some action was taken with regard to the various creditors represented by the Wholesalers' Board of Trade.

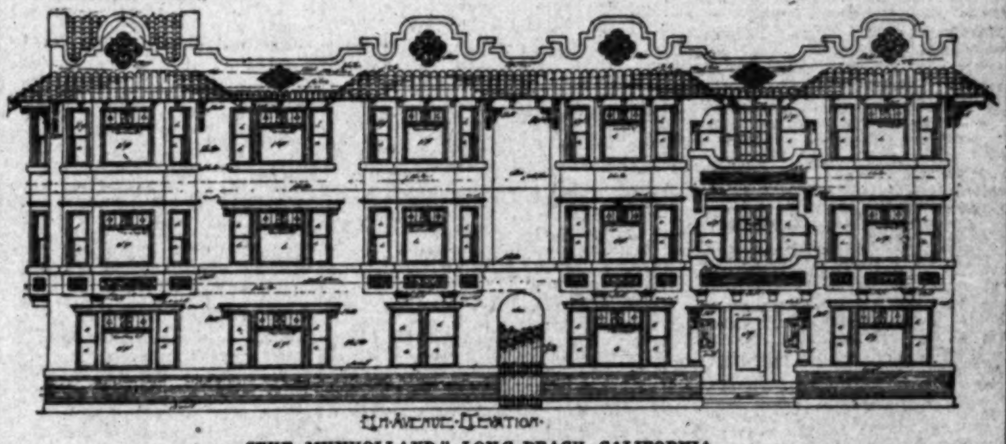
Meanwhile a deputy is sitting in the factory of the metals company, which is under attachment. He seems to be the only contented man in the bunch.

"THE MUNHOLLAND"

Large Apartment House at Long Beach to Be Equipped with Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds

General Use of Our Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures Assures Comfortable Homes For Renters

"The Munholland" is the name of the large and striking Apartment House of which the accompanying illustration is an exact likeness. It is now being erected at the corner of Ocean and Elm avenues, Long Beach, California, and as shown by the illustration, will be a most imposing structure when completed. It is owned by Messrs. Munholland & Son, and its construction is under the supervision of Architects Train & Williams of this city and Long Beach, who also designed the same. "The Munholland" is modern in every respect, and reaches its highest point of perfection in its equipment of Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds, which will be installed throughout the entire building.



"THE MUNHOLLAND," LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA.

In this building Long Beach will have another new and much needed Apartment House, and the many added conveniences which the Marshall & Stears Company's Patented Wall Beds afford to any building in which they are installed, make the outlook for an always "full house" at "The Munholland" most promising.

In fact, any Aparment House, Hotel, Flat Building or any kind of a structure erected for renting purposes and equipped with the Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds, is assured of good, steady tenants, and, as a rule, a waiting list of applicants.

The Added Conveniences the Cause

The direct cause of this demand for such apartments, rooms and flats, is the many added conveniences and comforts which our Patented Wall Beds and other Fixtures give to each room in which they are installed. They not only add all these necessities for an easy and comfortable life, but they also add homelike conditions and surroundings, and take from the housework its hardships and long hours of toil. In fact, they cut the housework to less than half of what it would be in just twice the same number of rooms, built without our Patented Fixtures. As a result of this, the housewife is better satisfied and far more contented.

Our Patented Fixtures Are Money Makers

Besides being satisfactory in every way and in demand by the renting public, our Patented Fixtures are of equal benefit to the investor and builder of such buildings, and from a financial standpoint, are wonders.

By their use, the builder or investor can construct twice the number of rooms on a given sized lot than he can without them. This means an income from the building of twice, or even more than twice the amount, should he build under the old system. This is something to think about, and when we say that you can construct this building with its increased number of rooms for a very small per cent. over the cost of the old-style building, we give you food for additional thought.

Come In and See For Yourself

We want every builder, investor and in fact every one who is in any way interested in, or connected in any way in building construction, to come in and see a practical demonstration of the above facts for themselves. We have erected a cottage and a model suite of rooms for demonstration purposes and we want to show everybody through them.

We especially invite the ladies to call and look through this cottage and rooms. It will prove a pleasant visit to you.

from $20 to $30 Each

Possibly you may be interested in, or prefer to sleep in a TWIN WALL BED. If so, WE MAKE THEM. While Twin Wall Beds are no innovation in the Wall Bed Business, there has been practically no call for them since the Marshall & Stearns Company perfected their now well known and popular line of Patented Wall Beds. Yet, should you desire to install a single, or Twin Wall Bed in your home, or in your rooms in your Apartment House, we can furnish them to you. Our Twin Wall Beds embody all the lasting qualities of our full size beds and are equipped with the same make springs. We make these beds to order at from $40.00 to $60.00 for the two.

Perspectives and Floor Plans

We have compiled a beautiful 96-page Booklet, printed on high grade book paper, with cover, entitled: "PERSPECTIVES AND FLOOR PLANS OF MODERN APARTMENT HOUSES, HOTELS, HOMES AND COTTAGES EQUIPPED WITH MARSHALL & STEARNS COMPANY'S PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES." There are many valuable suggestions in the Perspectives shown in this Booklet, and especially in the floor plans, which are drawn in detail and afford much general information as to arrangement of floors, rooms, etc., in connection with our PATENTED FIXTURES. It is brimful of practical designs for Cottages, Homes, Apartment Houses, etc. Every one should have one of these Booklets, which we will mail to any address upon receipt of 10c to cover cost of mailing, etc.

The House Ideal

which illustrates and describes in detail our PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES, contains many facts and much food for thought in connection with buildings of all kinds for living purposes. Hotel owners, managers, capitalists, architects, contractors and builders of and investors in Apartment Houses, Hotels, Homes and Cottages, should send for a copy and study its contents. It tells you how to best construct your building for your tenants as well as for yourself. It tells you how to reduce the cost of construction and how to increase your income from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent. IT IS MAILED FREE UPON REQUEST. SEND FOR A COPY TODAY.

NOTICE—The Marshall & Stearns Company's WallBeds and other Fixtures are fully covered by patents. We own and control the basic patents for any kind of a Wall Bed which closes into a closet or recess prepared for same. Any infringement upon these patents, either by manufacturer, purchaser or user, will be vigorously prosecuted.

DEMOCRATS "PASS" ON TO CONVENTION.

HAVE a pass! Oh please have a pass! I insist upon your having a pass!

But the virtuous Democratic delegate to the State convention at Sacramento shook his head energetically and looked shocked—at least it is said that some of them did—and Martin Betkouski actually paid out good money for his ticket—which the Espee just hated to take.

Anyway it was a subdued bunch of Democratic delegates headed by Chairman Ona W. Morton, who took the 11:30 Espee train North last night for the State convention, with the Democratic candidate for Governor, and for two-cent fare per mile on the Espee and other roads.

There was no banner attached to each pass handed out to the Democrats, but they will be "treated right" en route, and the colored porter has promised to be Espe(e)cially humble during the trip.

Altogether there were thirty-five delegates from this section, and nearly every man of them just had to fight to escape accepting one of those hated Espee passes.

Of course it wasn't their fault if the Espee handed out the said passes, and it's American human nature to hug a pass to one's bosom and think you're getting the best of the Octopus.

But the passes were there—any quantity of them—so were the delegates when the train pulled out of the Arcade station. But bless your innocent soul, not a delegate present showed a pass!

There are times in the strenuosities of Democratic politics when a pass don't look good—even to the Democratic boss, Mr. Herrin—of course Mr. Herrin would pay his way and spurn a pass with the same virtuous indignation with which the Southern California delegation has publicly marked its disapproval of Espee passes. Democrats, you know, are Democrats.

And so the delegation got well started with badges and the pass—excuse me, passengers—were all pleased at the harmony which prevailed as they all made a dive for their lower berths—and who ever heard of a real pass carrying with it the privilege of a lower berth?

Somebody—who had paid his way—shouted out in the enthusiasm of his artless soul. "Who-o A-are We-e? Who-o A-are We-e?"

There was no response, though someone—who was asserted positively was NOT a delegate, answered with the countersign:

"We're the boys to make the noise and spificate Espee."

By the time the train pulled out of the Arcade there was no sign that there was the soul of a State convention on board, in fact it was not even known by some of the common passengers that there was a delegation under way.

And the conductor would not give them away.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Saturday morning's Produce Exchange session was well attended, and much interest was shown in what was being bought and sold. The sales were as follows: Nine sacks of No. 1 pink beans; 15 cases candied local ranch eggs. The members of the exchange voted to close the callroom tomorrow, Admission Day, also to close their places of business at noon.

Traffic in the market and along the street was exceptionally good for Saturday. Receipts of produce were moderate, and supplies were well cleaned up when the market closed. Business for the first week in September was reported satisfactory in nearly all circles.

Local ranch eggs caused the most interest on 'change, and under light receipts and increased demand the quotations were all firmer. Local ranch went up two points to 33 cents; eastern fresh, 30; storage selected, 27; northern candled, 29. Egg jobbers were thoroughly satisfied with the new prices as conditions for local ranch have improved perceptibly since the first of the month. Egg arrivals were somewhat heavier yesterday.

Butter showed no change.

Potatoes are steady. Conditions are firm in the North.

New crop walnuts are now in the market and are quoted at 15 per pound. Old walnuts sell at 10@15; almonds bring 18@19; Brazils, 16@17; peanuts, 6½; pecans, 16@17. Honey is firming up. Comb honey in one pound frames have advanced to 16. Other grades are higher.

Muscat grapes dropped to 65 cents per box yesterday. Black Hamburgs sold at 75. Apples are active at unaltered quotations. Cantaloupes and watermelons were featureless. Strawberries were equal to all demands, and sold at 4@6; raspberries, 12; blackberries, 9. Quinces sell at 1.00 per box.

Peas are scarce and firm at 7. Cabbage finds quick sale at 1.00. Tomatoes are firmer at 25@30. Other vegetables showed few changes.

All kinds of fish were well cleaned up.

The poultry market showed nothing new to report.

Wheat and barley are featureless.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 220 cases; butter, 16,381 lbs.; cheese, local, 2196 lbs.; potatoes, 680 sacks; onions, 300 sacks; beans, 38 sacks; sweet potatoes, 71 sacks.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Prices moved up aggressively today to a strong closing after the publication of the bank statement showing a deficit below the legal reserves of $6,577,925. This was accepted as an expression of unimpaired confidence on the part of the speculators who have the present market in hand, of the adequacy of available resources to replenish the deficit supplies on money to maintain the prices of stocks in the market. It is pointed as as justification of the confidence that upwards of $10,000, and possibly more than $15,000,000 will be available to the New York market on Monday when the treasury order for deposit of government funds against gold engagements goes into effect, the figures representing the estimates of the amounts of gold already secured for support. It is added that the beneficent attitude of the treasury authorities to safeguard the money market against harmful stringency may be assumed, and that means for insuring this will remain at command of the treasury. This will include the amount advanced against the gold imports, which will be returned to the treasury on receipt of the gold and will be available for use in other measures for later relief. The feeling of confidence on this score was by no means universal, however, the amount of the deficit in bank reserves proving rather staggering, as coming on the threshold of the annual flow of currency to the interior from New York. Not since the financial depression of 1893, have the banks' figures show in such a deficit when clearing-house certificates were issued in New York during July and August. Foreign stock markets were disturbed today by New York's heavy requisitions for gold and discounts advanced in London and Berlin, the rate in London rising above the bank's official rate and foreshadowing an advance by that institution. The week's outgo of $16,408,100 cash from the banks measures the full loss by the known movements of money, corrects the discrepancy in last week's statement that leaves several million dollars still to be accounted for. It is probable that New York Trust Companies have begun to withdraw cash from the New York banks to increase their cash reserves, in compliance with the law which requires them to hold 4 per cent. of deposits in cash on October 1, compared with the 3 per cent. required after July 1. The increased obligation will call for an addition of about $10,000,000 to cash holdings of the trust companies. The market closed strong, near the top. Total sales of bonds (par value) $732,000.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The statement of the clearing-house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $6,577,925 less than the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease in cash reserve of $9,447,225 as compared with last week.

The statement follows:

Loans, $1,051,774,100; decrease $11,965,500.

Deposits, $1,014,214,100; decrease $27,843,100.

Circulation, $44,917,900; decrease $1,170,900.

Legal tenders, $77,634,000; decrease $4,004,100.

Specie, $169,421,900; decrease $12,404,000.

Reserve, $246,957,400; decrease $12,404,000.

Reserve required, $253,535,225; decrease $6,960,775.

Deficit, $6,577,925; increase $9,447,225.

Ex-United States deposits deficit $3,992,850; increase $9,440,500.

The stock market today practically ignored the showing of deficit of $6,577,925 by the banks below the legal reserve requirements. Prices dropped momentarily when the statement first appeared, and then rose vigorously on powerful support to a strong closing. Speculative confidence was professed that the heavy engagements of gold for import which will become available on Monday through the operation of the order of the Secretary of the Treasury to facilitate the importation of gold will be sufficient to replenish the deficit in New York and supply means for easing the money market. Estimates of the amount of gold already secured for this purpose vary from $10,000,000 to over $15,000,000. Stocks were comparatively dull and moved in a hesitating way until the final burst of strength which followed the publication of the bank statement.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKET.

GRAIN, FRUIT AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Sentiment in the wheat pit was almost exclusively dominated by the weather map of the Northwest which is still favorable for the harvesting and threshing of the new crop of winter wheat. Cash houses and pit traders here offered wheat liberally but the demand was not equal to the supply and consequently the price of all deliveries made further declines. The market was heavy all day. December opened 1-8 a 1-4 c to 1-4 a 3-8 c lower at 72 @ 1-8 c, sold off to 71 3-4 and closed at 71 3-4 @ 7-8, almost the lowest point of the session.

Because of the continuance of ideal weather for the corn crop the market for that cereal was weak all day. The market closed weak. December closed at 41 3-4.

Trading in the oats pit was quiet and the market was easier because of the weakness of wheat and corn. December closed at 30 5-8 @ 3-4.

The decline in the price of corn caused considerable profit taking in provisions and resulted in moderate declines in all products. At the close January pork was off 15c, lard was down 5 c and ribs 12½ @ 15 c lower.

Stock for the Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Speculation in stocks has continued active and special stocks have risen strongly on rumors of coming benefits in spite of the restraining influence of the stringency in the money market, which carried the rate for call loans to 40 per cent. on Wednesday, the highest rate touched in September for many years. The rate relaxed after the news became known in Wall street that the treasury plan of aid to gold imports in force last April had been adopted again to go into effect on Monday. There were no announcements of bankers' plans for availing themselves of the advantages offered pending its operation next week. For this reason and because time money rates continued high and the future interior demands for money were known to promise large demands upon New York, the speculation continued under restraint.

UPHOLDS ENGLISH LABOR.

John Burns Declares His Countrymen Are in Better Shape Than Is Supposed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Honest John Burns, an English labor leader and member of Parliament, has rather surprised the French interviewers by the statement that there is much exaggeration in regard to the condition of a large part of the English laboring class, and things are not nearly so bad as they are painted.

The French conviction that in England, as well as in America, money is getting in fewer hands and that the poor are getting steadily poorer, is all wrong, says Burns.

"Merchants, artisans and laborers," he declared, "have all shared in the growing prosperity of England. We have less so-called labor troubles than Either France or America."

The gates will open on Monday at 1 o'clock and until the collision takes place of

LORD WILL SELL FAMOUS LIBRARY.

LOSS OF MILLION CAUSES HIM TO SACRIFICE TREASURES.

Collection Worth Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars Will Probably Go to America—Represents Nobleman's Work for Fifty Years and Includes Noted Books.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Deprived by a cruel blow of an immense sum of money currently believed to amount to $1,000,000, Lord Amherst, of Hackney, has determined to sell the most precious of his possessions, his famous library. This remarkable collection of manuscripts and books was begun more than fifty years ago by Lord Amherst, that is to say, long before the American competition had arisen.

He not only patronized the London book stores since 1852, but also made extensive purchases at the great sales, beginning as early as the famous Exton Hall collection in 1862, and keeping through the whole series of celebrated auctions of the libraries of Sir William Tate, the Duke of Marlborough, William Beckford, the Earl of Jersey, Michael Woodhull and Lord Ashburnham.

It is believed that the books will be carried on to America, for private collectors in this country rich enough to buy such a valuable library are few while in America they are much keener on such old treasures than here. Roughly estimated the collection is worth $750,000.

HOO HOOS HAVE BIG TIME.

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) Sept. 8.—Sixteen members were initiated in the Osirian Cloister, a degree of the Concatenated Order of Hoo Hoo, today, the ceremonies being followed by the annual banquet at the Indiahoma Club, which was attended by three hundred. Work of the fifteenth annual session of the order will be begun next Monday. By a ruling of Judge Barnwell in the District Court this afternoon, a wild West roping contest, scheduled as a feature of the Hoo Hoo convention tomorrow, was prohibited on the ground that it was a violation of the Sunday laws. The Humane Society first brought action on grounds of cruelty to animals, but their contentions were not upheld, and the contest was given by moonlight tonight.

NELSON WILL BUY A MINE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The efforts of Goldfield to get its mines before the country by giving a big fight in that camp, have proved successful, so far as Battling Nelson is concerned. He announces he will make his home in Nevada and will invest $15,000 in mining interests. He will remain in Nevada indefinitely, and for some time he will not consider any fighting offers, however attractive. He still wears marks of his encounter with Gans, although he denies this in dispatches sent East.

THE CITY IN BRIEF

BREVITIES.

Miss E. C. Collins of 249 South Broadway arrived in Los Angeles Saturday, September 1, after an extended business trip to Paris, where she has spent the past three months studying the latest designs in millinery and purchasing the finest models and millinery specials shown by the leading French designers. On her way home from Paris, Miss Collins spent two weeks in New York attending the displays made by the best millinery importing houses and purchasing the finest goods that were shown for her inspection. Owing to her connection with the best millinery export houses of Paris, Miss Collins will be enabled to keep in the closest possible touch with the prevailing French styles and will have same on display in her store twelve days later than shown in Paris and five days later than shown in New York. She has also found it necessary, owing to her increasing importing business, to maintain a New York office, and has secured the exclusive services of an expert millinery buyer to conduct same, whose entire attention will bed evoted to the purchasing of the finest millinery specialties. During the past season Miss Collins has sent hats to every State in the Union, and while abroad had the pleasure of seeing "Collins Hats" worn on the most fashionable promenades of Paris.

A prominent rug firm going out of business. Anybody contemplating buying Persian rugs will have an opportunity to select from the finest stock on the Coast and purchase them at their own price, commencing Monday, September 10th, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., when Pashgian Bros. & Co., at 221-223 South Broadway, will offer their entire stock at unreserved auction. Pashgian Bros. & Co. are dissolving their copartnership and positively going out of business, and they must vacate the store they now occupy, 221-223 S. Broadway, on October 1st. The rugs they own represent the profit on their business in the last 12 years, and as it is impossible to divide the rugs equally between the three partners, they have determined to sell them at absolute auction, as the money can be more easily divided. They will sell every piece, no matter what price it brings, so if you have any use for Oriental Rugs don't fail to attend this sale. They mean business and intend to turn their stock into money.

"SIEGEL'S—WOMEN'S—CHILDREN'S WEAR"

The Unique occupies a unique position in Los Angeles. This is the only establishment that has a buyer in New York from one end of the year to the other, constantly watching for the new styles and forwarding them to us as soon as they make their appearance.

Exclusiveness and originality of style are pre-eminent in all our garments. It's very seldom that we buy more than one garment of each particular kind—so that every woman who buys here knows that she, and she alone, will wear that particular style and color which she chooses.

While we handle only exclusive styles and high class garments made by the most competent man tailors, we do not ask exorbitant prices. You will frequently find common, ordinary styles priced as high or even higher, than garments that we have made especially to our order.

Those who have studied the style situation in Los Angeles realize that to get the vrey newest and most exclusive you simply must come to the Unique. Newcomers to Los Angeles are extended a special invitation to visit the Unique, and view the beautiful garments now on display. Watch for the announcement of our opening, which occurs very shortly.

Hints from the Fall Fashion Book

Now the fall season is almost upon us. The Unique is prepared to serve women who want the most exclusive and fashionable garments obtainable. Every day we are receiving new fall garments which are sent direct to us from the makers by our New York buyer. The assortment is already very complete and our fall opening will take place soon. In the meantime we invite you to call and have a look at the many exclusive styles now being shown.

The New Fall Suits

New York's most exclusive tailors have worked hard to outrival each other in producing the most exclusive effects. We have secured the choicest models from the various Fifth avenue tailors giving us an assortment that can't be duplicated anywhere. The new models this fall will be tight fitting and military effects, while the Eton, blouse, box coat and long coat effects are brought out in entirely new conceptions. The favorite materials will be shaggy plaid, broadcloths, serges, worsteds, and mannish mixtures. Colors will be quite different this season and include some very original new things such as autumn leaves, elephant's breath, mustard, green, absinthe, London smoke, grilled chocolate, London fog, and many other decidedly new effects. Prices for the fashionable models will range from $25 to $100.

The New Coats

Autumn, 1906, will see the usual array of Etons, blouses, box coats, etc., but the tourist coats will be more popular than ever. These are three-quarter and seven-eighths lengths and especially adapted for automobiling and street wear. They are shown in entirely new plaids both small and large. One particular coat that is unusually desirable for automobiling is a very light weight rubber coat lined with beautiful silk. It is light in weight, yet warm and specially adapted to this climate. Castor, gray, blue, black and plaids are the popular colors. Prices $15 to $75.

Swell Skirts

There will be no radical change in the style of skirts for the coming fall, but some very distinct ideas in colors and materials are being shown. Here you will find none but exclusive models that are strictly in accordance with the views of fashion. We are now showing a large assortment of both walking and dress skirts in grays, browns, castor, green, black and the newest plaids. Also splendid line of taffeta walking skirts in entirely new models. We call especial attention to our exceptional values in skirts at $7.50 and $10.

Dainty New Waists

Plaid waists will be quite the rage with fashionable dressers this season and we are prepared to show you the very newest ideas. Some clever new color combinations in fine plaid silk waists are now on display. We are also showing some very beautiful taffeta silk waists in black, navy, gray, smoke color, brown, castor and white. For evening wear we have a splendid showing of white lace and net waists in entirely new patterns. Prices range from $5 to $25.

Evening Costumes

Some of the most beautiful designs in evening costumes ever shown in Los Angeles are now to be seen at the Unique. Most strikingly beautiful are the costumes in radium silk and meteor silk. Also some very handsome effects in crepes, voiles, nets and chiffons. All the new fall pastel shades are represented. These range in price from $35 to $150.

Evening Wraps

From the plainest to the most elaborately designed wrap for evening wear the Unique showing is complete in all that is new and desirable. Evening coats and wraps in white, light blue, peach, pink, black, ... and lavender—all exclusive models—no two alike—to describe them would be an impossibility. MYSTERY OF TEMESCAL DEEPENS; POSEY HORTON TELLS HIS STORY.

All Suggested Clews Traced Out; Emma Powers Located by "Times" Reporters—Whose Is Body of Girl Found in Lonely Canyon?

MYSTERY, mystery, mystery—that's about all the officers have to report on the murder in lonely Temescal Canyon, after nearly two months of work on the case. The identity of the girl whose decomposed corpse was found sitting upright in the brush seems even more deeply obscured today than on the day of its horrible discovery by Posey Horton and a woman companion, Mrs. Deturk.

All the clews suggested have been followed out to the end, apparently, and Emma Powers, toward whom indications pointed more strongly than toward any one else as the murdered woman, has been located by Times reporters. The finding of Mrs. Powers seems to clear up every clew of every missing woman thought of in connection with the case, and leads to—nothing.

Posey Horton, whose name has been used over and over in various guesses since he made the grewsome human find between the two mountain walls a few miles up from Santa Monica, today gives the public his first authentic statement, through The Times. Until Friday, when The Times sent a reporter to interview him on the case, he had not once been seen by either an officer or newspaper representative. He talks convincingly.

POSEY CREEK TULARE COUNTY HORTON, finder of the body in Temescal Canyon, and King Bee of the Saturday-night fandangos at Calabasas. He tells The Times convincingly that he had nothing to do with the murder mystery.

Posey Horton, boss of Calabasas, here makes his first statement of the finding of the body of the unknown young woman in Temescal Cañon two months ago. The mystery surrounding the case, the failure to identify the remains, and conflicting stories which found circulation relative to Horton's movements and alleged mysterious actions, led neighbors and others interested in the case to give Horton a prominence which he protests he does not merit.

Considerable caustic criticism has been made of the Sheriff's and Coroner's offices because of the fact that Horton was not subpoenaed to testify at the inquest, and because the deputy sheriff sent out to question Horton came back without having seen him.

Horton declares he had nothing to do with the killing of the young woman, has no idea of who she was, and, furthermore, says he is preparing to enter suits for libel against certain newspapers which have intimated that he was the murderer of the girl.

HORTON HIGH-LIFE PLACE.

"Horton's" is the place in prohibition Calabasas where every one gets drunk of a Saturday night, and where Mexican cholos and whites, both men and women, pound the loose boards of the dingy hall in wild, hilarious dances until the Sabbath dawn pales through the broken panes of the smoky, unwashed windows.

A great many residents of Calabasas would like to see Horton's place closed up, but for a certain element of the district it furnishes all the "high life" that they ever know, and the closing up of "Horton's Grocery" they would hail as a catastrophe and a public calamity.

After crossing two ranges of mountains through the Topango Cañon, north from Santa Monica, you drop down upon Horton's through a chasm in the towering range. A tottering collection of shabby slab-sided, white-washed abodes squat under the shade of a few disreputable-looking trees. An old Mexican oven is falling to pieces on the side of the colony next the road.

Nearly all the windows have been cracked, knocked out or shot out on many a more or less memorable occasion. Old rags have been stuffed into some of the cracks. Pieces of plank have been nailed over others, and still again neither plank nor rags seem to have been available. Through these last openings you can look into the plain, square front, room which is known as the dance hall.

SUCH AN ASSORTMENT.

Over the front door, which is locked of days, there is painted in yellow letters on a black background, "Groceries." And that is a joke in even Calabasas.

Two or three tired-looking nags and a discouraged loking cow populate the barn inclosure, which is also a part of the front yard. Cats, dogs, and children of different sizes, shapes and assortments, confront you in a stealthily curious array as you go around by the side door seeking an entrance.

If you were to walk carefully over the creaking boards of the long porch of the stooping one-story frame main building you would find the third door always ajar.

Inside there is a curious collection of goods which make it difficult to classify the place for what it is, or what you would naturally infer it to be, were it not in such a strictly temperance community.

Four slot machines line up against the walls. In one corner there is a counter over which is undoubtedly served the rather slim line of groceries in sight. In the other corner, and far the most pretentious piece of furniture in the whole room is a bar, or it might also be called a counter, upon which stands a dice box. Behind the counter on a shelf there is an ostentatious array of pop bottles, boxes of cigars and packages of smoking tobacco.

It is in this room, and over this bar that the righteous element of the community suspects that the goods are passed which cause all the wild hilariousness of the Horton Saturday night fandangos, but none of the objectors have ever seen anything of a prohibited character sold over the bar. A stranger might look all through the place and find nothing to prove his suspicion, and he might beg on his knees with a parched tongue lolling out of his mouth and get no more sustaining sympathy than a bottle of warm pop.

POSEY, HEAD AND LEADER.

The Hortons are legion kith and kin in the Calabasas Valley, and they have run things about to suit themselves for years. And of all the clan, Posey Creek Tulare County Horton, modestly named in honor of the place of his birth some forty-five years ago, is the acknowledged head and leader, and a great old sport is he, in the esteem of Calabasas.

It was as the finder of the corpse of the mysteriously murdered girl in the Temescal Cañon a few weeks ago that Posey first achieved wide notoriety outside the peaceful valley. Today, in spite of the feeble efforts of the local authorities, the identity of the girl and of her murderer is as much a thing of mystery as it was on the day that Posey Horton and Mrs. Mattie Deturk so strangely drove off their road to Calabasas into Temescal Cañon to eat their lunch.

It will be remembered that after finding the body of the girl, Posey and Mrs. Deturk drove back to Santa Monica to notify the authorities, and then returned to watch the undertaker pick up the remains, and finally continued on together to Calabasas.

At the inquest it was not considered necessary to call Horton to testify, and as he has spent the greater part of his time since the discovery of the unearthing of the Temescal mystery in and about his place at Calabasas, his story of the affair has never been given at first hand until he was seen one day last week by a Times representative.

Interest in Horton's connection with the case has increased more since his neighbors are divided among themselves as to the part which they credit him with having played in the matter. Many believe that Posey has never told all that he knows about the affair, and their hints and mysterious actions and darkly dropped expressions have made Posey warm under the collar.

RUNNING THE GAUNTLET.

It was not an altogether amiable and smiling Posey that was dug up out of his lair to be interviewed on a subject which has become as tender as a sore tooth. It was also early in the morning that counted against finding him at his mellowest.

After being thoroughly smelled over by two cheerful-looking bulldogs, inspected through door cracks by a horde of spying youngsters, and critically sized up by a good looking young woman with big Montana diamonds swinging from her ears, if you pass muster you may be able to see Posey himself.

This was a Times reporter's good fortune Friday. He tied has jaded horse to a fence post, shooed a flock of chickens off the front gate, made the full pups think he and they were old time friends by pulling their ears and cuffing their ugly mugs, passed the "kids" at the outer door through the open sesame of a handful of lemon drops, jollied the young woman with the Montana ear lamps, and was passed without question through to the bar-grocery room itself.

NATTY HAT—LITTLE ELSE.

In a few moments Posey came in, looking somewhat the worse for wear, accentuated by the absence of a barber and the distance [illegible] the nearest laundry. But jauntily cocked over one ear, he wore the sportiest, nattiest saw-toothed Willie-boy straw hat with a peaches and cream band. There was a perceptibile bear movement of his trousers stock and a decided bull movement of his shirt. His feet played rag time with a pair of slippers that clattered at the heels.

Posey himself is a good-natured looking, happy-go-lucky-appearing individual, but unfortunately the reporter didn't seem to take as well with him at first as with the bulldogs. He shied off, and backed behind the counter, and began to manicure his nails with a long, stocky jacknife.

STRICTLY PROHIBITION.

"Let's have a drink, Posey," said the reporter.

"Lemon, strawberry, or cream?" he asked, as glibly as a drug clerk.

"No; the real thing."

"Nothing doing," said Posey, shortly. "This is a prohibition district. Local option, you know."

Then, as he warmed up a little: "There are a few old long hairs out here that want to make a Pennsylvania Quaker village of the place. At the last election they had the prohibition clause put in and the Mexicans voted it without paying any attention to it.

"But I wanted to get a license to run a roadhouse here. If I could start a roadhouse here there would be a fortune in it. The Supervisors told me to get up a petition. There were just 111 voters in the district. I got ninety-seven of them on my petition, and six more said they would sign. I took my petition to the board and they were just going to put it through when that old Van Nuys who puts up the bond for the Supervisors and who runs the whole Board, put his foot down, and my petition was pigeon-holed.

"They kick about this place, but we never sell any liquor here. I can't help it if people come here with bottles in their pockets and get drunk at the dances, can I?

"What I need here is a roadhouse, with restaurant privilege. Lots of automobilists come through here in the winter, and we could do a rushing business with a bar."

Horton's notorious Calabasas dance hall and tribal abode, which he is trying to convert into a road-house.

LOOSENS UP ON MYSTERY.

But the full measure of Horton's disgust was reached with the subject of the Temescal mystery. Refusing at first to discuss the matter, which he has never mentioned before to any newspaper man or officer, he loosened up by degrees.

"I did not kill the woman I found in Temescal Cañon," said Posey, reaching for a straw to chop to pieces with his knife. "Neither her nor any other woman.

"A lot of crazy folks here got the notion in their heads from the newspapers that I killed the woman. My lawyers are getting ready to go after those papers for libel. They say I've got a fine case.

"I have no idea who the woman was. She was no friend or acquaintance of mine, that's a cinch. None of my lady friends have disappeared that I know of.

"But the people around here, they make me sore. They get their heads together and their tongues a-wagging, and instead of coming up to me to tell me what they think or suspicion, they shy around this place as though I had the smallpox.

"Why, don't you know this thing is just ruining my reputation.

"LET 'EM ALONE," SAYS MOTHER.

"Serves you right, Posey," interjected old Mrs. Horton, as she scared a flock of chickens out of a sack of sugar to attend to the wants of a barefooted Mexican boy. "Next time you go to running across any bodies lying in the cañon, let 'em alone."

"Huh," snorted Posey in a fresh burst of disgust. "Do you suppose that I'd lug a body away over to Temescal Cañon when there are so many holes right out here in the hills where it could be pitched off and never found in the world?

"You have no idea the fool yarns the neighbors are circulating around here. You'd think to hear 'em talk that I was a regular out and out bad man.

"The papers and folks generally made a great fuss about my not going down to the inquest to testify. Why should I make that twenty-five-mile trip to Santa Monica when the Coroner did not think it worth while to call for me? The Coroner and the Sheriff knew where to find me, but they didn't consider that I knew any more about the case than I told them when I found the body, and I didn't.

"The story of my finding the body is just the same as I told the undertaker that day in Santa Monica, when Mrs. Deturk and I drove back to notify them. And that's all there is to my connection with the case.

"But what makes me the sorest," concluded Posey, "are these old long hairs with their prohibition notions. Next time you come out here, though, I'll have my license all right, and you can get anything you want."

EMMA POWERS FOUND.

LAST CLEW FOLLOWED OUT.

At one time it was supposed that it was possible that the body found in the Temescal Cañon might be that of Emma Smith, or Emma Snyder, or Emma Davis, all of which names she has been known by. This young woman had not been heard from for nearly six months by her friends or adopted father, but she was finally traced from Garvanza to Los Angeles, to Santa Monica, to Uplands and back to Los Angeles and located here as a domestic and is as well as ever.

There was one other possible victim who had been reported missing to the police about the time that the Temescal Cañon murder must have been committed. This was a Mrs. Emma Powers. To her indications seemed to point the most clearly.

This woman had lived in a lodging-house on Pier avenue in Santa Monica with a man by the name of Kent, and she passed as "Mrs. Kent" with the lodging-house proprietor, until suddenly she disappeared.

At about the same time the man Kent also disappeared. The woman left a trunk behind her, in which were mixed indiscriminately some of the man's apparel and the woman's clothes.

Efforts made at the time of the discovery of the murder to locate Mrs. Powers were unavailing, and she became one of the mysteries embalmed with the long list of other women who had previously disappeared and left no trace.

But reporters for The Times took up the search for the missing woman, and this search ended yesterday in the positive information that Mrs. Powers is alive and well, working in a laundry in this city, and a frequent caller at a home on Naud street where her little daughter, 5 years old, is living with friends.

ALL KINDS OF STORIES.

Stories that were probable and stories that were manifestly improbable have been told and retold in connection with this strange murder which

BUILD STORE BLOCK LONG.

A Million-and-a-Half-Dollar Department Plan.

North Side of Fifth, from Spring to Main.

Structure to Be Complete and Immense.

At a cost of $1,500,000, an immense department store is to be built in the near future by the Central Building Company. The site selected is the entire north side of Fifth street from Spring to Main, and having a frontage of nearly half a block on both the two north-and-south thoroughfares.

The land has been in the possession of the company for some time, and many schemes have been considered for improving it. Yesterday the company finally decided to build a department store, and immediately authorized the drawing of plans and preliminary work. A hotel had been discussed for the site, but the locality is already well supplied with hotels, and that form of improvement did not offer as many inducements as an office building. This was seriously considered for some time, when quite suddenly the plan was changed. Inquiries for a site for a department store from local men determined the company to at once erect such a building.

The site has a frontage of an entire block on Fifth street, a distance of 330 feet. The frontages on Spring and Main streets are both 120 feet. The value of the site is further increased by an alley running directly through the block from Fourth to Fifth streets, and by an interior lot having no frontage on the outside, but a long frontage on the alley.

ALLEY AN ARCHED TUNNEL.

This alley is the only one of its kind in the downtown district, and is a valuable addition to the property. It is almost in the center of the property, and for a department store, affords a direct outlet and inlet for shipping facilities. The value of it is further enhanced by the fact that the company has permission from the City Council to build over it, so that the building will be constructed with practically an arched tunnel on its ground floor, and the upper stories will not be interfered with in the least. This arched tunnel will extend inward 120 feet to the beginning of the interior lot that forms part of the site. This runs along the alley for nearly a hundred feet, and forms a perfect place for a warehouse.

To John Parkinson has been entrusted drawing of plans for the structure to be erected. The building will be ten stories in height. It will be thoroughly fireproof, and made throughout of steel and tile, along the lines of the building now being erected for the company on the southeast corner of Fifth and Spring, for which Mr. Parkinson was also the architect.

Every convenience that a modern department store requires will be incorporated in the building, and the company hopes to have the finest edifice of the kind in the West. The entire front will be faced with white tile, in the manner of the striking building Altman erected in New York for his department store, which with the land cost him ten millions.

LARGE WINDOW DISPLAY.

The ground floor will be fitted with immense windows, and as the available street frontage for window display will be over 500 feet, this will be one of the striking features of the building. With the station of the electric roads only a block away at the corner of Sixth and Main, and the four hotels that cluster about the site, this advantage is one of great value to a department store.

Erection of the building will begin as soon as certain leases have expired. The land is not owned by the Central Building Company, but controlled by them through a fifty-year lease. The property belonged to John H. Jones, and on his death passed to his widow, who leased it to the corporation. The lease was encumbered by other leases, all of which will expire within a year.

THESE ARE THE MEN.

The Central Building Company is composed of J. S. Torrance, J. S. Sartori, Maurice S. Hellman, A. C. Bilicke, the Adams-Phelps Company and R. A. Rowan. They have several other holdings, on one of which, the corner of Fifth and Spring, they are now putting up a fine office building.

With this new building, the block between Fourth and Fifth becomes one of the most active in the city. Mr. Hellman has been constructing an L-shaped building around the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, running to the alley referred to, and another of the same character will soon be built around the Trust building on the other Fourth-street corner, as already announced in The Times. The recently-constructed Delta building leaves on the Spring-street frontage only one piece of free property, that north of the Delta building, and it is held at $6000 a foot.

TENANTS NOT DISCLOSED.

Who will be the tenants of the new building is not known, nor has the company made final arrangements. It is being erected because of active demand for such a building by local men, but who they are R. A. Rowan, agent of the company, stated yesterday that he could not disclose. He did state that he had been authorized by the company to submit the proposition to leading firms all over the country, and wait on their reply before the company makes final arrangements.

Of these firms the most prominent are Siegel, Cooper & Co. and Altman of New York. The fact that the new building will be finished somewhat as the Altman building in New York is taken in some quarters as a straw showing the direction of the wind. Since the disaster at San Francisco Altman has opened a store there, which leads to the belief that he may come to Los Angeles also. The recent extension of the Siegel Cooper store to Boston also is taken as an indication that they may wish to branch out more fully.

If some department store does not make arrangements for the building it is understood that a proposition has been made to divide it in two parts by hollow tile partitions, and lease each part separately. Another proposition is also in the wind, to divide the building into four parts in the same manner, in which case two furniture stores may sign for the interior stores.

Whoever become the lessees, the building marks another advance of Fifth street. The Auditorium is nearing completion at one end and next winter the Alexandria will be extended to Broadway, as already announced.

THOUSANDS FOR FEW SOBS.

Unfortunate Investment of Sad Anton Fritz.

"Touching Experience" of a Portland Man.

Impresario Is Hugged by a Weeping Brunette.

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 5.—Anton Fritz, a local amusement magnate, invested $9400 in a few soft feminine sobs, at the very portals of the White Temple, the most fashionable church in the city of Portland, the other evening.

Oh, what a "touching" experience it was for such a sympathetic soul as the theatrical impresario! He was cleverly duped by a woman, but one who he admits was the charmingest little brunette he ever saw; and the time, place and circumstances make it one of the most sensational robberies the local sleuths have ever had to deal with.

The deed was committed in the vestibule of the massive stone and marble house of worship while Fritz was endeavoring to comfort the woman who leaned her head upon his shoulder and sobbed piteously as she unfolded an imaginary tale of sorrow that would melt a heart of stone. All circumstances surrounding the crime indicate that it was committed after the plans of the conspiracy, for such it proves to be, had been carefully laid. A local real estate dealer, who knew Fritz always carried lots of money on his person and who had tried in vain to get him to invest a large share of his wealth in some wildcat enterprises, is suspected of being an accomplice of the woman, who seems to have disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed her up.

Fritz, formerly a butcher by occupation, came to Portland from Pennsylvania about three months ago. At first he kept his money, some $14,000 which he had secured from the sale of his business in the Keystone State, in a bank, but after the Stenslands' defalcation in Chicago and the Hipple episode in Philadelphia and a few other stupendous bank peculations which he had read about in the papers, he decided that the only safe place for his money was in a large leather wallet securely fastened into his inside coat pocket with a safety pin. And there he kept it all the time.

ANTON FRITZ.

It was while indulging in a friendly poker game in a local club that the real estate dealer first learned that Fritz had so much money and he apparently began to lay his plans for getting hold of it. He watched Fritz continually and learned his habits. He found out that he invariably went home about 11 o'clock in the evening and always passed the White Temple on the way. He then took the woman accomplice into his confidence and the scheme was framed up. The woman was to station herself each evening until she encountered Fritz in the vicinity of the corner, and play the part of a woman greatly wronged and in distress. The third night she saw Fritz approaching, having recognized him from her confederate's description. Then she played her role with a vengeance and with complete success, and that it worked with Fritz, who is a man who never touches a drop of liquor, is all the more remarkable.

On that fateful evening, as he reached the corner of Eleventh and Taylor street, within a block of the church, his attention was attracted by a young woman leaning against a building and sobbing bitterly. His heart was touched at once, so he approached her and inquired the cause of her deep distress. She informed him, in a voice choking with sobs, that her husband had deserted her and left her with no funds and a young babe to support, and she tearfully told him that she was going to commit suicide and would he please let her go, for she was so wretched and did not want to live, and she was so tired she could scarcely stand on her feet.

It was too much for Fritz, who did all in his power to console her as he led her across the street to the broad stone steps of the church where she might sit down and tell him her whole story. She unfolded a pitiful tale and he gave her a few dollars, and out of sheer gratitude she threw her arms about his neck and kissed him and then laid her head on his shoulder and wept softly. He asked her where she lived and about her family. He took her address and told her he would call the next day and give her some more money.

Again she thanked him and in a final ecstacy of grief she kissed him good night and disappeared in the dark shadows of the night. Comforted with the thought that he had done a noble service for a poor unfortunate, Fritz went on his way whistling to himself, never suspecting the loss of his roll. But when he took off his coat, in his room, he saw the unclasped safety pin sticking to the top of his pocket and the wallet was gone.

He nearly dropped dead and didn't have the strength to telephone the police for several minutes.

There was $9400 in the wallet—the remainder of the $14,000, all the money he had in the world.

OPENS WAR UPON CITY'S LOAFERS.

MAYOR HARRY LANE, of Portland.

HERE is Dr. Harry Lane, Mayor of Portland, Or., who has caused consternation in the ranks of Portland's army of public office parasites. After discharging in a body the city detective force as a worthless lot of grafters who never detected anything unless to serve their own personal ends, and maintained a disreputable gang of "stool-pigeons" to the detriment instead of to the good of the city, Mayor Lane pitched into city house-cleaning in earnest, and declared against the "moochers."

"The moochers must go," is the Mayor's slogan, and in the class of "moochers" he includes every clerical assistant, stenographer, office boy, subpoena-server, errand boy, or other employé of any public office who does not give good honest measure in the sweat of the brow, for every penny paid out to him from the public funds. The strenuous Mayor says there is no reason why the public funds should be mulcted for the maintenance of a lot of idlers who do little or nothing to earn their salaries, and who enjoy this privilege merely through a remote cousinship to some successful politician, or because they are proteges of the successful.

Mayor Lane is also after the franchise-grabbers, has compelled the Standard Oil to move its ill-smelling tanks outside the city limits, and is waging a vigorous war on the disreputable concert halls and gambling dens of Portland.

MONEY CANNOT BUY IT.

The Bradley-Martin Given a Surprise by a Loyal Scotch Woman.

[London Tribune:] American money won't buy everything—especially in Scotland, where the aristocracy, though poor, are prouder than Satan of their belongings. The Bradley-Martins have again made overtures to Lady Seafield for Balmacaan; in fact, their instructions to the agent who acted for them was "that she could name her own price." This is about the twentieth offer they have made Lady Seafield, but to all temptations she is adamant. Gold will not buy Balmacaan, though it is quite an open secret that it would come in very useful to the Ogilvie-Grants. The Bradley-Martins adore this exquisite place, in which they have resided for so many years. Especially attached to it is Mr. Bradley-Martin, who would be quite content to spend the entire year there. Since they took this Scottish seat they have each year lavished money on improvements to the house itself and the grounds, evidently hoping one day that it would be their own. Now, however, Lady Seafield has sent her ultimatum.

FRUIT FOR SIBERIA.

Oregon Experimenting With a New Market Over the Sea.

[Portland Oregonian:] Portland has long been supplying Siberia with the best apples that country ever saw and now has commenced to ship watermelons, grapes and pears over there. The W. B. Glafke Company has just forwarded two carloads of assorted fruit to Seattle, where they were shipped across the Pacific on the big Great Northern steamship Dakota. The lot will be trans-shipped at Nagasaki or Kobe for Vladivostok. D. Yogdgoglou of Vladivostok, has superintended the packing of the shipment.

This venture is in the nature of an experiment. It is known thath apples can be sent to Siberia in perfect condition, but it remains to be seen whether the grapes and melons will stand the long journey. Great care has been taken in packing the fruit, and if it is properly handled on the steamships it is almost certain to arrive at Vladivostok in good condition.

The grapes have been packed in kegs, after the Spanish method. Odorless, kiln-dried cedar sawdust is used for packing. Mr. Glafke tried to secure a quantity of cork dust, but could not get it in time. The sawdust will prevent the grapes from getting bruised and will also take up any moisture. The varieties of grapes packed are Muscats, Tokays and blacks.

The first Oregon watermelons of the season went in the shipment. They were of good size and well matured. The melons were packed with straw in banana crates, three melons to the crate.

Only Hood River apples were selected by Mr. Glafke to fill this order. They are Gravensteins, Kings and Alexanders, and are the best that could be found. They were packed in regular apple boxes and each box was burlapped. The pears are Clapp's Favorite and were carefully wrapped and put up in half-boxes. A large lot of boxed onions were also included in the shipment.

It will require about 22 days for the goods to reach Vladivostok and if they arrive in satisfactory condition the shipment will be followed by many more.

CURE BY SEPARATION.

Better Treatment for Nervous Strain Than Any Medicine Dosing.

[New York Sun:] The old theory was that the separation of members of a family was deplorable wherever it might happen. Now even the physicians part relatives for their own good.

"I just sent a mother to the Adirondacks," said a doctor to the Sun reporter, "while the daughter has gone to Southern California. I expect them both to be entirely restored to health when they come back. Now they are nervous wrecks chiefly from the fact that for more than a year they have been constantly together. Neither of them is especially strong, and such constant association was bad for both of them.

"Even young children are sometimes improved by separation from their parents. I've just sent two up to the country under the care of a trained nurse. She will look after them, and the mother has promised me not to visit them more than three times during the summer. They are what is called 'hysterical children.' That means they're bad and too much for their mother's feeble discipline. They're not hysterical yet, but will be if their mother tries to discipline them. Now they are to be for two months under the care of this nurse, who will know what is good for them and make them normal instead of hopelessly spoiled.

"Just think what a row such a thing would have caused twenty years ago; how the mother would have protested that, come what may, she would never leave her children for a minute. Now she submits very philosophically, knowing that what will happen is for her own and the children's good, too. The mother is not even allowed to interfere between the nurse and the orders she gives the children. They must obey the nurse. The result of this separation will be the transformation of the querulous, spoiled brats into healthy kids, with respect for their nurse and more affection for their mother than they ever had.

"Persons who live together or spend a great deal of time in one another's society eventually reach a stage which requires separation for the good of both of them. This is especially true in the case of old persons who live with a younger relative. There is real tragedy in the existence of some of the young women who are the constant companions of aged and possibly invalid mothers.

Costumes, Reception Frocks, Dinner Dresses and Theater Gowns

Forty-three of Them. Regular Selling Prices

$85, $100 and $115

IT sounds like a fairy tale offering these magnificent, imported creations at $15.00 for choice, but instead it is a cold fact amply borne out by either our window exhibit or an inspection of the garments. The quoted reductions, imaginary though they seem, tell nothing but the naked truth and in some instances former markings were even higher.

Some of the handsomest productions in America today are included in this remarkable cleanup. None cost less than $50.00 to make. All have silk drops that are alone easily worth the money. Materials are crepe de chine, lace, peau de cygne, hand embroidered silk fabrics, mulls and eoliennes, etc; nearly all have elaborate transparent yokes of some rich lace, such as Guipure, Duchess, Marquis or Baby Irish; short sleeves in beautiful and fascinating allover lace effects; long and demi-train skirts lavishly embellished to match bodices.

ELCOME REFUGE.

McFarland says: "No human however imposing, will ever to me. Standing above the sea level, perpetual ice and snow and shaken and scourged by the winds, with no trees or bush in sight, that little hut was the most welcome refuge I ever found on earth. In answer to a knock at the door the government observer appeared and took the wanderer in. When told the story the man looked utterly amazed, and asked, 'Is it possible you came up by that telegraph line? Well, do you know it is a miracle you ever got here? That line is built over the most direct route, spanning the deepest ground and the sharpest rocks, and besides that, a tornado has been blowing all the afternoon. Right now the wind gauge registers a velocity of sixty-five miles an hour.'

"It took but a little while to tumble into bed, to rest the muscles and sinews strained and tired by this Herculean climb. And yet the next morning at 4 o'clock Albert McFarland scrambled out on that mountain top to see the sun rise. At 10 o'clock of the forenoon, the wind having subsided, this mountain climber began his descent. The skilled mountaineer in the little hut on the top of the peak painted his face with burned cork as a guard against sun blinding. Then wrapped in the blanket from the horse's saddle, bare headed, he began the downward trip. Following the telegraph posts as his guide again, sometimes sliding 500 feet without a break, the rock behind which the horse was tied was finally reached. The observer in the hut had told him he would never see his horse again. But one can imagine his delight when he heard the welcome of the animal's whinny as he came down the mountain. At 6 in the evening he was again sitting at dinner in the Manitou House, enjoying a good meal, and feeling exceedingly thankful that he had escaped from his perilous ascent of Pike's Peak.

This Ohio newspaper man has known more ever since about mountain climbing than he knew before. Mr. McFarland is at the present time 83 years old. If lost upon Pike's Peak today, as he was twenty-seven years ago, his friends think he would scramble to the top now as he did then.

The forthcoming Colorado Springs celebration will be the one hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the peak. It will be held from the 23d to 29th inst.

TWELVE CENTS A DAY.

A Washington Department Clerk Has Solved the Economical Living Problem.

Augustus Riley, a clerk in the War Department, 74 years old, declares that he spends less than 12 cents a day for his living.

"My average expense every day for five years past has been less than 12 cents," said Mr. Riley, "and I have had plenty to eat. The system requires only so much. I sleep like a baby and at leisure I go for a several miles stroll through the parks. I never get hungry; most people feel that way when their imagination runs away with them. I live on $4.11 a month, and I have an itemized statement to prove it. My favorite dishes are apples, eggs and rice. I avoid meats and indigestible foods. They tear the vital organs and put them out of use."

Riley saves 96 per cent. of his salary. He is a man of strong personality, and is an excellent specimen of manhood. He is not a miser, and he declares he abhors the life of a recluse. He says he lives well, and he is the envy of the clerks who squander all their earnings and are heavily in debt. He never takes a drink and abhors coffee.

"I never took a drink and I have never used tobacco in any form," he said. "It is dead easy to live a life of economy and thrift, and there is no pleasure in spending all one's earnings in extravagant living. As a matter of fact, a quiet life was forced upon me. After being swindled out of several thousand dollars in my early life, I decided to retrieve my losses and to save some money. Poverty brings good results at times. It did me good and started me on the right road.

"How do I live on so little? Why, that's simple. My restricted diet, now that I have a good salary, is simply a matter of choice. It is the healthiest and happiest way to live."

GULF OF MEXICO.

Its Center Proved to Be More Than Two Thousand Fathoms Deep.

An elaborate report has just been received at the Navy Department from Lieut. Soley, U.S.N., on the Gulf Stream. Lieut. Soley has charge of the hydrographic office at New Orleans, and he shows conclusively in his report that the Gulf Stream has an existence in the Gulf of Mexico, a fact which has hitherto been in dispute.

According to Lieut. Soley, the stream flows into the Gulf by the Yucatan Channel, where the water is very deep, 1200 fathoms in the center, and flows out through the Straits of Florida, where the depth is less. The center of the gulf is a deep hole of large area, more than 2000 fathoms deep, and the water here is very cold. The main current of the gulf is a distinct part of the Gulf Stream. It comes from the equatorial current flowing westward through the Caribbean Sea, which is warm, with a temperature of 80 degrees, until it flows into the cooler waters of the gulf by the Yucatan Channel. The stream follows the general line of the coast until it passes out by Florida. There are some counter currents in the gulf. A notable fact is that the currents of all the rivers emptying into the Gulf of Mexico turn to the right, to the west, at Mobile, and the delta of the Mississippi, and to the south along the Mexican coast.

At least the Democrats of Illinois have an issue, whatever the party may have in other States. The question there is, who's a liar—Billy Bryan or Roger Sullivan?

"The oldest Mason" has again turned up, this time in New Hampshire. The public may now confidently expect soon to be informed of the reappearance of George Washington's body servant.

Like her population, the manufacturing interests of California are increasing by leaps and bounds. The bulletin of the Census Bureau shows an investment in manufacturing in the State of $282,742,201, an increase during the decade of $107,279,395. The next decade will undoubtedly chronicle an even larger increase because of the greater certainty of stable markets.

THE CLOSED SHOP—WHY IT CANNOT PREVAIL AND MUST NOT.

Labor unions all over the world are engaged at the present time in seeking to establish and to maintain the "closed-shop principle." The movement is causing no end of trouble in the industrial world. Wage earners are squandering thousands upon thousands of their hard-earned wages in an effort to build up and make permanent this labor monopoly, and bloodshed is a frequent concomitant of the effort. But the movement must inevitably fail. It contains within itself the elements of its own decay and dissolution.

The closed shop is wrong—wrong in principle, wrong in conception, and wrong in practice. It is so fundamentally and entirely wrong that it can never succeed in the United States, which is a nation dedicated to freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of conscience, and freedom of action under the law, which governs all.

Why is the closed shop wrong? The reasons are so many that it would take long to enumerate them all. A few will suffice.

Primarily and fundamentally the closed shop is wrong because it does violence to manhood rights that are inherent and inseparable from the individual. The closed-shop idea, carried to its ultimate and logical conclusion, would deny to men who work for wages the right to live unless they should become members of certain organizations, known as trades unions. A wage earner lives by the wages which he earns. To deprive him of the opportunity to work is the same thing in effect as to deprive him of the right to live. It is preposterous to assert or assume that any class of men have or can acquire the right to say to any other class of men: "You have no right to live. Get off the earth!"

Another unanswerable reason why the closed shop is wrong is that it violates both the spirit and the letter of the Constitution of the United States. The great charter of our liberties guarantees to every citizen under the flag full protection in the enjoyment of his natural and constitutional rights. It also guarantees equality of opportunity to all citizens, so far as the laws and the Constitution can provide such guaranty, and provides that no citizen shall be deprived of "life, liberty or property without due process of law." The closed shop would destroy equality of opportunity, and would deprive many persons of life, liberty and property without due process of law. It is, therefore, directly at variance with the Constitution, and this should be enough to condemn it in the eyes of every loyal citizen.

Again, the closed shop is in diametrical opposition to the spirit of the immortal Declaration of Independence, which preceded the Constitution and formed the basis upon which it was builded. "We hold these truths to be self-evident," says the Declaration of Independence, "that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." The closed shop would deprive all non-union men of these sacred and "unalienable" rights. Being directly in conflict with the Declaration of Independence, therefore, the closed shop is un-American and intolerable in a land where human rights are declared to be inviolable.

The closed shop is wrong and indefensible because, wherever established, it would work a bitter injustice upon a large class of workers. To any man who thinks, the fact is self-evident that the non-union worker has just as good a right to pursue his occupation unmolested as has the union worker. There is neither justice nor right in certain men's banding themselves together and demanding the exclusive right to perform all the work to be performed in a certain shop or a certain industry. Demands of this character are the quintessence of selfishness. They are based upon no logical ground, and from no reasonable viewpoint can they be defended.

Another objection to the closed shop is that it is essentially coercive. If it were established in this country to the extent that its fanatical advocates are trying to establish it, no workman in any industry could obtain employment without becoming a member of a trade union. Those already in the unions would have the power to admit or deny admission to whom they pleased. The same spirit of greed which impels unionists to demand the closed shop would lead them to refuse admission to the union to many applicants, in order to make firmer and more profitable the monopoly enjoyed by the few. The resulting injustice to the many is apparent.

Few persons are aware of the far-reaching significance of the closed-shop demand. As before pointed out, it can never be realized in this country. But if the closed shop could be established as the industrial rule instead of the exception, we should have practically a government of trades unions, by trades unions, and for trades unions. With every occupation closed to non-union workmen, the unions would enjoy a complete monopoly—which is precisely what they are aiming to accomplish—and would control the management of all industrial enterprises. The result would be industrial paralysis, a general withdrawal of capital from the channels of production, trade and commerce, a return to the free souphouse régime, and a beginning again at the bottom of the ladder.

President Calhoun has done a great service to San Francisco in announcing his unalterable opposition to the closed-shop policy which some of the union extremists are trying to force upon him. If the unionists are wise they will not force the issue further. To do so will mean a defeat for them which will be very likely to develop into a rout.

SUFFERING CHILE.

A dispatch just received at Washington from Mr. Hicks, American Minister to Chile, states that the suffering resulting from the earthquake which partially destroyed Valparaiso and several other towns in Chile is still acute. Minister Hicks appeals to the American people, through the Department of State, to send further aid to the stricken people, and to act in the matter as promptly as possible. He suggests that funds be forwarded to Santiago by cable. This appeal will not be in vain. Although the Chilean republic is thousands of miles away, in the southern hemisphere, the great heart of humanity throbs in sympathy with her suffering children. No people in the world are more prompt nor more lavish than the American people in contributing money and supplies for the relief of those who have suffered by public calamity. The great Chicago fire, the Johnstown flood, the Galveston disaster, the Baltimore fire, the San Francisco calamity—these are cases in point. In the case of the Chilean sufferers, there is need, it seems, for expedition, and the suggestion of Minister Hicks that relief be sent by cable is pertinent.

"THE GREAT UNTERRIFIED."

Today and tomorrow, and for yet another day, the eyes of the faithful who subscribe to the creed of the late lamented T. Jefferson, without knowing particularly, or very much caring what that creed was, will be turned toward Sacramento. Even now the clans are gathering, and the pibroch will be sounding, awakening the Sabbath calm of the capital city of the Golden State.

To make the matter more explicit, we are on the eve of the State convention of the California Democracy. The great unterrified are about to nominate a ticket from Governor down to Superintendent of Schools. The fact that this is a bad year for Democrats—as, indeed, most years are—makes no difference. A ticket will be put up just the same, with the hope that it will be elected. The Democratic party is a party long on hope, no matter how short it may be on votes.

There is always fun at a Democratic convention, and usually a fight. For these reasons the gathering of the clans is ever an event to be welcomed by a jaded and blasé world, all too serious with itself, and not taking half the chances to laugh that are offered to it.

What will be done at Sacramento in the present convocation no man may say. What a Democratic meeting is liable to do is beyond the ken of the gods themselves. It may prove a love feast, or it may put Donnybrook Fair forty miles in the shade.

The chances are, however, that the Democrats of California will go ahead making the old political blunders that their brethren are still making all over the country. They will take a fling at the hated tariff, throw rocks at prosperity, condemn the men who are pushing the nation ahead so far that no nation is in sight of it, and once more insist that we ought to go back to hard times and the painful life.

Let us watch the unterrified as they forgather during the pleasant days of the coming week. Let us throw care to the winds and prepare to laugh. A Democratic convention doesn't come every day.

AN IMMIGRATION CRITICISM.

A diplomat at Washington tells the Star of that city that the United States does not get as high a quality of immigration as that which goes to Brazil and Argentina, places one and one-half times more distant from the immigrants' homes than this country. He then proceeds to show the reason why this is so—that those countries meet the immigrant before he leaves the ship, bid him welcome, provide him lodgings after he lands, secure him work, and if he has any definite part of the country to which he would like to go, the Immigration Commissioners provide him transportation and speed him on his way. Having thus got the new-comer into the country and located, an easy means is provided for him to acquire citizenship, the requirement being practically that he show himself disposed to obey the law, and by his labor promote the general prosperity of the country. On the other hand, he says the United States treats the new-comer with almost suspicion, and imposes such conditions for citizenship as to make naturalization a veritable ordeal.

Of course, the diplomat making this criticism does not allow his name to be used in connection with it, so we can only surmise that he is a representative of one of the governments that is sending us an undesirable class of immigrants. No country is more willing than the United States to welcome the worthy immigrant, and the only reason why care is taken to determine the character of immigrants at the landing is because the steamship and other immigration agencies have been guilty of sending here hordes of the most undesirable people of Europe—those who have hardly intelligence enough to understand our system of government, nor the requisite health to save them from becoming paupers. These two things are practically all that is required of immigrants and they are the requirements that should encourage the better class of immigrants to come here. We cannot believe but that this is so, and that a more careful comparison of the immigration to both the United States and Argentina will prove it to be the case. We already have had a great deal of trouble with the naturalization of foreigners, in some of the States the national laws being practically nullified that political ends may be attained. To make the acquirement of citizenship easier would almost be to throw the door wide open to every foreigner that comes into the country, with the result that on election day a horde of ignorant voters who knew nothing about either the English language or the form of our government would be marched to the polls by scheming political workers and voted like so many automatons. Of the 300,000 or more immigrants coming here annually at least one-third are males, and likely to become citizens. At least one-fifth of this number comes from Italy, and the next largest number from Russia, but no objection is made to them because of their nationality. All that is desired is that they be healthy, intelligent and industrious.

Argentina cannot safely ask for less, and if she does, then the time will come when that country will find that a mistake has been made, and that the character of the government and the liberty and happiness of the people have been attacked, if not endangered. If this diplomat will himself make a better study of the real purpose of our legislation respecting immigration he will hardly compare again the "open door" of the United States with that of any South American or other country. When the time shall come that Argentina will not be in so much need of immigration for the development of its vast unpeopled territory, then we may hear a different story about the glad hand extended to immigrants. The United States welcomes all who will make good citizens. More than this cannot be safely done by any country.

GOOD AMERICAN BUSINESS.

It is good American business that, as the Manufacturers' Record says, quoting the census of manufactures of 1905, the number of wage-earners in the principal manufacturing establishments of the fourteen Southern States has increased from 717,469 in 1900 (census) to 856,825 in the calendar year, 1904, an increase of 139,356, or 19.3 per cent., while for the whole country the increase is about 16 per cent. The largest number of wage-earners in any one State is 94,714, in Maryland, and the smallest, 32,088, in Arkansas. The largest increase was in Louisiana, from 40,828 to 55,862.

It is also good American business that, again quoting the Manufacturers' Record, assessed property values in the South have increased from $5,266,594,044 in 1900 to $6,679,440,423 in 1905, an increase of $1,412,846,379. Of this large increase, one-third, or $432,476,176, was in the single year 1905. The leading increases in the year were $60,000,000 in Louisiana, $80,000,000 in Texas and $47,000,000 in Georgia. The 1905 assessment of each of the fourteen States, and the increase in each in the five years, are as follows:

	Assessment, 1905.	Increase, five years.
Texas	$1,139,000,000	$325,000,000
Kentucky	795,000,000	165,000,000
Maryland	705,000,000	89,000,000
Georgia	577,000,000	144,000,000
Virginia	554,000,000	74,000,000
North Carolina	460,000,000	154,000,000
Tennessee	445,000,000	49,000,000
Louisiana	396,000,000	120,000,000
Alabama	344,000,000	74,000,000
West Virginia	332,000,000	92,000,000
Arkansas	290,000,000	89,000,000
Mississippi	284,000,000	69,000,000
South Carolina	220,000,000	44,000,000
Florida	131,000,000	35,000,000

There is something peculiarly encouraging in that showing of marked progress, considering all that the South has had to come through to reach her present satisfactory condition.

The June orders of the United States Steel Corporation are reported by an officer of that world-leading manufacturing company as being "within a shade of being double those of June, 1905."

Exports of $1,744,000,000 and imports of $1,226,000,000, a total foreign commerce of $2,970,000,000, in 1906 fiscal year (the largest yet,) tell their own story.

According to the orders on hand, and the capacity of the manufacturing plants, our output of railway locomotives this year will considerably exceed 5000, or fully 500 more than in any prior year.

Traffic managers of western railroads say in their reports of a week ago, "No fear of declining traffic" (Burlington;) "We have no idle equipment" (Rock Island;) "Present conditions foreshadow freight and car blockades, such as never before experienced" (Atchison;) "There is not a manufacturing industry throughout our territory which has not all the work ahead it can do for the rest of the year" (St. Paul;) "We are short of equipment on practically every division of the system" (Northwestern.)

Inasmuch as reports like this have been reaching us week after week for the past year and more, it is no wonder that the gross earnings of the Northern Pacific show an increase of over $10,000,000 in this fiscal year; or that for the fourth week in June thirty-seven roads show an increase of $1,778,000, or 16.28 per cent.; or that flour rail shipments from Chicago in the week ended July 14, show an increase over the preceding week of 9872 barrels, grain 250,000 bushels and provisions 1252 tons, and by the lakes, increase of 3511 barrels of flour and 552,000 bushels of grain; or that the Erie Railroad has ordered 1600 freight cars for delivery in January, 1907, 500 flat cars for delivery next December and 10,000 tons of steel rails; or that the Great Northern has ordered 30,000 tons and the Lehigh Valley 10,000 tons, all for 1907 delivery; or that the total gross earnings of sixty-seven roads in June were $72,708,902, an increase of $8,503,670, or 13.24 per cent. over June, 1905, and that on a mileage of 92,655 miles, or less than one-half the total railway mileage of the country; or that Atchison's fiscal year earnings will total fully $78,000,000, an increase of approximately $10,000,000 over the prior fiscal year.

In view of all the work which needs doing in our country, it is good American business that we absorbed 674,000 immigrants in the first six months of this year, a gain of 65 per cent. over the first half of 1905.

It is also good American business that Southern California's citrus-fruit crop for 1906 yields its growers $20,000,000, after paying freights.

It is particularly good American business that in April, 1906, the banks of Los Angeles had $10,000,000 more capital, $74,000,000 more deposits and $94,000,000 more total resources than they had ten years previously; also that in 1905, their clearings were $337,000,000 more than in 1900, only five years before.

It is the best kind of American business that Los Angeles possesses men and capital equal to the grasping, profitably, of each and every business opportunity, as it arises.

W. J. Bryan is to visit Chicago next month, and is to be received with as much eclat as his poor but honest compatriots in the Windy City are willing to pungle up for. Mr. Bryan, it is understood, is now engaged in writing his impromptu speech for the great occasion. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that Roger C. Sullivan will be among those not present.

SUNSET ON THE MOUNTAINS.

Now breathes the last farewell of parting day
From range to range along the golden peaks,
While down the valleys darker glow the shades,
And close to earth the quail in coveys lurk
And smaller birds are fleeting where the cool,
Pure water waits to bid them pleasant dreams.

A moment of suspense, while all the hills
Are tip-toe for the sun's good-night caress.
The live-oaks hush their murmur, and the sage
Wafts all its day-warm incense on the air.

Far in the west, an amber aureole
Widens to near the zenith, where it pales
To faintest green inblended with the blue.
A line of brightness that forbids the gaze
Flames on those farthest mountains. Lo! the sun,
With one ineffable great look of love
Is gone.

A sigh uplifts from all the earth,
As when the best-beloved vanisheth.

Now comes a gentle, melancholy wind
Adown the canyons, and a purple veil
Is drawn with her soft fingers where she goes.

High on the craggy pinnacles, a look
Of having seen a vision lingers yet,
While phantom sentinels—the yuccas pale—
Take up the night-watch over all the wilds.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER

[Staff Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA CRUZ, Sept. 7.—Prominent State politicians predict that the Republican ticket will carry San Francisco in November, although they think Gillett and Secretary of State Curry may not poll so large a vote as their fellow nominees. In Alameda county, too, I am told, these two candidates are likely to drop behind the rest of the ticket to some extent. It is estimated that the total vote in San Francisco will not be over 50,000 in November, and it may not be as great as that. Gov. Pardee lost that city four years ago by about 3000 votes, while Gage carried it at the previous election, and it was carried by the Democrats for Budd in 1890. Ruef's followers got howling drunk and loosened their tongues to such an extent that their attitude at the general election was indicated clearly. Most of them vowed openly that they would knife the ticket, but in later moments of clearer-headedness they may change their minds, for it will be the concern of the little curly boss now to roll up a good Republican majority if he expects to receive any patronage consideration from the administration. Besides, Ruef hopes to elect a number of members of the Legislature and to fill numerous local offices, and he hardly can expect to do these things if he cannot keep his men in line for the ticket right down the line.

The outcome of the convention was a sore disappointment to Ruef. It was worse than that to the gang that counted upon him to dictate the nomination of Governor. The failure to attain results showed plainly that, after all, he is boss of nothing but a city that now is existing under abnormal conditions and that his present power is likely to slip away from him just as soon as the better element regains its poise and once more enters the political arena.

One of the odd sights of the convention was the spectacle of one-time Republican leaders wearing "guest" badges, while the riff-raff that once blacked their shoes and sold them drinks blossomed forth with the blue badges that admitted them as delegates to the convention floor.

Yesterday's nomination of E. P. Colgan as State Controller for the fifth consecutive time would make it appear that he has a perpetual lease on the office from the Republican party. Colgan, whose home is at Santa Rosa, has been in office for sixteen years, and the end of his coming term will mark a fifth of a century of official life. Secretary of State Charles F. Curry has held that place for eight years and had no opposition for renomination. Atty.-Gen. Webb and State Printer Shannon are the other officers who apparently made good to an extent warranting their renomination.

Easy as it appeared for Walter Parker to swing the nominations yesterday just as he wished them to go, it is known that when he came to Santa Cruz with the Los Angeles delegation he did not know just where he would get off. There were delegates in his own camp who, while ostensibly for Gillett, were believed to be playing double. There were others known to be openly for Pardee, some of because they had received favors the Governor and felt in duty to stand by him to the last. the uncertainty with respect to delegates that made the situation ing to the machine boss, and the same lack of cocksureness had the situation in doubt had been placated and had swing his San Francisco delegation Gillett.

As a matter of fact, and in the optimistic figures he gave out fore the opening of the conv Parker could count on not more three or four votes above the needed to nominate Gillett on the ballot. There was the danger some of the delegates might swing the last minute, so it was not strange that adjournment Wednesday afternoon until late day morning was decided upon.

It was during this recess period Parker and Ruef got together cessions were made to the curly that caused him to promise to Gillett in spite of the threats Francisco laborites to wreak geance on their leader if he supp the Congressman.

Councilman Theodore Summerland of Los Angeles, through his nomination for Railroad Commissioner, one of the best places in the gift the State. The salary is $4000 and there are liberal allowances mileage, an expense, as one agine, that would be extremely the case of an official who such close contact with the Orrin L. Henderson, who gives office with reluctance, never was to complain that his duties for four years have been very onerous job is "quite some" as compared that of Councilman.

Warren Porter is likely to be thing more than a figurehead office of Lieutenant-Governor, ally if the people at the next adopt the constitutional amendment which fixes the salary at $4000 and adds to the duties of the by giving the incumbent super if not direction, of the affairs ous State institutions. Porter bition to be Governor. It hoped until the last that he slip in this year by reason of certainty that prevailed for He took the second place with grace, however, and his many in this county, where he was clare that he will be a great to the next State administration.

The Lancer.

[For this week only the Lancer exudes sweetness and sheds light.]

Mr. Lancer: I have been reading your column for some time in the hope of finding in it a cheering, helpful word for something or somebody, but I am grievously disappointed. You make ferocious attacks and cynical comments. It is, or should be, the mission of the press to exert an uplifting influence, to commend the worthy, be charitable to the erring, chronicle good deeds and be a beacon light to lead poor, stumbling mortals through this vale of tears. Have you no milk of human kindness in your breast? Can you not dip your pen in something sweeter than gall and wormwood? I earnestly entreat you to put aside unkindly thoughts and give us something helpful and cheery for a change.

T. F. B.

Los Angeles, Sept. 1, 1906.

Virtue Appreciated.

The Lancer has watched men and events for a whole week with an eye single to meritorious conduct and commendable acts, and has discovered a surprising number of persons worthy of praise. There is so much virtue in this community that it is possible only to refer briefly to some of its more conspicuous manifestations.

So far as the Lancer can ascertain, all the ministers in Los Angeles abstained last week from profane swearing and wife-beating.

Readers will be pleased to learn that E. Tobias Earl went to church last Sunday and kept cold sober for the entire week. Perseverance along that line will be very gratifying to the friends and neighbors of E. Tobias.

It is pleasant to be able to say that the cashiers of several banks took in large sums of money from depositors during the week, and didn't run away to Mexico with the money. With the modesty of the truly virtuous, they shun notoriety, and their aversion to seeing their names and good deeds emblazoned in print therefore is respected.

The members of the W.C.T.U. have resolved that hereafter they will use no beverage stronger than a mild infusion of tea, and at last accounts they were adhering firmly and nobly to the resolution. Not a single member has been sent to the chain-gang for chronic inebriety since a week ago last Saturday. It is peculiarly gratifying to be able to say with authority that the automobile-load of ladies, who [illegible] down Broadway at 2 a.m. last Sunday, waving empty champagne bottles and singing "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am," were not members of the W.C.T.U.

The Lancer has inside information from the best sources that Senator [illegible] Pendleton has not recently appeared in the role of red herring at the end of a string; that he has not, in weeks, introduced fake or cinch bills in the Legislature, held up any [illegible] for a price on his vote, sold out to legislative jobbers, picked [illegible] or stolen pennies from a blind [illegible]. The Senator is entitled to the highest praise for his perseverance in the path of virtue. The [illegible] report that he contemplates su[illegible] face for defamation of character is without the shadow of foundation.

[illegible] was no slouch of a poet in [illegible] and Pope could write creditable rhymes of a sort, but out here [illegible] of the sunset sea there [illegible] singer who puts the whole [illegible] verse-carpenters on the blink. [illegible] stirred up a bit of a row, and [illegible] heavily on the literary [illegible] neither of them could write [illegible] to get himself arrested [illegible] of court. Our own twilight [illegible] alone enjoys the distinction [illegible] his poetry read in court, and [illegible] passed upon by a benchful [illegible].

[illegible] close of day, when the shadows [illegible] and homeward the real estate [illegible] plods his weary way, the Los [illegible] nightingale breaks into song [illegible] the worn toiler of the city [illegible] liquid notes. How sweetly [illegible], for instance, are lines like > [illegible] he was Assessor, and used to [illegible] charms;

> [illegible] than he more adamant to corporation charms;
> [illegible] so cynical and bland foretold a [illegible] raise—
> [illegible] "Boo at them," was his only [illegible] phrase.
> [illegible] politics.

[illegible] other poet ever had the happy [illegible] of making his meaning clear [illegible] footnotes. But for that asterisk [illegible] explanatory note that "war" is [illegible] a metaphorical allusion to the [illegible] of the Southern Pacific and [illegible] Parker, the reader might draw [illegible] inference that Ben Ward [illegible] fighter of the Revolution or [illegible] other brand of military veteran, [illegible] course, that would detract [illegible] the charm of the poem; it would [illegible] a false note.

[illegible] the verse, when you come [illegible] asterisk you suspend the flow [illegible] melody for an instant and put [illegible] into a minor key. It gives [illegible] effect and breaks the monotony of the rhythm.

[illegible] all this broad land there is no [illegible] our twilight bard. While [illegible] Angeles has Sammy, her nights [illegible] filled with music, and the [illegible] that infest the day shall fold [illegible] like the Arab and silently [illegible] away.

[illegible] cannot withhold admiration [illegible] indomitable champions of [illegible] of freedom, the union labor [illegible] and committees of persuasion, [illegible] in upholding their sacred [illegible] to hold all the jobs and their [illegible] determination to abolish [illegible], even if they have to exterminate the wage slaves, cannot be [illegible] sufficiently. What a splendid [illegible] of the rights of labor was [illegible] attack at Hazen by a [illegible] of patriots upon a trainload [illegible] persons, who had sold [illegible] and bodies to grasping capital [illegible] actually proposed to work for [illegible] and polluting wages!

[illegible] depths of servile degradation [illegible] may have descended or [illegible] in other parts of the country, [illegible] Francisco, the noble unions [illegible] the inalienable right of [illegible] to hold a job after he has quit [illegible] have not come to such a [illegible] city by the Golden Gate [illegible] loathsome plutocrat who pays [illegible] anything to say as to who [illegible] them.

[illegible] forget the devoted missionary [illegible] of the moral suasion committee of the union iron moulders of [illegible], at the time of their [illegible] against the tyrant [illegible] actually had the arrogant [illegible] attempt to carry on work [illegible] strike?

[illegible] creatures were inveigled [illegible] arts of the unspeakable [illegible] owning iron foundries, [illegible] on the chains of the wage [illegible] missionaries sought them [illegible] argued with them. Gently [illegible] several members of the [illegible] of persuasion would hold [illegible] benighted creatures, while [illegible] sympathetically broke his arm [illegible] bolt. Such an appeal to [illegible] nature of a scab never [illegible]. The man invariably abstained from wage-earning for a long [illegible] in some cases permanent [illegible] effected.

[illegible] may deny that the world [illegible] true civilization and [illegible] sneer at human nature. [illegible] are noble souls who [illegible] that a non-unionist [illegible] work, there is hope of the emancipation of humanity from the curse of Adam.

The Pueblo's Guardian Angel.

But for the watchful care and wise guidance of dear old Uncle Heine, there is no telling what would become of Los Angeles. Uncle Heine is at once the wisest and the most modest of men. He knows he is supernaturally wise, but who ever heard him say anything indicating consciousness of superior knowledge? And he is a kindly soul withal, patient, with those who are foolish enough to disagree with him, charitable in his judgment of men and motives, gentle of speech and reluctant to enter into dispute.

It must be trying to one who has looked upon the world from the dizzy altitude of a New York sanctum and been the guide, counsellor and friend of all the great men of the times, to see the inept efforts of a primitive pueblo like Los Angeles to put on the airs of a real city. There is but one right way to do anything, and that, of course, is the way they do in New York. We all realize that, but being a primitive and benighted folk, living on the remotest confines of that Great American Desert, which, as all New Yorkers know, extends from the Palisades to the Pacific Ocean, we make an awful mess of trying to do things right.

But just when we are muddling things in our simple, ignorant way, good old Uncle Heine gently rebukes us and sets our wandering feet upon the right path. He shows us where we are wrong—that is, where we are doing things otherwise than in the New York way—and then Los Angeles meekly admits that she doesn't know what she is about and entreats Uncle Heine's forbearance.

It was good of Mr. Hearst to deprive himself of the guiding counsels of Uncle Heine, and send that great man out here as a missionary to Los Angeles sitting in darkness. There could be no more striking proof of Mr. Hearst's splendid unselfishness and love for the people. The Presidency would be an inadequate reward for his sacrifice. Los Angeles puts her trust in the three H's: Hearst, Heine and Howton, and they will carry her through.

THE CAPITAL OF THE STATE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—A few days ago Senator Marshall Diggs stated definitely in Sacramento that he was a candidate for the Governorship on the Democratic ticket, provided he had the party behind him. But this seems now to be rather a big proviso. Every one agrees that Diggs is a good man, but it must be remembered that virtue is not always a political recommendation, and there is a strong party in the capital who would rather see some one else get the nomination. Tom Fox, for example, who belongs to the old guard, makes no secret of his preference for Dist.-Atty. Seymour, and although Fox was recently pushed somewhat unceremoniously into a back seat by the would-be reformers he did not stay there very long and now his opinion is received with as much reverence as ever. A prominent member of the organization who is said to be very close to Fox said a few days ago: "I know Seymour has said that he is not a candidate, but he has not said that he will not be a candidate. Should Pardee not be nominated I have no doubt that just as soon as the Republican State Convention nominates Gillett, or whoever it may be, Seymour will immediately announce his desire to represent the opposition." It would be hard to imagine any terms more precise than those used by Seymour in declining the fight, but it is open to men as well as to women to change their minds, and we may yet see him enter the lists.

That the American Federation of Labor should attack Candidate Gillett on the ground of a want of sympathy with labor is not merely an incident in a fight, but it has a national significance. It is a revelation of what the American Federation actually requires of its creatures in the way of abject subservience. If there is any man in the State who is a friend of labor it is Congressman Gillett. He himself worked in a logging camp until his ability carried him into public life. But in sentiment and sympathy he is as much a laboring man today as ever he was, and he will never be anything else. His services to labor have not been merely an obedience to the dictates of a party, but they come straight from his heart, and because he knows, and does not wish to forget, what the life of the working man actually is. But upon one occasion he failed to come up to the mark and to fall down and worship. When the injunction bill came to a vote Gillett was sick in bed. I do not know how he would have voted, and presumably Gompers does not know, but that one abstention and from such a cause is enough to blacklist him in the eyes of the American Federation and to cause the thunderbolt of denunciation to be launched against him.

Now this incident has disgusted a great many labor men in San Francisco and elsewhere in the North who know that the legitimate interests of labor have no more staunch and sympathetic defender than Congressman Gillett. It is not a mere matter of stupidity nor arrogance, although both are intolerable enough. It is simply a move in a game, an effort to hoodwink the people. Gompers knows very well that he has no valid complaint against Gillett and the more intelligent unionists know that he knows it. Why, then, does he use them as pawns and try to trick them into an action with an ulterior and undeclared object?

There are now plenty of keen observers who say that the walls of San Francisco trades unionism are about ready to fall. The fact is that these unionists are too stupid to maintain their hold upon the public confidence. That they should allow themselves to be fooled is their own affair, but when the fooling means the grave discomfort and danger of the people it is going too far. No one now attempts to deny that the car strike was a move of Hearst against Schmitz, and a move that the whole city had to pay for in an inconvenience that quickly became intolerable. There were practically three parties to that strike—Schmitz, Hearst, and the people, but the people are entirely ignored and no one takes the least notice of their claims and rights. The labor unions are now simply so many catspaws for the ready use of the political monkeys, who know how to make them work, and every fresh move is at the cost of the people. So long as labor unions are working for their own obvious interests there will be some public sympathy, or at least some public comprehension, but toleration will stop short when it is found that they are simply blundering about upon other people's corns in order to serve the ambitions of greedy politicians, who do not care a cent for them and are merely trading upon their gullible stupidities. To denounce Gillett was a bad move, and the car strike was a far worse one, and it simply means that the unions have ridden rough shod over the public conveniences and sentiments long enough. There is at last some recognition that San Francisco is disgracing herself in the eyes of the country by harboring and fostering the most selfish ambitions at a time when there should be one common effort for the common good.

Gold Teeth or Bridge Work

This method does away with plates, and while more expensive is certainly much more satisfactory. You can bite and masticate with these teeth just as you could with natural teeth. We do so much of this work and save more time by the Schiffman Method that we are enabled to save you about 25 per cent. In delicate work like this, where practice is such an element in success, does it not seem reasonable to suppose that a dentist of natural ability, wide experience and unusual practice, can do better work and cheaper than others of less experience and small practice, even if they have the same natural ability? Reason answers for us.

It is with pleasure that I state that I have had several teeth filled by Dr. Schiffman, and that he removed the nerve and filled the root of one of my teeth, and put on a porcelain crown which cannot be distinguished from a natural tooth, all of which was done without pain. JUDSON R. RUSH, of Davis & Rush, Attorneys, 217 New High st.

I have had porcelain crown work and some filling done, and also had ten teeth and roots extracted by Dr. Schiffman, and take great pleasure in recommending his method to any one wishing dental work done without pain.

MRS. C. W. F. SCHRAMM,
Mother of Paloma Schramm, corner of Austin and Wadsworth.

I had my upper and lower teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain. I have since had an upper and lower set made and they fit fine. They fit so tight that it is with difficulty that I can remove them. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Schiffman and his work, and advise every one needing work done to patronize him.

MRS. F. J. KELLOGG,
146 W. 14th street.

Dr. Schiffman has done bridge work, and made crowns and extracted teeth for me and without any pain, and in the very best manner. I am pleased to recommend him.

C. H. PENROSE, 135 S. Main st.

Dr. Schiffman has done a large amount of bridge and plate work for me, which was done in a very satisfactory manner.

A. J. BRADISH,
Chief of L. A. Detectives.

I have had a number of teeth extracted and filled, and a six-tooth bridge made by the Schiffman Dental Co., and find the work very satisfactory, and was perfectly painless.

IRA L. HAAS, Riverside, Cal.

I had thirteen sore teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman. I dreaded before he began, but it didn't hurt me one bit.

A. Y. ROBINSON,
"Sandab Jack," Avalon, Catalina.

Dr. Schiffman has extracted ten teeth for me, and I never felt the least annoyance, the operation being absolutely painless. He has made me a set of teeth that are highly satisfactory. They fit perfectly and feel fine.

I cheerfully recommend the doctor as a conscientious, efficient, painstaking dentist to any and all that require his services.

MRS. W. L. EWING,
1142 E. Thirty-eighth st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted eight teeth for me without a particle of pain, and afterwards made me a full upper flexible plate which fits me perfectly.

I have given them a good test, as it has been a year and a half since they were made. I gladly recommend the doctor to all who are in need of dental services.

MRS. EMMA BIRKLE,
420 South Moline avenue.

I am pleased to state that Dr. Schiffman fitted me with both upper and lower bridge work, which I have worn for over a year with perfect ease and satisfaction.

MRS. CHAS. E. PACKMAN,
1215 Berendo st.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth, I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffmon extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain.

We do not mean that $1.84 in currency is actually enclosed in each package of Pillsbury's Best Breakfast Food—Vitos. But we do mean it saves you that much over the ready-to-eat kinds. Besides you get "Pillsbury" quality, and that's always the best. A package containing two full pounds costs 20 cents. When prepared, it makes 12 pounds. The ready-to-serve kinds, containing about ¾ of a pound to the package cost 15 cents. A full pound would cost about 17 cents. 12 pounds would cost $2.04. So the difference between 20 cents and $2.04 indicates the saving when Vitos is used—$1.84. Use Vitos regularly. Put $1.84 in the bank every time you buy a package. PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The question of tunnels under Hill and California streets was revived by the filing of a petition at the City Hall yesterday, and it is said that both tunnels will be constructed with street-railway tracks through them.

City Health Inspector Drummond gave the order and saw sewage-grown lettuce plowed under in Chinese gardens.

Humane Officer Dearborn has uncovered a very sad case of abandonment at Burke Station, and yesterday the husband of the woman, William F. Jack and his paramour were placed under arrest.

In the Police Court a contractor was fined on account of a row arising over a "blind" fence.

AT THE CITY HALL.

DUAL TUNNEL PROPOSITION.

BORES WILL GO UNDER HILL AND CALIFORNIA STREETS.

People Ask That Sidewalk Be Demanded in Latter One—Charter Revision Committee Will Make Provision for Voting on Freight-Carrying Privilege.

The Hill-street tunnel proposition is likely to appear before the City Council again on Tuesday.

Nobody supposed when the ordinance providing for the building of this tunnel, and another from Temple street to Sunset boulevard, was sent to the committee of the whole, that this was the end of the matter. It is now in the air that the tunnels will certainly be constructed, with street railway franchises through both, instead of spur-track franchises, though it is scarcely probable that the ordinance will be finally disposed of at the next meeting of the Council.

A large number of residents of Sunset boulevard yesterday filed a petition in the office of the City Clerk, asking that sidewalk demands be placed in the proposed ordinance calling for the construction of a tunnel under California street, from Temple street to Sunset boulevard, and that the tunnel be made the full width of the street. The same provisions are made for the Hill-street tunnel, in the ordinance as at present framed.

This is what was termed the "second tunnel" when the matter of the Hill-street tunnel was under discussion, and which was pigeon-holed with the latter when it went to the committee of the whole, several weeks ago. This petition will at once revive the ordinance which contemplates the building of both tunnels.

Councilman Smith, who led the discussion that sent the ordinance to the committee of the whole, has expressed himself as unalterably opposed to granting either franchise in its present form. Both call for the laying of "spur-tracks" of the Los Angeles Pacific Railway through the tunnels. The wording of the ordinance is such as to throw the tunnels open to freight traffic as far as First street, and while the Council seems to be in favor of permitting the carrying of freight under proper regulations, they do not favor the plan proposed.

"I am heartily in favor of permitting the street railways to transport their freight through the city," Councilman Smith said yesterday, "under proper restrictions. Some such provision seems absolutely necessary to the business of the city, but I will not be a party to granting any such rights until the people have voted them. A provision could be made requiring all fright cars to pass through the city at night, say after midnight, without detriment to regular traffic on the streets, and this will be one of the questions put up to the charter-revision committee which will be appointed soon."

THE SEWAGE PROBLEM.

DRAWING LINES TIGHTER.

Inspector Drummond of the City Health Department reported to the Board of Public Works yesterday that he had been over the gardens on Western avenue, where he had found Chinamen irrigating vegetables with sewage and that no sewage had been used since his first visit. He also stated that the sewage-irrigated lettuce had been plowed under by his order, so as to prevent its finding its way to market, and that tomatoes and other vegetables show signs of dying from want of water. This is a sure sign that the Chinamen are, for the present at least, standing in awe of the law, as well as of the possibility of having all water cut off from their gardens.

R. D. List and G. W. Dryden, men who rent land to the Chinamen, also appeared before the board and said they would see to it that no sewage was improperly used by their tenants. They will make lists of the vegetables that may be grown with sewage (those which are usually cooked,) and furnish copies to their tenants, and Mr. List said yesterday that he would notify his tenants that they must grow none of these or he would shut off the water entirely.

The members of the board feel that they are getting the matter fully under control, and declare that they will protect the people from the violators of the law at all hazards.

Wild-Eyed Banquet.

"Spook" Howton was busy yesterday rounding up officials about the City Hall for the banquet of the wild-eyed bunch from the Sixth Ward. Howton calls it the "second annual banquet for celebrating the ratification of the recall principle," and every fellow who stands in awe of the spook statesman is held up for a pair of tickets at $2 each.

The feed is to be given at the Bristol Café on next Saturday night, and is probably designed to give the Sixth Warder a boost as an independent candidate for Mayor. The tickets seemed to be a drug on the market yesterday.

New Engine-House Site.

The Land Committee of the City Council yesterday decided on a lot located at Main street and Vernon avenue for the new engine-house for that section of the city. It is located in the Sixth Ward, but only outside the Fifth by the width of the street. The price agreed upon is $1850 and the purchase will be made by the City Council on Tuesday.

BOUND TO DIE.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—Asphyxiation, chloroform and drowning were the methods used by Claude Unger, a wealthy business man who committed suicide at his home. His body was found in a bathroom lying in a tubfull of water. About his head and over his mouth was drawn a cloth which had been saturated with chloroform and the gas in the room had been turned on, but not lighted. Ill-health is supposed to have been the cause.

IN THE POLICE COURTS.

Contractor Fined Fifty Dollars as Result of Row Over a High "Blind" Fence.

"Blind" fence building resulted in Miles Hemenway paying $50 fine in police Court yesterday morning. Hemenway is a contractor and lives at No. 328 East Fortieth street. Mrs. J. Sims, who lives next door, was complaining witness in the action—one for battery.

Hemenway built high "blind" fences around his yard. Neighbors did not like them. Complaints were frequent on the subject. Last Monday morning Mrs. Sims voiced objections. Brisk altercation followed. Words grew heated—then more heated. Hemenway alleges the woman struck at him. She used, he says, a broom. And he came back with a hammer.

When these things had been told the court, he found Hemenway guilty.

Fined as Vagrants.

Jennie Martin and L. W. Stanley, the man who lived with her, paid fines of $25 and $50, respectively in Justice Rose's court yesterday. A patrolman arrested them as vagrants. Stanley was for a time a waiter in the Imperial. The woman is a frequenter of similar places.

Ellsworths Held.

George Ellsworth and his wife, Matilda, were arraigned before Judge Rose, charged with grand larceny yesterday. Preliminary examination was set for Tuesday. The pair have admitted extensive shoplifting. Bail was fixed in the sum of $1500 each.

Fined, Pays, Smiles.

Ross Foster of No. 17 Chester Place paid $10 in Justice Rose's court for auto speeding yesterday morning. Officers caught him in front of the Lankershim just as he and a party of friends were leaving the big black machine which had gone too fast up Broadway for several blocks. Foster missed a hunting trip by the arrest, but paid his fine with a cheerful smile.

THOUSANDS WILL SEE BIG CRASH.

COLLISION OF LOCOMOTIVES TO BE GREAT SPECTACLE.

Giant Passenger Engines Will Be Hurled Together at Speed of Fifty Miles an Hour—Small Army of Police and Private Guards Will Keep People Out of Danger.

Unique among the entertainments available in the vicinity of Los Angeles will be the locomotive collision at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Agricultural Park.

Two big passenger engines which have seen active, hard service over the Salt Lake Railroad will come together at a speed of fifty miles an hour. The impact will be terrific. When a total of 301,000 pounds of iron and steel crash together the result, with its grinding tearing roar and bursting of steam pipes and boilers, will be an inferno for a few moments.

Unusual preparations have been made for the exhibition. Over $14,000 has been expended in the purchase of the engines, the laying of about one mile of railroad track and the incidentals necessary to the success of the venture.

Today the park will be open to visitors and an exhibition run of the two big engines will be made. The engineer of No. 13, one of the locomotives, is J. E. Stander, who has been with the Salt Lake Railroad for two years and was for fifteen years with the Northern Pacific Railroad.

The man at the throttle of Engine No. 23, the other engine, will be P. M. Raymond who has also been with the Salt Lake Road for two years. The men are among the best known engineers for rapid passenger service on the steam railroads of the West. They promise that they will have at least a speed of forty miles an hour when the engines collide and say they will do all they can to make the speed exceed fifty miles an hour.

The track is slightly less than one mile long and at both ends it has been raised about five feet thus giving a gradual dip toward the center where the impact of the two iron horses will take place.

For the last several days the engineers have been operating the engines over the track. Every bolt and nut has been tightened so that the greatest amount of speed can be gotten out of the metal steeds.

The two men who will operate the engines say they will not merely fire up the boilers, open wide the throttle and then jump, but they promise to stay with the machines until they have gained a speed of twenty-five miles an hour and then jump after they have opened wide the throttle.

This action together with the sloping character of the track and the fact that the rails will be sanded promises that the speed of the engines will be great.

In preparation for the exhibition due precaution has been taken against injury from the exploding tubes and boilers. The nearest point that the crowd can get to the machines will be 700 feet away.

To make this order stand a small army of detectives, policemen and special horseback officers has been secured. Superintendent Bally will be there with ninety Pinkerton detectives and Capt. Bradish will have thirty-four of his bluecoats on the ground. There will also be fourteen mounted officers in charge of two sergeants of police. These men will work on the inside of the big park and keep the crowd away from the tracks and within the bounds set by the management of the affair. On the outside of the park there will be thirty-five mounted men who will ride a complete circuit of the park and keep children and idlers away from the fence where there may be danger.

The exhibition is in charge of Morley and Hempel, who state that they expect an attendance of at least 30,000 persons. The street car service to Agricultural Park will be cut down to a one minute service from noon until evening.

At the gate there will be eight turnstiles and ten ticket takers which will facilitate the entrance of the crowds into the park. The price of admission will be $1. Donatelli's band will play.

A splendid concert was given in Asbury M. E. Church on Friday evening, under the direction of W. C. Kirkman. The house was crowded and the music was of a high order. The proceeds were for the benefit of the building fund of the church, which was just been improved at a cost of $15,000.

Tomorrow the Locomotive Collision takes place at Agricultural Park.—

CHICAGO AFTER SWEAT-SHOPS.

Exhibition Containing Model of the Rooms of Workers Will Expose the Evil.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—The "truth about sweat-shops" is to be shown in a realistic manner in Chicago this winter. A conference of settlement workers, labor leaders and others was held at the Hull House last night to map out a local campaign against further encroachment of the "sweating" system in the industries of Chicago.

An exhibition, folowing similar and successful affairs given in Berlin and London, will contain booths modeled in exact reproduction of the typical "sweat-shops" which men, women and children work in.

MYSTERY DEEPENS.

promises to go down in the history of crime as the "Cañon Mystery."

One of these stories was connected with the missing Emma Powers and the woman who accompanied Posey Horton when he discovered the body of the murdered woman seated beside a tree with its skeleton hands folded upon its silk-covered, blood-stained lap.

Mrs. Deturk, the woman who was present when the body was found in the cañon, is said to have employed Mrs. Powers in a little restaurant in Santa Monica just before her disappearance. In fact, it was reported that Mrs. Deturk and Mrs. Powers had not parted in a harmonious spirit, but that the latter had made a sudden and forcible exit from the restaurant. Jealousy, it was hinted, had something to do with the trouble. It was stated that some man was mixed up in the affair.

The coincidence of time, of the curious finding of the body, of the mysterious disappearance, of the quarrel, of the disappearance of Kent, and other matters which seemed to be links, slowly developed as time passed.

CLEW LEADS TO NAUD STREET.

Then the trunk left by the missing woman was located by a Times reporter, and the District Attorney was appealed to as to the law in the matter of securing from the trunk whatever evidence or clew there might be of the missing woman.

The matter was referred to the constable's office and Chief Deputy Constable J. D. Adams took hold of the case.

The trunk developed nothing further than to corroborate the facts as to the occupancy of the room by "Mr. and Mrs. Kent." But there was an express receipt for moving a trunk—supposedly the one in the room—although there was no name signed to it or telling from whom it was received.

This clew was followed and led to Naud street. This street is a little one running from Ann street parallel with San Fernando street almost to the river bed between the Main-street and Downey-avenue bridges.

The numbers on Naud street are the most mixed of any in this city. It almost seems as if any one who built a house took any number he chose to hit upon. The numbers begin in the 1400 column, skip 1500, then jump the next block to 1700 and on this block become so mixed that while some of the numbers are 1700-and-odd, some are also 1600 and 1500-and-odd, while 1500 in some cases face 1700 numbers on the other side of the street.

It was between a 1700 and a 1600 number that the house, No. 1551, was found where Mrs. Emma Powers had left her pretty little daughter in care of friends.

"STOPPED" THERE.

At first the people who live there positively denied that Mrs. Powers leved there, or had ever lived there. But the reporter had seen a picture of the little girl in the trunk at Santa Monica, and recognized her as one of several children there.

Then it was that the people of the house acknowledged that at one time Mrs. Powers had "stopped" there for a time, but had never "lived" there, even though her daughter was there.

Finally the whole story was told of how Mrs. Powers had left for Santa Monica upon June 19 last and had lived there for a time, that a month later she had returned to Los Angeles and was now working in a laundry, supposedly at Tenth and Main streets. "She was here only last Wednesday," declared the woman in charge. "She comes here regularly to see her daughter."

And thus it is that the mystery of the cañon is still more of a mystery, if that may be said, than ever before.

Who was the silken-clad blonde of the Temescal Cañon found gazing out toward the sea from sightless eyes waiting for the judgment?

Who was the man who quenched in that woman the pulse of life, who stilled the beatings of possibly a loving, trusting heart?

Attractive Bedroom Rugs

MUCH of the attractiveness of the bedroom depends on the character of the floor covering. This need not be elaborate nor costly but should, however, suggest simplicity, harmony and restfulness.

Having in mind these essentials, we strongly recommend Bigelow Body Brussels Rugs or Carpets for the bedroom. These are very serviceable, yet moderate in price. The designs and color effects are pleasing and attractive.

Our display of floor coverings is now at its best, as the new fall arrivals are on display. Many very dainty, artistic and exclusive effects are represented, including quiet monotones in blues, grays, pinks and greens, small Dresden patterns, delft blue and white in numerous pretty designs.

We call special attention to the facilities of our carpet department for making to order special shaped rugs.

The draperies and wall coverings are shown on the same floor as the floor coverings, thus enabling the entire furnishing of the room to be harmoniously executed.

STATE LEADS ALL IN FRUITS.

Census Shows Gains in Canning and Preserving.

Four Hundred Million Pounds Dried in a Year.

Increases Point to Greater Prosperity of Growers.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

The Census of Manufactures, 1905, says that in the canning and preserving of fruits and vegetables California leads all the other States by a large margin. The industry plays an important part in the manufactures of the State. In the census of 1900 it ranked third, but now it ranks first as to increase in the State's manufacturing. The comparative figures of this industry in the two censuses follow:

	1905.	Increase.
Establishments	167	28
Capital invested	$ 9,295,656	$ 4,816,621

Materials used, yearly	17,300,649	8,692,715
Yearly product	23,809,988	10,386,159

Almost all varieties of fruits of the best quality are grown in abundance in California, and great quantities of these fruits are canned, dried or preserved in some manner. The State has long been famous for its raisins, prunes, dried apricots, dried peaches, dried apples and dried pears, and its canned peaches, cherries, and other fruits, which are found in nearly every market of the world.

GAIN OF TEN MILLIONS.

The following table shows the amount and value of California's fruits and vegetables, canning and preserving, in the calendar year, 1904, known as the Census of Manufactures, 1905, the total of which is $23,809,988, an increase of $10,386,159 over the census of 1900:

DRIED PRODUCT LEADS.

Percentages of each classification in the census of 1900, and census of manufactures, 1905, are:

	—Census of— 1900.	1905.
Dried fruits	21.7	58.0
Canned fruits	64.7	29.3
Canned vegetables	16.9	9.9

These percentage figures show that the dried product has taken the lead in California's fruit industry. The dried fruit increase for 1905 over 1900 was $10,889,081, or 274 per cent.

In explanation of this remarkable showing the Census of Manufacturers, 1905, says: "The extraordinary increase shown in the production of dried and preserved fruits is explained largely by the difference in the methods in use at the two censuses. While the seeding and packing of raisins is mostly a factory process, the drying and preserving of fruits is largely and adjunct of agriculture, and, to a great extent, should be included in the statistics of that industry. At the census of 1900, in order to prevent a duplication in the statistics of agriculture and of manufactures, a division was made between the products of establishments conducted as factories and those of farms.

ENTIRE INDUSTRY COVERED.

Such a division could not be made in 1905, as no census of agriculture was taken in that year; consequently it was decided to include in the statistics of manufactures for that year the figures of the entire industry as returned by the packers, notwithstanding the fact that much of their output was the rehandled product of the grower.

From a combination of the figures of the census of 1900 for the industry as reported by both agriculture and manufactures, the total production of dried and preserved fruits, reduced to a pound basis, is found to be 332,445,472 pounds. Comparing this total with the 455,719,051 pounds reported in 1905, it appears that there was an increase of 123,273,579 pounds, or 37.1 per cent. Anyhow, it matters but little to the general result which way it is figured; the fact remains that California's industry for the canning and preserving of fruits is the leading one of the kind, and a great and growing proposition, making for greatly increased prosperity in the Golden State.

THE WORLD'S FEVER PROBLEM.

Dr. Senn's Seeks a Remedy in Africa's Most Dreader Malarial. Districts.

Dr. Nicholls Senn, who recently returned from Central Africa, hopes to solve the fever problem of the world.

In the several months of his sojourn in the dark country he studied every phase of fever from typhoid and malaria to the much-dreaded blackwater. He is now engaged on a voluminous treaties on the subject and hopes to have it ready for publication at an early date.

Dr. Senn's discoveries are eagerly awaited by the governments of the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Each country has its fever problem in tropical possessions and the medical authorities in every instance are at a loss for a permanent solution of the difficulties.

In German East Africa, especially, the fever scourge retards the progress of the colony, while the northern part of South Africa is avoided by settlers on account of the severity of the fever plague.

The Chicago physician, whose textbooks on cancer and surgery are in use in every medical college in the world, made a special trip to the heart of the fever country in the interest of scientific research and he claims to have been amply rewarded for his arduous journey.

Dr. Senn chose Beira, east coast of Africa, as his landing place and plunged at once into Fontesville, Chemolo, Masequaci, Umtali and way up the Zambezi River. These towns are known to African travelers as veritable death traps.

White men as a rule seldom escape their first attack of fever, if resident in the districts for more than twenty-eight days, and once in the system the disease cannot be easily stamped out.

Dr. Senn in his numerous experiments in those deadly neighborhoods endeavored to discover a remedy for checking fever in the earlier stages. The trouble in tropical climates has been the lack of anything calculated to stay a fever once the symptoms were visible. The victim had to go through the mill without hope of preventing the full course of the illness or without any deterring preparation. Outside the usual doses of quinine a fever patient in South Africa, the Philippines or anywhere else on earth could not be given a remedy checking the onward march of a dangerous disease. If Dr. Senn's labors meet with the success anticipated—and it is declared he has discovered the root of the evil—he will have opened up a new era for many of the richest mining districts in the world, neglected up to the present by reason of the deadly nature of the surroundings.

PUTTING DOWN SUICIDE.

Inefficiency of the Present Methods of Legal Punishment for Certain Crimes.

It is one of the disadvantages of a legal system based upon custom and precedent that so few occasions arise for revising our attitude toward crime and the criminal as public opinion grows progressively more enlightened and humane. Many newspaper readers must have read with a shock the brief announcement that a laborer named James Davis, who had made seven abortive attempts to commit suicide, was sentenced two days ago at the London Sessions to six months' imprisonment for his eighth attempt to end his miseries. Sentences so severe as this are comparatively rare, but still much too frequent. On May 26, for example, a servant girl named Alice Westbury, who had been betrayed and abandoned by her lover, was sentenced for attempting suicide to no less than twelve months' imprisonment—apparently largely because she was still so miserable when she came before the magistrate that she refused to speak, and was pronounced "mute of malice" by the jury. It is not the inhumanity of these verdicts that amazes us so much as their stupidity. Does the magistrate imagine that he will put heart and courage into a man so wretched that he tried eight times to take his life by sentencing him to six months' solitary confinement? Or will a year in "the second division" restore the self-respect of a betrayed woman and cause her to come out in love with life?

The chances are, of course, that the magistrate never asked himself such a question. The law very rarely allows itself to think of the individual with whom it deals, or to consider what effect punishment will have on his future. To ask questions of that sort would be enough to demoralize any legal system. What the law thinks of is the crime in the abstract and its effect on society.—[London Tribune.

Stops Drink Craving

Nothing is responsible for more suffering and misery both to the afflicted one and to his friends and relatives than drunkenness. It will be good news to many in this town that the Owl Drug Co. are selling a cure called Orrine, for which they are authorised to sell under a positive guarantee if it does not stop the drink craving and absolutely cure the drunkard, the money will be refunded.

Orrine is in two forms: No. 1 to be given without the patient's knowledge, and No. 2 for those who desire to be cured. The remedy costs but $1 a package. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or ask the Owl Drug Co., 320 South Spring, Fifth and Broadway, to tell you what they know about this remarkable remedy.

The Bidwell Cold Motor

It will supply the greatest necessity now known in the business world. The demand is so large that it will make all of us rich. If you want to get in with me on this you will have to be quick about it. The stock is selling like hot cakes.

My Patent Will Double the Capacity of Any Motor

PROF. BENSON BIDWELL.

Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the electric fan, just as it is run over the country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is!

I next invented the trolley car system, just as it is run today. I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock of the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 15 cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it, and every one who held onto it is a rich man today.

No Man on Earth Ever Lost a Penny He Invested With Me. If So, I Will Make It Good.

Next I invented the railway car telephone system. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from still or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

This is My Greatest Invention

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell cold motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads, because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 150 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell cold motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 60 or 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster, they would be more safe and sure than steam, cost less to operate and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell cold motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

The Opportunity of a Lifetime

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this, for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of this new patent.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profits on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all around.

I have made a lifelong reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this. This stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

In order to make it possible for every man and woman to get in with me on this big deal I have decided to sell the stock until Sept. 15 only, at the following prices:

WEEK'S-END SOCIAL NEWS.

Barlow Fete Dance Attracts Much Attention.

Children of Prominent Folk of Mexico Enrolled.

Engagements Announced and Weddings Solemnized.

The vaudeville show at the Barlow Fete promises to be one of the most interesting on the grounds and perhaps the unique feature of the show will be the sixteen children, all of Spanish parentage, who will dance an old California-Mexican dance, "El Sombrero Blanco."

The children range from 5 to 12 years of age, and have been drilled by Miss Lottita Corella, who herself takes a prominent part. It is due to Miss Corella's patience and skill that these little folks have been drilled so admirably.

They are connected with prominent families from Sonora, who are either sojourning in Los Angeles for the summer, or who have located for the purpose of educating their children.

The leading banker of Nogales, Sonora, Aurelio Sandoval, who has recently purchased a beautiful home on West Adams street, is perhaps the best known in this city, as well as Mexico. After the San Francisco earthquake, he received 200 telegrams from distracted parents, including messages from the President and Vice-President, whose friends had children in California. Owing to a recent bereavement in his family, Mr. Sandoval's children will not appear, but his little niece, Czarina Iberri, a tot of 5 years, will lead the group of dancers, with her little cousins of the same size, Amelia and Leonor, daughters of Señor Guati Iberri, one of the wealthiest business men of Guaymas, whose family spends the summers here.

Mrs. Emida Loaiza de Howard, for many years a resident of Los Angeles, who belongs to one of the finest old families of Hermosillo, and whose home is the rendezvous for many prominent Sonora people, will lend her little niece, Sara Torres, for this occasion.

Others who are prominent families and will take part are: Herminia Yberiri, Julia Wolf y Guzman, Maria Monteverde, Ofelia Monteverde, Ema Rambley y Carrillo, Margarita Belsan, Carmela Topia, Rosa Smith y Rodriguez and Inez Smith y Rodriguez.

The picturesque costume which the little folk will wear is known as "La China Poblana," and is called the national dress of Mexico. However, since Mexico has unfortunately followed the example of the rest of the civilized world, and has largely discarded individuality in dress, the "China Poblana," has almost disappeared, and is only worn as a fancy costume, as that of the Puritan is in America.

The charro, the man's national costume, has not been discarded, and is generally worn by the hacendados and Mexico's proudest body of cavalry have adopted it.

In the grand parade, September 16, when the trops are reviewed by President Diaz, this splendid group of horsemen with silver-decked uniform and red-blanketed horses, is the admiration of the beholders.

A basket filled with spicy red carnations and tied with red ribbons occupied the center of the table, and over the cloth were strewn red roses and dahlias. Place cards were tied with huge red satin bows, in which were caught red roses and ferns.

A jolly feature of the luncheon was the bride's cake, on which were outlined the name of Mrs. Hart, and also of Mrs. George Edwin Harber and Mrs. Ralph Weaver, two recent brides, who were guests. The Financial Opportunity of a Lifetime to Get Into a Money-Making Manufacturing Business on the Ground Floor

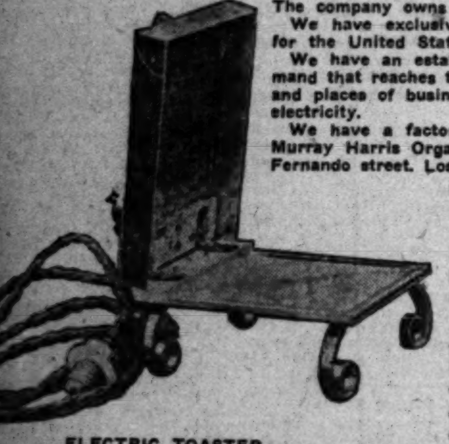
Let us put your money to work for you. It is the only way you will ever get ahead in this world. No man or woman in the world ever got rich unless he put every cent he could rake and scrape together into some kind of a business where the money worked for him. We want to do that for you. We have a business that is safe, honest, sure and without speculation. It is a business that has been in operation for some time past, and has proven an immense success.

What We Have



ELECTRIC TOASTER.
Toasts Both Sides of Bread at Once.

The company owns all the patents.

We have exclusive control of the patents for the United States and Canada.

We have an established market and a demand that reaches to every one of the homes and places of business in America that uses electricity.

We have a factory established in the old Murray Harris Organ Factory at 657-659 San Fernando street. Los Angeles, which has been leased for temporary use, pending the erection of the necessary buildings at Dolgeville, which is to be our permanent location.

Mr. A. M. Edelman, the architect, is preparing plans for the Dolgeville buildings which the company contracted to erect as a permanent plant.

Our Temporary Factory

is now in operation. In a few days we will again increase our force of workmen, to take care of present orders. Additional machinery has been ordered and will be installed as quickly as possible. In the meantime arrangements for the building of the permanent factory at Dolgeville are going on as rapidly as possible.

The Pacific Electric Railway has staked out the route of sidetracks to be built to the property for the handling of freight and arrangements are under way with the Southern Pacific Railway for their side tracks.

In the Dolgeville buildings arrangements have been made for plenty of air and light, and the grounds not occupied by buildings, sidings, etc., will be made as attractive as possible through plants, trees, lawns and shrubbery, the idea being to have the employees work among the pleasant and attractive surroundings.

What We Make

The Electric Heating & Mfg. Co. was organized for the purpose of doing a general manufacturing business in electric heating and cooking appliances. Hitherto there have been a number of devices on the market for both heating and cooking by electricity, but the amount of current consumed, as well as the cost of the appliances, has prevented a general introduction of this most perfect system.

Mr. Geo. I. Leonard has secured four patents, Nos. 768,764, 766,976, 753,716, and has others pending. Under his method of construction the expense has been greatly reduced and the appliances are now placed within the reach of every user of electricty.

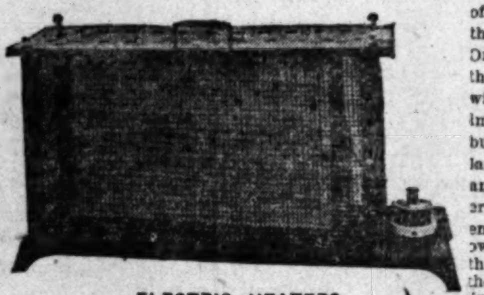
Three Vital Points

Several years were spent by the inventor in perfecting these devices. That stage has been passed. It took some time to overcome the difficulties of manufacture and to establish a trade.

There are three vital points in the success of any manufacturing enterprise. First, to invent something practical and useful; second, to manufacture it economically and cheaply; third, to sell it easily. Failure in any of these will balk an enterprise.

This company has surmounted all of these difficulties. We have the invention; we own our own machinery and our success in selling has been proven by the large number of orders on

Electric Flat Irons



ELECTRIC HEATERS.
Made in Several Sizes.

Illustrations are given herewith of a few of the appliances which this company manufactures. One of the primary objects of the company, and one which will eventually develop into an immense and most profitable business, is the equipment of large apartment houses, hotels and private houses with modern electric power plants, thus enabling them to generate their own electricity at a cost so low that the total expense for all the lighting, heating and cooking will be no greater than the present cost of lighting alone.

Something to Remember

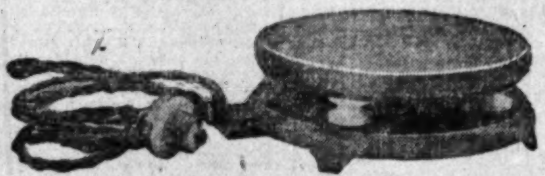
The Electric Heating and Manufacturing Company has acquired all the heating and cooking appliances controlled by Mr. Leonard, the rights, titles and interests to the factory manufacturing these goods, which has heretofore been located in Pasadena.

This plant has been moved to Los Angeles, where the company as before stated has a factory at 657-659 San Fernando street.

The Dolgeville Property

on which they purpose to erect their permanent factory consists of three acres, facing on the main line of the Southern Pacic R. R., and a spur track will be run onto the property by the railroad company, so that all freight will be delivered on their own siding.

Established Business



ELECTRIC DISC-HEATER.
Cooks Anything Requiring a Flat Surface.

Remember that you are not going into something unknown. These goods have an established market. The company now has many orders on hand, and are manufacturing the goods to supply the demand. The orders from Southern California alone are enough to keep the factory busy for some time to come, and these goods are made at an enormous profit.

THE FIRST ALLOTMENTS OF THIS STOCK WERE OVERSUBSCRIBED and the Right is Reserved to Advance the Price or Refuse Subscription at Any Time.

Bankers, merchants and laboring men have all been interested in this stock the past week, and the sale has been very rapid. If you want to secure any of this stock at the present price, you will have to act quickly.

Orders now in are beyond the present capacity of the factory to fill.

The advance in price will be rapid and certain. There will be no dilly-dallying with this proposition. The company is officered with well-known local business men whose reputation for integrity cannot be questioned. They are successful in other lines and know how to handle this. Contract with the land company at Dolgeville calls for the erection of building to start in less than ninety days and for completion without delay. Buy now and take advantage of the advance in price.

Office open Saturday evening until 9 o'clock.

Send all money by bank draft, express money order, P. O. order or registered letter.

I firmly believe that within a very short time this stock will be selling at several dollars per share.

If unable to call at my office, send for free booklet giving full particulars.

Under Small Expenses

We have purposely located the factory where taxes and operating expenses are low, thus reducing the cost of manufacture, where every employee can own his own home, thereby eliminating all probability of labor troubles.

Here is the Proposition

In order to extend our trade quickly and to go ahead and build a new factory and establish the business on a larger basis, a small amount of the capital stock of the company is offered for sale until September 8 only at 35 cents per share, par value $1.00. It ought to be worth $1.00 in a few months and undoubtedly will. When the new factory buildings are completed, this stock will undoubtedly be worth several times its par value.

No Other Line

Offers as great a field for profits as electrical manufacturing. There has never been a failure of any consequence. All are immensely successful. In addition to the household appliances herein described, we will manufacture and carry in stock a complete line of electric heating appliances for manufacturing and business purposes, including:

Laundry Irons, Immersion Heaters, Soldering Irons, Polishing Irons, Tailor Irons, Hat Irons, Glue Pots, Solder Pots, Laboratory Plates, Bar Urns, Restaurant Appliances, Air Heaters and Other Industrial Devices.

These goods are standard and will be guaranteed by us in every particular.

or sixty shippers, We buy and basis. That is, for the account of the growers on a fixed charge, regardless of what the fruit brings in market."

Commenting upon the crop situation in California, Mr. O'Neille said: "Conditions in California are extremely favorable. This applies to practically all crops, including vegetables and fruits. We expect to handle 50 to 60 per cent. of the citrus fruits from Central and Northern California. That portion of our fruit shipped to New York will be sold through Steinhardt and Kelly."

In talking about the changes afterward Mr. O'Neille said that the union would, for the most part, have the same agents throughout the United States as it had last year. A few other changes will be made at minor points. The amount of fruit handled by the union aggregated 6800 cars this season. When pressed for a reason for the change in agents here he said that it was for the good of the service and refused to say anything further.

Mr. O'Neille went from here to Philadelphia and Baltimore, and thence to Chicago, whence he will go home.

An attempt was made to find Mr. Francke, but he is spending his vacation on Cape Cod, and will not be back for some time yet. His friends refused to say anything if, indeed, they knew anything to say.

Steinhardt and Kelly, the new agents, compose one of the leading fancy fruit firms in New York. It has been said that no one in the downtown district devotes so much attention to strictly fancy fruits as they. They make a specialty of handling all the important varieties of fancy fruits, and have built up an enormous trade in this branch of the business. Their appointment is a distinct surprise, but is recognized as a good one. They have important connections, which will assist materially in selling the fruit.

MR. BLACK TO BE CONTINUED.

While no official information has been given out it is understood that the Southern California Fruit Exchange will continue D. D. Black as its New York agent. The organization will make a serious mistake if it does not. Mr. Black has the confidence of the trade to an unusual degree. He had it when he was representing the old agency, and conditions were extremely unsatisfactory. It has been easy enough for him to obtain any personal favors he asked. But sometimes the old agency was promptly turned down when it asked favors. This was no disparagement of Mr. Black. It was merely the manifestation of the feeling toward the organization he represented. Since the change the old animosity has disappeared and Mr. Black is even more popular than ever before.

As a representative where oranges are sold by auction no better man could be found. He has sat behind every important auctioneer in the country and he thoroughly understands that feature of the business. There is practically no possibility of his being mistaken or cheated. He also knows oranges. He has grown up with them. He has been prominently identified with the fruit interests of California for many years, and his experience has been gained by actual hard work in the business. There is no guessing about it. He knows what is necessary in the orange trade.

With Mr. Black continued in his place as representative of the Exchange there will be no friction with any other selling agency, and each seller will receive his just deserts. No favorites are played and there is no chance of making mistakes which will be expensive to growers and sellers. The effect upon the orange trade of New York will be beneficial if Mr. Black is retained, as he undoubtedly will be.

DEMAND UNPRECEDENTED.

With the orange season of 1906 ended and that for 1907 about to begin, interest centers in the future rather than in the past. Of course there is much discussion of what has been done during the past year, and a feeling of congratulation that all interests connected with the business have done so well. The market here has been unprecedented. It has taken eagerly everything that has been offered, paying therefor high prices and calling for more. The only thing asked was that the quality be good. Assured of that the buyers paid the prices asked without question.

All buyers and sellers of oranges in this market have done well this season. The fruit has come along in good condition and that has assured reasonably good prices. More care has been used in bringing the fruit here. There has been less of overloading and a closer following of actual market requirements. The display of this careful consideration of the needs of the market has resulted in improved business and higher prices. Buyers will not take what they do not want at any price, but buyers will take what they do want regardless of the price. That much has been demonstrated during the season just closed. It will be demonstrated many times over during the season to come if the same degree of care is exercised in bringing fruit here.

LEMONS SOLD TO TEN DOLLARS.

The lemon market has shown marked changes recently. During a hot spell which lasted a few days about a week ago the price advanced to $10 a box, the highest figure reached in ten years. And this price was paid for rather indifferent fruit. It was a case of being compelled to obtain lemons, and buyers did not care particularly what they paid for them. The sale naturally wasn't large at that figure, but the range downward touched $7.50 and $6, and sales at the low figures were more liberal. Conditions were, therefore, rather gratifying to the man who had lemons to sell; but he wasn't numerous.

After a few days of such sales the market declined again, owing to a shift in the temperature, and now it is down to $7.75 for the best grades of Verdelli. In fact, Verdelli and California are the only grades obtainable now. The season for the others has passed and the supply is entirely exhausted.

The Verdelli lemon is wanted at this season because of its solidity and its good keeping qualities. A lemon that will keep in such moist and warm weather as New York has experienced all through August deserves all the value that is placed upon it. The saving quality of solidity and freedom from decay is sufficient to sell it. The price will generally be a subject for negotiation, but it will be high. That much is sure.

Limes have also sold readily during the hot wave, and prices have been high, ranging around $6.50 for Dominica barrels and $5 for Jamaica barrels. Crates have sold at 85 cents for Dominica and 80 cents for Jamaica. The high price of lemons sent consumers to searching for substitutes, and limes advanced as a consequence. They do well enough for some purposes, but cannot always be used where lemons are needed. The chemical composition of the juice of the two fruits is different and this fact shows in the results where one is used in place of the other.

California lemons are selling high during the present scarcity, and liberal demand. Both fancy 300s and 360s are quoted at $7.75, which is pretty nearly record figures for California goods.

TEXAS OIL FIELDS.

Some Remarkable Changes of Product Noted Since the Chilean Earthquakes.

Some remarkable changes in the oil fields of Texas have been noted since the Chilean earthquake, which are ascribed by scientists and geologists to the seismic disturbances in Chile. A dispatch from Galveston to the Cleveland Plaindealer says:

"Remarkable changes in the oil fields of Texas since the Chilean earthquake are ascribed by scientists and geologists to the seismic disturbances. The authorities declare that the movements of the earth have opened new channels for the immense subterranean reservoirs of oil, and that the fields within 100 miles of the coast will soon be exhausted.

After the earthquake all the Texas fields began to show a startling and rapid decline, while an oil heretofore unknown in this part of the country has replaced the crude oil in three or four of the wells. This new oil is very light, and it is believed that there has been a general shifting of the oil and mineral-bearing strata.

WILLIE'S LEAGUE SIZED UP RIGHT.

The local Hearst sheet, maintained principally to give publicity to the Socialistic propaganda of its owner, imagines it has discovered another "menace" to the interests of "the common people." With a solemness that might pass for sincerity in any other than a Hearst newspaper, it asks: "Do Corporate Interests Control the Associated Press?" Following this question, which appears on the "'hind" page of the local Hearst organ, along with all the other figments of freakish imaginations, is a curious criticism of the Associated Press' judgment in handling the recent Republican State Convention at Santa Cruz and the "gathering" of Hearst Socialists under the name of "Independence League" at Oakland.

Attention is called to the fact that the Associated Press "handled columns of matter to the papers of this and other States" about the Santa Cruz convention, but Willie's hand-made "gathering" of Socialists at Oakland, bearing the Hearst title of Independence League, received only a measly fifty-word paragraph. Great is the indignation of Willie's local puppet editor therefor.

The "Indpendence League," be it understood, is the child of Willie R. Hearst's political managers. Seeing that their master could no longer expect anything from the Democratic party, and fearing to lose a "good thing" in the matter of campaign funds, they cleverly induced him to father the "Independence League." So much for that fact.

The Associated Press' representatives are supposed to know, and do these things. It is their duty to write of news of happenings according to their "news" value. A fifty-word item was the proper valuation of the Independence League "gathering" at Oakland, while the "columns of details" was also a correct estimate of the importance of the Republican State Convention at Santa Cruz.

While we are on this subject there's another point the public should bear in mind. The Los Angeles Examiner is not a member of the Associated Press, because it cannot get in. It therefore constantly seeks to build up public confidence in its own unreliable columns by calling the attention of its uninformed and undiscriminating readers to just such things as this "Independence League" incident.

NEWS OF THE MINES—Review of the Week's Diggings in the Southwes

ANOTHER MINING FAKE.

IT IS difficult, if not impossible, to verify or show the inaccuracy of all the statements made by promoters of mining enterprises and stock deals, but some assertions contained in public advertisements of promoters are so glaringly inaccurate or exaggerated as to attract immediate attention, and for protection of investors it is necessary to expose them. The following letter will be of interest to the public:

"To the Editor of the Los Angeles Times: During last month, my attention was called to an advertisement which appeared in a local (Los Angeles) paper of August 15, 1906, concerning a certain mining company in Inyo county, which is presided over by a board of directors, some of whom I am acquainted with, and who, I believe, would not willfully attempt to mislead the public in purchasing shares in a mining company of which they are directors. As there is a law in the statutes of California which makes it a felony for any one connected with a mining company to publish either by prospectus or through the columns of a newspaper, misleading statements which would tend to produce, or have a tendency to produce, or give to the shares of stock in such corporation a greater value or less apparent or market value than they really possess, the directors of this company would be liable under this law to prosecution for publishing the following, which is an extract taken from the advertisement:

"'We append the information of J. C. Callahan, M. E., on the geological and mineralogical formation of the giant thousand-foot ledge owned by this company in the famous Death Valley-Panamint gold fields. Mr. Callahan is one of the six engineers, geologists and mineralogists registered at the Smithsonian Institute, as representing the best knowledge, practice and experience of mining, or mining engineering in the United States. He says,' etc.

"A communication was addressed to the Smithsonian Institute, enclosing a copy of the advertisement mentioned, and under date of August 27 R. Rathbun, acting secretary of the Institute, replied, stating that he had received the advertisement, and concerning that portion of the advertisement quoted above he says:

"'I beg to say in reply that the statement contained in this advertisement is not founded on fact. That Mr. Callahan's name is not registered here either among the six engineers, or any others, and so far as I can ascertain from the correspondence, he is unknown to this Institution; and further, that in no case, so far as knowledge goes, has Mr. Callahan's name been furnished to any one.'

"As I know of several prominent persons in Los Angeles who have been misled by Mr. Callahan's statements of his connection with various mining enterprises, I believe that when such a glaring misstatement as that which was published is made, that those interested in mining in Los Angeles should be made aware of such misrepresentations. Callahan's name has been associated with several concerns which I have called to the attention of the postoffice authorities, and which I considered have absolutely no merit.

"Trusting you will give publicity to this matter, I remain,

"Yours very truly,
"L. E. AUBURY,

JOHNNIE IS GROWING.

Town Lot Business Is Active—Rich Ore Discovered in the Globe Tunnel.

JOHNNIE (Nev.) Sept. 5.—The townsite has shown the greatest activity during the past week, and the sale of the town lots, by which transaction $50,000 changed hands, seems to have put new life into the realty market here. One hundred tents have been ordered by the new owners of the town lots, and will be erected as temporary structures here until more substantial buildings can be built.

J. A. Hilliker, representing the Garvin Cyanide Extraction Company, which is fostered by Oregonian capitalists, left here a few days ago directly for Los Angeles. He gained a good impression of the district, and said: "The ore is decomposed and will crush easily under the stamps. A mill should be able to make a good record here. There is a belt running through here that contains rich ore having some silver and lead that will need smelting, but at present developments have been confined to the free gold belt and the showing is remarkable."

RICH ORE IN THE GLOBE.

One of the richest strikes ever made in this part of the country was made on the property of the Globe-Johnnie. While prosecuting development work, a tunnel was driven to tap the ledge in the shaft at a depth of eighteen feet. A ledge was encountered three and a half feet wide, assaying between $15 and $20. This ledge was followed for ten feet, when it suddenly blossomed into a bonanza, and was followed for five feet further, with values highly increased. The vein maintained the same width, but samples across the face of the ledge in several places showed assays between $700 and $800. Every stroke of the pick revealed this ore, which was shot full of coarse gold, and the end of the chute has not yet been reached. Another tunnel is being driven to tap this same vein at a greater depth, but it is not so far advanced as the upper tunnel, and up to now has only revealed a good body of milling ore. From an engineering standpoint, it was interesting, however, because it showed the formation of the fault fissures that are so prevalent in the Johnnie Consolidated ground and in the adjacent territory.

PROSPECTING WORK.

Owing to scarcity of timber, work has been stopped on the double compartment shaft of the Bullfrog-Johnnie. Lumber is expected to arrive any day, and then this work will be resumed. In the meantime, the men are Blue Bell vein. Everywhere indications are that the vein is vertical, doing prospect work, stripping the running about four and a half feet in width and assaying between $5 and $30.

The camp has been completed on the Leadville-Johnnie, and the forces have now commenced sinking on the vein.

In the Johnnie Consolidated work is continued on the raise from the 700-foot level, which is now advanced fifteen feet. In the north drift from the 800-foot level, two feet of ore have been encountered, which is termed "hight grade." The south drift from the same level is being extended in milling ore. The full face of the drift from the 500-foot level is in ore that averages $18. The ore dump is constantly growing, and all of it will be available just as soon as a mill is installed.

The work of the leasers in American gulch has shown nothing out of the ordinary during the past week, though all of the residents are jubilant over their prospects and none of them think of abandoning their strip of ground. Lease No. 21 is the topic. Here a tunnel was driven twenty-five feet before a color was obtained, but it is now in good ore, and the further the tunnel is advanced the better the values. The vein seems to be a continuation of the ledge from the Bowler lease.

AUGUST DIVIDENDS.

An indication of prosperity in the mineral industry of the United States is the payment of dividends by twenty-three companies reporting to the Mining World, of $3,887,500 in August, making a total of $15,412,644 for the eight months, and $121,729,739 since incorporation on an issued capital of $224,841,400. Over half of these dividends are credited to the copper companies, four having paid $3,061,500 in August, $10,184,244 since January, and $69,243,128 since their organization on a capital of $160,886,400. In the gold, silver and lead group, sixteen properties declared dividends of $521,900 in August, and $4,311,200 for the eight months, making a grand total of $42,994,611 since incorporation on an issued capital of $53,740,000. The Homestake gold mine in the Black Hills, S. D., carries the banner, having paid $109,200 in August, and $873,600, or 4 per cent. on $21,840,000 capital for the eight months, making the total dividends to date $15,206,750. The zinc properties declared dividends of $304,100 in August, $917,200 for the eight months this year, and $9,492,000 since incorporation on the issued capital stock of $10,215,500. Foremost stands the New Jersey Zinc Company, which pays quarterly dividends of $300,000, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and has declared since organization $9,300,000 on a capital of $10,000,000.

Many private and close corporations engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries are paying large dividends to comparatively few shareholders.

DRAINING BISBEE BASIN.

Water Problem Is Apparently Solved, Encouraging Condition of Copper Properties.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Sept. 3.—The water problem that has confronted Calumet and Pittsburgh for four years appears to have been conquered at last, for the water is now down to about 1600 gallons a minute. In the three years that this mine has been struggling with its water problem it has raised to the surface from depths varying from 950 to 1200 feet a total of about 76,000,000 barrels of water. This has been at an average rate of more than 2000 gallons per minute, and at times the amount was raised to nearly 3000 gallons per minute. The mere cost of fuel for this operation has averaged about $10,000 per month, and the pump installation is greater and heavier than ever has been placed in a western mine, excepting the Tombstone Con. twenty miles from here. Recently, while this shaft has been steadily sunk, the water has diminished materially and the water level in other shafts of the district has dropped correspondingly, indicating the drainage of the entire basin.

On the 1100-foot level of the Buckeye claim, near its Oliver shaft, the Calumet and Arizona has just cut large deposits of sulphides running up to 30 per cent. copper. The extent of this ore body is not known, but indications are for a considerable find. It lies near the center of the Buckeye claim.

YAQUIS ARE TROUBLESOME.

The Belen Mining Company, a Minneapolis (Min.) concern, which has a promising mine near Cumpas, west of Nacozari, has imported a number of Mexicans from Chihuahua, all heavily armed, to work at its mine and act as guard against Yaqui Indians, who are getting into that neighborhood, and are still very belligerent.

Shattuck, Pattison and others of this city have bought the Rio de Cobre mine in the Sierras de Tortillo, south of here, and will develop it immediately. The mine is copper and has been worked somewhat by C. B. Bell and others, its former owners.

TWENTY PER CENT. COPPER.

Grading is under way for the concentrating mill of the Inspiration Copper Company at Globe, and a large amount of machinery is being bought at El Paso.

The Arizona Commercial at Globe is looking better than ever in its Black Hawk and Copper Hill mines, where recent rich finds were made. The east drift in the fifth level of the Black Hawk is producing twenty-five tons a day of ore running better than 20 per cent. copper, and the deeper levels in both properties look stronger and better as work progresses.

Returns of ore shipped to Douglas by the Montana View mine show net returns of about $30 per ton, on a total of eight tons sent in last week. This ore carries thirty-two ounces silver, 6 per cent. copper and 2 per cent. iron, making it an excellent fluxing ore. Development will be increased, and a road will be built up the cañon to the property.

Reports from the Lake Superior and Arizona mine confirm all the news of rich strikes of sulphides in the second tunnel, with the Holt shaft in good material and the south drift in a contact that shows mineral indications.

END OF FAMOUS SUIT.

The Corralitos Mines in Chihuahua, Awarded to Candelaria Company After Long Litigation.

CHIHUAHUA, Sept. 3.—The greatest litigation over a mining title ever held in Chihuahua was brought to a final close when the courts of last resort handed over to E. DeGoncer, resident director of the Candelaria Mining Company, the affirmed court decision awarding the property to the Candelaria Company.

This litigation, generally termed the Irigoyen-Corralitos case, has been in the courts for over twenty years. The Corralitos properties are among the most valuable in Chihuahua, and have been great producers for many years. A concentrating plant and smelter were built for treating their ores in Juarez, but the smelter combine gathered them in by giving the company better terms than they could treat their own ores for; then the plant was burned. New pumps are now being placed in the mines, and it is intended soon to increase the working force to 1500 men.

In the San José mine there are bodies of ore which run over an ounce in gold, and the principal values of the district are in gold. The output of the mine is said to have been several million of dollars.

From the Far North.

Delaney & Powers, mining men of Chicago, and W. J. Thomas of Wrangel have returned to Vancouver from the far north near Dease River and McDame Lake. They report that the Thibert Creek Mining Company is bringing out $50,000 in fine gold as their first clean-up. Thomas went as far north as the unexplored Black River slope. He says he found plenty of evidence of auriferous gravel, and says the charts of the farthest north country are wrong.

OWENS VALLEY'S OPPORTUNITY.

RELATION OF WATER PROJECT TO LOCAL INTERESTS.

Agriculture and Mining Resources Remain Undeveloped, While Inyo Sits and Waits for a Boom—Backwardness of the County Explained by One of Its Progressive Citizens.

DARWIN (Inyo County, Cal.) Aug. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Whatever may be the reason for the continual fighting of the people of the Owens River country against the Los Angeles pipe-line construction, this fight seems to be very far-fetched to one who has made a study of the question and who has interests here which would be vastly benefited by any project tending toward opening up a country greatly in need of development and, if you please, civilization. It seems to the writer that the Owens River people, who are fighting the Los Angeles pipe-line system, are inviting a great deal of criticism and are like the man who fought the use of the cook stove because he thought it was dangerous to life and limb.

The main trouble with the ranchers of the Owens Valley is that they have too much water, as the products of their farms and gardens show when they get into the hands of the consumers in the lower valley. Much of the ranch land in the valley needs draining instead of irrigation—draining to release the excess water and over-irrigation. Too much water is as bad as too little, as the crops are killed in the standing fields by excess of water just the same as by excessive drought. There is not a product of the farms of Owens Valley which we buy here in the lower end of the valley which does not show damage from excess of water.

The country south and east of Owens River Valley, extending into Nevada, is one vast storehouse of mineral—practically undeveloped. There are thousands of acres of this mineral territory which contain rich and extensive ledges and deposits of gold, silver, lead, copper and many of the newer minerals and mineral salts, extending through the White Mountains, the Sierras, the Coso, Argus, Darwin and Panamint ranges; the Alabama Hills, the Saline and Cactus Valley countries. This vast county of Inyo has been lying dormant, though discovered, for many years because California has no mining laws which would enforce stimulation of the mining industry. Year after year the people of Owens Valley country have been waiting for a boom without at any time raising a voice or hand to encourage those who might attempt to put life into the country and open up its vast mineral resources. Year after year old residents of this valley have, in violation of the government mining laws and in absence of any State laws governing mineral locations, on the first day of the year relocated their claims, thereby avoiding the doing of tre annual assessment work upon each and every mining claim after the first year of their location as required by the United States statutes—performing no labor upon their claims and keeping them out of the hands of progressive men who would labor upon the property if it belonged to them and thereby contribute toward opening up the country.

In conversation with an old resident of the valley at Bishop, not long since, I drew from him the fact that he had been a resident of the valley for thirty years and he had been waiting all this time for a boom. Twice in the thirty years he had thought the boom was on, but it had died in its infancy. For twenty-seven years he had owned a number of mining claims and he had thought that when the boom came he would make a "clean-up" from his mining property.

I asked him if his mines were for sale. I said "mines," for I thought that any man who had held the same mining claims for twenty-seven years or practically a labor lifetime, ought to have developed them into mines. He said they were for sale. How are they developed? was my next question. How much work have you done on them? "There is no development or work done upon the property," said he. What are your figures on your property? "Well," he said, "if it is cash for one group of fine claims I'll take $50,000. Another bunch of claims, I think there are eleven, will be $160,000 cash." I said, "How have you held this property for twenty-seven years without doing the annual assessment work?" "Oh," he replied, "we never do assessment work here unless we expect a boom and prospectors begin to come in from Nevada. We relocate the first of the year."

I asked: "Are your claims on record?" "Oh, no," said he, "the County Recorder says it is not necessary to put our claims on record unless we want to patent the ground."

I left him to his dreaming. He was a young man when he first located these mining claims. He is old now—still waiting, and dreaming of the boom that is coming and kicking at everything that tends toward creating the boom for which he has been so long waiting. I was disgusted because I found others like him and I found that the Legislature of the great Golden State was encouraging just such action, for at its last session (special) it failed to encourage by certain necessary action the great water system of the splendid city of Los Angeles, but instead memorialized our National Congress to pass a resolution doing away with the annual assessment work on unpatented mining claims for the year 1906, retarding progress and development of our mining resources and benefiting only those who are too lazy to work and the "mining hog," who locates hundreds of claims and wants to save the money which it will cost him to perform his annual labor.

The National Congress was wiser than the California Legislature, however, and failed to recognize the necessity of such a resolution. Every member of our State Legislature who voted for such a memorial ought to be sent into private life as speedily as possible. The prospector and the man who loves to aid in the development of the country will certainly be careless of his duties as a citizen if he votes, this fall, to return one of these memorialists.

It may be asked why I mention in this connection the construction of the Los Angeles pipe line. It is because the building of this line, together with the construction and equipment of an electric car line system, which I understand will go with it, will develop and open up this country. It will put hundreds of men into this section where there is now but one. The old mines, like the Lane, Defiance, Lucky Jim, Custer and others in Coso district, the Cerro Gordo at Keeler and many others up the valley, will renew their activity and workmen will again swarm through the portals of their tunnels. New mines will be opened up and gold, silver, copper and lead will pour into the pockets of all the industrious. New industries will spring up. The mountains will teem with prospectors of the working kind. The ranchers will find a good local market for their farm products, and their fruits will not, as now, lie rotting in their orchards, and there will be water enough for all and to spare.

Anything which brings order and industry into desert and wilderness of mountain is a civilizer, and the people of this valley ought to do everything in their power to aid and encourage any project which tends to the betterment of conditions in the community in which they live.

Is it possible that the Southern Pacific Company has a hand in the agitation against the Los Angeles line? Have not the people of Owens Valley been peoned long enough by this company? Is it not sufficient that the S. P. freight rates are so excessive that there is not a single product of this county, except ore, and little of that, which can be shipped out to outside markets at a profit? Is it not enough that the S. P. Company, in the construction of its line to Keeler, left nearly every town in the valley from one to five miles to one side of the track, putting the merchants and business men to the increased expense of hauling their freight these distances to and from the railway stations, blocking development and retarding the progress of the country for years?

Why does not the S. P. Company build its line from Keeler to Mojave if it wants to lend aid toward increasing the output and input of this country? They say that by building this line, widening the Keeler-Mina line to standard gauge and making this the main line, they can shorten the route eight hours from Los Angeles to Chicago and beat the Santa Fé line two hours between these points? Why don't they build this line and give us a chance to live and open our mines and find a market for our products? The editors of this county may take exceptions to some of the things I have said, but before they do let them quietly ask themselves if what I have said is not the whole truth. I believe it the truth, and if my neighbors do not see this question as I see it, I have that much confidence in what I say to believe they will see this matter in the right light before a year or two rolls around.

W. H. FRASER.

Scarcity of Mine Timber.

The rebuilding of San Francisco, the rapid growth of towns in the northern part of the State, the great demand for timber in Nevada mines and labor disturbances in the lumber trade have created a partial lumber famine on the Coast. The mining camps of California have been drained of their stocks of lumber until the sawmills found their capacity inadequate to meet the demand, and now the mines find difficulty in securing material they need for constructing mills, flumes, etc. Many mines are putting in sawmills as an auxiliary. From the present outlook the necessity for mines to install sawmills as part of their equipment will continue indefinitely.

ARMS NEEDED IN SONORA.

AMERICAN MINERS DO NOT LIKE NO-WEAPON ORDER.

Strict Enforcement of Mexican Military Measure Would Paralyze Development of Sonora Mines—Contractor Killed by Blast in the Total Wreck—Railroad Building.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Sept. 6.—American men who have mining properties and claims in the process of development in Sonora do not take kindly to the military order prohibiting all persons going across the the line from this country into Sonora from carrying any kind of weapons.

It is believed here, however, by those who have been for a number of years in Sonora that the military order will not be so strict when it is fully comprehended.

Sonora, according to the old settlers here, has practically been in a state of martial law for years, and at present, according to this theory, Gen. Luis Torres is a larger man in governmental affairs than Gov. Ysabel.

Gen. Torres, however, is regarded as a broad-minded man, and those who know him say that if an American mining man desired to visit a remote mining property and explained the situation to Gen. Torres, the visitor would be allowed to take with him ample arms and ammunition to guard against possible Yaquis or Mexican bandits. A strict enforcement of the proclamation against the carrying of arms into Mexico from this country would mean an almost complete paralysis of development work in the Sonora mining districts, outside of those that are near towns where there are Mexican soldiers. Those Americans who have been going into the outlying districts in Sonora for many years would not think of making the journey without a six-shooter, if not a modern rifle.

DEVELOPMENT NOTES.

A bar of gold bullion valued at $5000 was shipped this week from the mine of the Colombus Consolidated Mining Company, in the Pinito Mountains, south of Nogales, to the mint in Washington. The bar was the result of a successful operation of the mill on the company's property.

In the Arispe district a revival in mining is reported. At the property of the Wisconsin Mining and Milling Company preparations are being made to block out ore in the Plomosa mine, in which there are large bodies of lead-silver ore.

On the property of the La Colorado Development Company the last payment of $10,000 gold has been made to the original owners, Don Ignacio Acuna and Charles Buffet. On this property more than 700 feet of development work has been done.

Dragoon Mountain and Mining Company is constructing a standard-gauge railroad from Johnson Camp to Draggoon summit on the Southern Pacific in Cochise county, east of this city. It is stated that when the railroad is completed an average haul of 250 tons of ore per day is assured. The completion of the road, together with the blowing in of the Benson smelter, which, it is said, will take place January 1, 1907, will give a great impetus to the Dragoon district, and to Johnson Camp in particular.

KILLED BY A BLAST.

The Total Wreck was the scene this week of an accident which happens to miners who are careless. John Collins, a mining contractor, well known throughout southern Arizona, undertook to touch off seven loads. His first fuse was too short, and before he could leave the shaft the first blast was exploded. Collins was almost instantly killed.

Charles Udell, superintendent of the Corro Colorado mine, in the southern part of the county, was in the city this week. He stated that more than 100 miners now live in the camp. The Corro Colorado was famed many years ago and the present owners expect to again make the camp famous for its ore shipments.

Assessment Work.

The annual required $100 work on an unpatented mining claim to prevent it from lapsing, to be again a part of the public domain and thus subject to relocation, is not cumulative in its effect. One can do $100 worth of work or improvement on his claim every year, right along, for twenty years, and if he omits so doing for any one year the claim is just as subject to relocation as if he had done no work thereon at all. If, on the other hand, he does not work on his mining location, his "title" thereto is undisturbed so long as no one else thinks the claim is worth jumping. If he wants to take the chances on no one wanting to relocate it he can let the claim alone for as many years as he chooses. How the locator treats his claim, says th ing and Scientific Press, is un dicative of what he thinks of self.

"The scarcity of October means, of course, that everythi ing on the market in Septemb been cleaned up. I can say look for the price of copper to to 19 cents, or perhaps a little although it is already as high larger mining companies care it."

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. It has not only served me for ten years, as Dr. Schiffman saved and crowned it, and comparatively speaking, without pain. I sing his praise.
OWEN M. ANDREWS,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, corner Sixth and Mateo sts.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth, I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain. D. K. TRASK,
Judge Superior Court, Los Angeles.

Several years ago Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me which has proved entirely satisfactory. The work was done painlessly and with great skill. It gives me great pleasure to recommend him.
IRVING R. SMITH,
L. A. Times.

Dr. Schiffman has done a large amount of bridge and plate work for me, which was done in a very satisfactory manner.
A. J. BRADISH,
Chief of L. A. Detectives.

FLEXIBLE RUBBER DENTAL PLATES Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others, and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process, and made only by us.

OUR GUARANTEE IS GOOD.

We refer you to the Merchants' National Bank as to our reliability and responsibility.

No boys or students to experiment on you. With us you are not experimenting. We have stood a 14-years' test in Los Angeles.

There is no Need of Paying High Prices

FOR Fine Dental Work. Our modern methods enable us to do the very best dental work of all kinds without pain at prices within the reach of all.

Dr. Schiffman extracted eight teeth for me without a particle of pain, and afterward made me a full upper flexible plate, which fits me perfectly.

I have given them a good test, as it has been a year and a half since they were made. I gladly recommend the doctor to all who are in need of dental service.
MRS. EMMA BIRKLE,
430 S. Moline avenue.

Dr. Schiffman's hours at the chair are now 9 to 5, and he can be consulted personally any time during those hours.

ALL our work is guaranteed to be the very best. None better can be had anywhere, no matter how much you pay.

A Searchlight Town Lot With Each Thousand Shares of Mining Stock

The Duplex Extension Mining Company will give a Lot in the Duplex Extension Addition to the City of Searchlight to each purchaser of one thousand shares of Duplex Extension Mining Company stock. This new addition is less than ten minutes walk from Searchlight post office.

The property will be platted at an early date and each purchaser of one thousand shares given a ticket entitling him to a lot. All mineral rights reserved.

The Lots will be 25 by possibly 130 feet. The Brockman Mines, adjacent to the Duplex Extension, together with our properties will form the nucleus for a fine addition to this fast growing City of Searchlight, queen of So. Nevada.

The Duplex Extension Mining Company reserves the right to increase the number of shares requisite to entitle a purchaser to a lot in the Addition at any time without notice. But this is our offer now: To every purchaser of one thousand shares of stock, either for cash or on the installment plan, a ticket for one of these lots. All who now hold as much as one thousand shares of this stock will also be entitled to a lot.

Duplex Extension Addition will be surveyed and platted, when parties owning these tickets will make their claims according to the ticket number.

Lots in the Town of Searchlight are now selling at from $80 to $1200 each; the railroad is approaching, and higher prices are inevitable. The coming of the railroad, the activity in the mines, and development work on this fine property will enhance the value of the lots which we are giving to the purchasers of stock.

We have employed Mr. Paul Eyssenhardt to sink on the ledge of the Duplex Extension Mining Company and to report from time to time progress and prospects. Proceeds from this offer extraordinary go into developments. We want you to share our profits.

BIG DEFICIT IN DISTRICT FUND.

Supervisor Graham's Account Has Many Expenditures.

His Successor May Have no Money for Road Work.

It Is Said He Had Political Reasons for Activity.

When Supervisor Al Graham steps down and out from official position on January 8. 1907—the first Monday in the new year—it is doubtful if the finances of his road district will be in as pleasurably plethoric a condition as his successor would like.

At the present time there is a deficit in Graham's road fund amounting to about $5500 in round figures, and there are four months yet remaining in the year when work has to be continued in his district. This shortage is at first glance all the more peculiar inasmuch as on January 1 last there was $22,717.31 to the credit of his road fund, and since then the fund has been replenished to the extent of about $5000 more.

It is not claimed that a cent of this money has dribbled into Graham's personal pocket, but his methods of working his district has concededly been unique. All of the year 1905 he did such a moderate amount of work in his district that over $20,000 had accumulated in the fund. It is said that there is a law hidden away somewhere that makes it obligatory when a surplus accumulates in a road fund at the end of any year that it shall be carried back to the general road fund. But if there is such a law it is buried so deep that nobody knows anything about it. Certain it is that when the year 1906 opened Graham was on financial velvet. Since then work in his district has been booming. The monthly statements, instead of covering one sheet of foolscap as is usually the case in the other districts, have been filling three and four sheets. The road foreman has been keeping a staff of men working steadily month after month until now the corner has been turned, and there is no more money in the fund to meet current expenses.

To be precise, there is an indebtedness of somewhere about $6700—with current accounts coming in straight along—and $1200 to the credit of the road fund. To meet this deficit and the expenses that will naturally accrue during the remainder of the year will be the following amounts: About $1016 as Graham's share of the money in the unapportioned fund, $1200 on hand, and a part of the receipts from wharf licenses which the Board of Supervisors disposes of as a body. There is $5635 in that fund now and conceding that Graham receives a fifth share, he will have an additional $1100 to dispose of. This will make a total of $3316 to pay off an indebtedness of $6700, and with bills coming in that may more than double that amount for all that is known to the contrary.

As this road indebtedness must be paid, there is only one way to do it, and that course Supervisor Graham will most probably adopt. Until a Supervisor steps down and out the funds of his district are his to dispense as he may deem best. In October moneys from the new tax levy of 1906-07 will be coming in, but the road funds will not be apportioned and be in readiness to be drawn against until December 20. Between December 20 and January 8 Supervisor Graham may get busy and square up all outstanding accounts. That, of course, will make a hole in the treasury of the road district so that Capt. Manning, Graham's coming successor, may have hard sledding for awhile, and his constituents may get howling at him for not doing the work in the district that is absolutely necessary.

Since Supervisor Graham took office the city of Hollywood was lifted out of his district, but the increase in valuations generally is believed to have maintained the equilibrium. From the tax levy of 1905-06 the Cahuenga Valley Road District received $14,282.79, and when it is considered that over $22,000 had accumulated by January 1 last, it will be seen that a somewhat parsimonious policy was adopted for the time, and an extraordinarily generous one during the last few months.

The only explanation offered of this curious condition of things has been that Graham wanted to boost work along in his district during election year, and put out the money where it would do the most good at the time of the Republican convention. But the convention is a passed issue, and Graham has been left out in the cold.

And all along there has been loud complaint that the roads in Graham's district never got the attention they needed. Time after time the people tried to get the worst places patched up, but all efforts seemed to fail.

Where can Graham show results?

EXPLOSION SHAKES.

Crude Oil Tank in Rear of Coulter Building Goes to Smash and the Bricks Fly.

The explosion of a 2000-gallon crude oil tank behind the Coulter building, No. 217 South Broadway, shook adjacent blocks in the downtown business district yesterday morning. Half a dozen laborers, at work on the rear of the building, had to dodge flying bricks. No damage was done property.

It was one of those accidents whose terror lies in "what might have been." Accumulation of gas seemingly caused it. When the big tank blew up it threw a huge heap of bricks, which workingmen had piled over it, high in the air. Dirt was scattered over everything. A few window panes were broken, and a horse was struck by a brickbat.

Accumulation of gas—which a one-inch vent pipe was too small to lead away—apparently went on until spontaneous combustion ignited the volatile stuff. Then came the roar and trembling which startled hundreds of people. Fire Marshal Sutton, City Oil Inspector C. A. Blackmar, and City Electrician Charles Monahan investigated the affair.

BIOLOGICAL MEETING.

The meeting promises to be of interest and a cordial invitation is extended to the public. All Pasadena cars pass the door. C. A. Whiting is chairman of the Biological Section.

CHAFFEY PROJECT IN OWENS VALLEY AROUSES OPPOSITION OF THE CITY.

What the Promoters Say of Their Proposed Railroad and Power Plants—The Mayor and Superintendent Mulholland Protest.

FOR something more than a year it has been known in a general way that George Chaffey of Los Angeles has been acquiring interests in Owens Valley and filing claims on the water power of creeks flowing into the valley from the Sierra, but the precise nature of his project has been matter of mere conjecture. From the first, when Mr. Chaffey has spoken of his plans, he has said that it was not his purpose to interfere in any way with the city's Owens River project; that he had in contemplation schemes of improvement and water power development on streams not included in the city's purchases or filings, and that there could be no conflict between his and the city's interests.

The nature of Mr. Chaffey's project is disclosed in articles of incorporation filed at the Courthouse yesterday.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

The incorporators of the Los Angeles and Owens Valley Railroad are: W. J. Hunsaker and W. M. Rose, attorneys; W. F. Botsford, George Chaffey and R. J. Waters, bankers; George B. Reeve, capitalist, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railroad, succeeding Mr. Hay when the latter came to the Southern Pacific; S. P. Jewett, civil engineer and pioneer railroad builder of Southern California; A. M. Chaffey, capitalist; C. W. Gates of Vail & Gates; William Lacy, president Lacy Manufacturing Company.

The purposes of the corporation are to build and operate railroads, telegraph and telephone lines and to conduct business as a common carrier. The term of the corporation is fifty years. The capital is $10,000,000, of which $660,800 has been subscribed, George Chaffey subscribing $350,800, and the other incorporators $1000 each. Ten per cent. of the subscription has been paid in cash.

Directors of the corporation are George B. Reeve, Miranda; S. P. Jewett, Pasadena; George Chaffey, W. J. Hunsaker and A. M. Chaffey, Los Angeles.

The declared intention of the incorporators is to build an electric standard-gauge railroad through Owens Valley to Johannesburg, on the Santa Fé, and to Vincent on the Southern Pacific, giving to Owens Valley connection with Los Angeles by both lines.

GEORGE CHAFFEY'S PROJECT.

Following is Mr. Chaffey's statement respecting his plans in Owens Valley:

"I believe a project for an electric railway built southward from Owens Valley, furnishing direct connection with this city, is one that should commend itself to all progressive and public-spirited residents of Los Angeles. Commercially, it would help the city by making the rich agricultural and mineral region of Owens Valley directly tributary. At present it is 1000 miles distant by rail, and commercially a part of Nevada, though geographically at our very door. As Los Angeles would be helped by the trade of this region, so it in turn would be benefited by the influx of settlers from Southern California to apply their energy and methods to development of splendid natural resources.

"A railroad would be of great advantage to the city in the construction of the great Owens River conduit. It would save much in time and outlay, and would enable the city's engineers to concentrate their energies on the conduit itself. The economic advantage of being able to eliminate from estimates of cost the construction of a temporary city railroad is obvious.

CITY WILL HELP VALLEY.

"After some study of conditions in Owens Valley and a tolerable familiarity with water supply and the possibilities of water development, I am convinced that the hostility to Los Angeles felt by some of the people of Owens Valley has been needlessly aroused. The valley will not be worse, but better off when Los Angeles takes all the water it has acquired, provided its latent resources are developed. It has been a satisfaction to us to think that our enterprise might prove the means of harmonizing the interests of this city and of the people of Owens Valley, so that both might work together for common and mutual advancement.

"Our plan was first conceived more than eighteen months ago by my associate, Mr. S. P. Jewett, who has been a pioneer railroad man in Southern California. He built the San Gabriel Valley Railroad, with conspicuous success, in 1880, and the Los Angeles cable road later. In company with him, I visited the valley in July of last year, and together we went over the ground, being satisfied then of the coming possibilities of a railroad, although in ignorance of the city's project and the railroad business that would result therefrom.

SOURCES OF POWER.

"Our plan is to operate the road by electricity, the power to be obtained from side streams, which we filed on and secured at that time. A right of way for the entire length of the valley, free of all cost, was promised us at that time and has since been reiterated and confirmed by prominent residents of the valley. We propose to issue bonds to defray the cost of construction. We think the railroad project and the city's great enterprise should go hand in hand, and it is our earnest desire that they shall do so. There is no point where there is any conflict with the city, except on Cottonwood Creek. In all aspects our plans are calculated to advance the interests and projects of the city. We would very much like to have the one point of controversy adjusted in a way satisfactory to the people of Los Angeles and to the city officials before our own enterprise is launched.

"We have understood from the city's engineers that our filings on the power of streams other than Cottonwood do not affect their plans. In fact, it was stated publicly last year that the city had acquired all the rights necessary to its project, and we never have had any reason to suppose that our filings would be regarded as obstructive.

CONFLICTING CLAIMS.

"There is conflict of filings on Cottonwood, but that could be adjusted. We understand that the city would need about eight hundred horsepower from Cottonwood during construction of the conduit, and perhaps less for pumping thereafter. Our proposal has been that we install the power plant and supply power to the city at the lowest possible price, saving the city the cost of installation. Our plans for conserving water at the head of Cottonwood for power purposes would not affect the city injuriously. The early flood waters, starting from melting snow below our storage works, would be available to the city. We believe that our Cottonwood Creek project would be helpful rather than hurtful to the city, yet if the city's engineers think otherwise, an arrangement satisfactory to them could be made. We have been willing to give to the city what it wants, only we have not been able to find out just what it does want.

CITY'S PROTEST.

"Our understanding always has been that the city does not want the water or the power of the creeks above Cottonwood, on which we have filed, but the protests against our applications, sent to Washington, seem to indicate that some city official has changed his mind. The bill granting right of way to the city, passed by Congress, provided specifically that all pending applications should be adjudicated and not affected by the bill. That was all we contended for in Washingto. We did not oppose the city's application, nor did we threaten or attempt to prevent the passage of a bill enabling the city to utilize all the water it has acquired, either for power, for irrigation or any other use. On June 17 I wired to Mr. Jewett in Washington to aid the city in the passage of its bill in any way possible, unless the same unjustly affected our rights. The bill, as it passed the Senate, did needlessly affect our rights, but an amendment, accepted and agreed to by the city's representatives cured that defect.

ADJUSTMENT PROPOSED.

"At request of the city's Washington attorney, our attorneys submitted as a basis for conference and adjustment these propositions; first—reach an immediate agreement as to respective water rights on Cottonwood Creek; second—city to withdraw all opposition to our applications before the departments. The second was not to be urged or considered until or unless the first had been agreed to. Third—accept amendment to Senate bill protecting rights of way previously approved or pending.

"Those propositions were not in the nature of any demand upon the city, nor did they put us in the position of opposing the city's bill. We are not antagonizing the city's project, and we cannot see why a harmonious adjustment of interests could not have been reached by conference, as we have been willing to make terms satisfactory to the city relating to Cottonwood Creek, and have understood that there was no conflict elsewhere."

LAND AND WATER RIGHTS.

Chaffey's filings for power and salvage water cover these creeks, beginning at Pound Valley above Bishop; Rock Pine, Big Pine, Oak, Independence, Shepherd's, George's, Lone Pine and Cottonwood. He has secured a controlling interest in the Independence city water system, and has built dams on Independence Creek to increase by regulation the mean flow of the creek. He has obtained from farmers reservoir rights on Big Pine Creek and will increase the height of their dams if his claims are allowed by the government. He has bought 2000 acres of land using the water of Shepherd's Creek, and 700 acres of land with water rights near Independence. Chaffey claims the surplus waters that he can save by storage on all the creeks named, after supplying to farmers and all other present users of water the quantities of water to which they are entitled.

THE CITY'S POSITION.

The attitude of the city toward Mr. Chaffey's power and water projects is defined in resolutions adopted by the Board of Water Commissioners on August 29, 1906, as follows:

Whereas, the proposed aqueduct of the city of Los Angeles for bringing a water supply from the Owens River Valley, and, incidentally, for developing electric power, will intersect certain creeks, discharging into Owens River and Owens Lake, and other creeks from and including Taboose Creek in a southerly direction along the line of said aqueduct; and, it appears to the Board of Water Commissioners that the city will require, in connection with the construction and operation of said aqueduct, and in connection with the operation of its power system, all the waters of said creeks, not already in use under appropriation, and all the power that it is practicable to develop from said creeks; and,

Whereas, the use of said water and power by the city of Los Angeles will be for the public benefit of several hundreds of thousands of people; and,

Whereas, it appears that certain persons are seeking to acquire rights in and to said waters in order to carry out projects for the development of power and other purposes, and have made applications to the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture for rights of way over the public lands and reservations of the United States in connection with such projects; and,

Whereas, such projects are private, and for the pecuniary benefit of the promotors thereof, and will interfere with and hamper the city of Los Angeles in carrying out its water and power project;

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that it is the sense of the Board of Water Commissioners of the city of Los Angeles, that said city should at once take steps to acquire all the waters of said creeks not already in use under appropriation, and the right to use the waters thereof for the purpose of generation of electrical power, and to request the said Department of the Interior and the said Department of Agriculture to reject and deny all applications by private individuals or corporations now pending or hereafter presented, for rights of way, for private purposes, in connection with the waters of said creeks, or any of them.

PRESENT SITUATION.

It will be seen that the claims of Mr. Chaffey and the projects of the city are now conflicting on six of the nine streams on which Mr. Chaffey has filed for power and irrigation purposes. The Chaffey filings were made more than a year ago, and until recently the Los Angeles aqueduct engineers did not think the city would require power or surplus water from any but Cottonwood Creek, and therefore made no objection to Chaffey's operations.

Since the passage of the right-of-way bill, however, the city has filed in Washington protests against grants of rights of way to Chaffey in relation to his projects on Oak, Independence, Shepherd's, George's, Lone Pine and Cottonwood creeks. The city also has caused to be made refilings on the surplus waters of the creeks named, but has made no specific filing for power purposes on any other than Cottonwood. The protest of the city against granting the application of George Chaffey for rights of way through the forest reserve sets forth the nature of the city's project as follows:

NATURE OF THE CITY'S PROJECT.

The project of the city of Los Angeles briefly stated is: To obtain an adequate municipal water supply from the Owens River Valley. For this purpose the people of the city have voted an issue of bonds, in the amount of $1,500,000, for the purchase of necessary lands and water rights and for commencing the work of constructing the conduit from the Owens River Valley to the city. This conduit will be about 220 miles in length, including about 20 miles of tunnel, with a capacity of 600 cubic feet per second. It is to be as nearly water tight as possible and will be made of steel and concrete. The estimated cost of completing the project is $23,000,000.

Said conduit will head on said river at a point above said Oak Creek, and the water to be conveyed by said conduit is to be obtained by gravity diversion from the river at the point of intake, also by pumping into the conduit from the river below said intake, and also by gravity diversion from said Oak Creek and other creeks intersected by said conduit.

It is also contemplated that the city will take advantage of the opportunities there will be for the development of electrical power along the line of the water conduit. The elevation above sea level of the point on Owens River, where the city will probably establish its first diversion works, is about 3800 feet, or more than 3500 feet above the average elevation of the city. Furthermore, it is the purpose of the city to utilize the power obtainable from streams along the line of the conduit in connection with the construction and operation of the conduit.

POWER TO CARRY OUT PROJECT.

Concerning the power of the city to undertake the project, the protest quotes the law limiting bonded indebtedness to 15 per cent. of assessed valuation, and gives these figures:

The assessed valuation of the real and personal property within the city of Los Angeles, according to the assessment just completed, is $202,985,704.

The present limitation, therefore, on the bonded indebtedness of the city of Los Angeles is $30,447,855.

The present bonded indebtedness of the city, including $1,500,000, voted for the Owens River project, is $6,851,250.

So that the present bonding power of the city is $23,596,605.

The probable increase of the city's bonding power in the future is indicated by the figures showing the growth of the city in the respect of property valuation in recent years:

Assessed valuation for year 1903-4....$109,923,822
Assessed valuation for year 1904-5.... 126,126,563
Assessed valuation for year 1905-6.... 156,263,564
Assessed valuation for year 1906-7.... 202,985,704

From these figures it may reasonably be anticipated that the annual increase of the city's bonding power will be at least 12 per cent., or at least $3,500,000.

NEEDS OF THE CITY.

The population of the city of Los Angeles in 1880, was 11,000.

The population of the city of Los Angeles in 1890, was 53,000.

The population of the city of Los Angeles in 1900, was 102,000.

The population of the city of Los Angeles in 1906 is estimated to be 235,000.

This estimate of the present population of the city of Los Angeles is based upon the the school census, the number of water consumers and data obtained from the city directory.

The present water supply is drawn principally from the Los Angeles River, but several years ago the limit of supply obtainable from this source was reached. Since then wells have been sunk and pumping plants installed by the city at great expense to supplement the supply obtained from the river.

The amount of water now obtainable by the city from all existing sources of supply is about 70 cubic feet per second, or about 46,000,000 gallons per day.

The city, at the present time, consumes about 62 cubic feet per second; but in the summer months the amount consumed is so much above the average that there is no sufficient margin of safety. In fact, during two or three hot spells in the summer of 1905, the demand for water was greater than the supply, so that the city was compelled to make good the deficit from its storage reservoirs, resulting in depleting the water in the reservoirs more than one-half, notwithstanding the greatest efforts of the Water Department to maintain them at their normal level.

The figures given above show that the population of the city of Los Angeles is growing rapidly. If the average rate of increase from the year 1880 to the present time should be maintained for the next twenty years, the population of the city will be in excess of 400,000. Not only has the growth of population during the past twenty years been exceedingly great, but the percentage of increase has been greater each year than in the year preceding; therefore, a prediction that the growth of the city for the next twenty years will be as great as the average growth for the past twenty years is a conservative estimate, if the rate of growth which has been maintained for the past six years should continue, the population of the city would reach 400,000 in less than twelve years.

The city of Los Angeles is surrounded by smaller cities and towns, all of which are in the same position, with reference to the limitation of existing water supplies as the city of Los Angeles, and movements are now being agitated by many people in Los Angeles and those neighboring towns for the consolidation of several of these smaller towns with the city of Los Angeles. The present area of the city of Los Angeles is about forty-three square miles, and petitions have already been circulated for the annexation of sixteen square miles of adjacent territory. It is, therefore, very probable that the population of the city of Los Angeles will not only be rapidly increased in the ordinary manner, but that other communities of many thousands population will be annexed to the city.

In view of these conditions, the city has deemed it wise, in the carrying out of the Owens River project, to provide for the construction of a conduit with sufficient capacity to meet all its needs. It is also necessary that the city should now obtain the right to take from the Owens River a quantity of water commensurate with the capacity of the conduit, and, prior to the use of the whole quantity of water for strictly municipal and domestic purposes, the excess can be used to the very greatest advantage in developing the agricultural lands surrounding the city of Los Angeles.

CONFLICT OF CHAFFEY APPLICATION.

For the purpose of carrying out the project, hereinabove set forth, the city of Los Angeles has purchased practically all of the lands riparian to the Owens River for a distance of about forty miles along said river above the point where the same empties into Owens Lake. The city has also acquired as appurtenant to said lands extensive rights to the use of the waters of the river and of the creeks flowing into it. For these purposes the city has already expended upwards of $700,000, and is engaged in making similar purchases.

The city will require for pumping purposes in connection with the operation of its conduit all the power obtainable from said Oak Creek. It is, therefore, contended that the aforesaid application of George Chaffey for rights of way on said Oak Creek conflicts with the project of said city, for the reason that the use by him of the waters of said creek for irrigation would greatly diminish the quantity of water discharged by said creek into the city's conduit crossing the same, and the use by said Chaffey of the waters of said Oak Creek for the generation of power will prevent the city from using the same for that purpose, and thus interfere with the project of the city.

The project of said Chaffey is a private scheme and can necessarily benefit only a small number of people. Said scheme, as we verily believe, is purely speculative, and his said application one of a considerable number of applications for rights of way filed by said Chaffey in the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture, covering practically every creek tributary to the Owens River which will be crossed by the city's conduit or could be utilized by said city in connection with said project.

The city's project is for the public benefit, and, therefore, the granting of the application of George Chaffey is not compatible with the public interest.

By the inauguration of the city's project in the Owens River Valley, that project has become the dominant interest with respect to the streams in that valley. In this connection the city desires respectfully to call your attention to the following language contained in the letter of the Secretary of Agriculture to the Forester dated February 1, 1905, laying down the general policy for the administration of the forest reserves:

"In the administration of the forest reserves it must be clearly borne in mind that all land is to be devoted to its most productive use for the permanent good of the whole people, and not for the temporary benefit of individuals or companies.

"In the management of each reserve local questions will be decided upon local grounds; the dominant industry will be considered first, but with as little restriction to minor industries as may be possible; sudden changes in industrial conditions will be avoided by gradual adjustment after due notice, and where conflicting interests must be reconciled, the question will always be decided from the standpoint of the greatest good of the greatest number in the long run."

Wherefore, your protestant prays that the said application of George Chaffey for rights of way on Oak Creek be not granted.

The protest is signed on behalf of the city by Owen McAleer, Mayor, and William Mulholland, Superintendent of Waterworks.

ALASKAN TIN LODES.

Discoveries in Northern Territory That Will Add Materially to America's Production.

That the tin production of the United States will be increased through the development of new lodes in Alaska is made evident by the report of Frank L. Hess of the United States Geological Survey, on discoveries made in our most northern Territory, says the New York Tribune. The first lode tin in Alaska was found in 1903, on Cassiterite Creek, a tributary of Lost River, about seven miles from the sea. It showed the tin ore in a large metamorphosed acidic dike. Several tunnels have been driven in the lode, revealing veins from three to ten feet thick. One of them showed veins of almost pure cassiterite and quartz, about one-half inch thick, and other veins carrying cassiterite, chlorite and some wolframite up to one and one-half inches thick. In the vicinity of Cassiterite Creek three known tin-bearing veins of prabably workable size occur in the limestone.

On Cape Mountain one company has made conusiderable discoveries of tin ore. Float cassiterite was reported from this vicinity, a fine piece weighing several pounds having been found twelve miles east of Cape Prince of Wales. A company operating on Cape Mountain is working on an ore body averaging between two and three feet in width. Among the operators one concern has a ten-stamp mill near the beach at Tin City.

Wages in the York region at present are $5 a day and board, and good board cannot be considered as worth less than $1.50 and $2.50 a day, so that these wages are practically equivalent to $6.50 and $7.50 a day. It seems safe to figure, Mr. Hess asserts, that under present conditions, nothing less than 2½ per cent. ore can be worked with reasonable assurance of profit. Considerable prospecting is being done for placer deposits. Those on Buck Creek have yielded up to date about ninety-one tons of ore, that will average, probably, 65 per cent. of metallic tin. At least seven parties have been sent to Buck Creek by firms or private persons to examine and report on the tin gravels, the expenses for this being more than $50,000. There is probably a length of four miles of tin-bearing gravels in the Buck Creek Valley.

AGRICULTURE IN ALASKA.

EXPERIMENTS MADE PROVE IT IS A SUCCESS.

All Vegetables and Fruits That Ripen Quickly Can Be Grown There. Good Livestock Country — Hot Springs Used to Promote Growth of Vegetables.

Agriculture, under certain limitations, is a complete success in Alaska, says the Washington correspondent of the Portland Oregonian. This has been borne out by experiments started several years ago by the Department of Agriculture and later by actual farming that has been done by a ripidly-increasing number of farmers who have gone into the Territory from the northern tier of States. Each year the department has issued a report on the progress of agricultural development and each succeeding report shows an increased production and an increase in the farm acreage.

Generally speaking, all vegetables that ripen quickly can be successfully grown in Alaska, and the same is true of fruits, provided the trees can withstand the long, cold winters. Year by year new varieties of fruits and vegetables are being experimented with, until today the department presents a great array, that includes most of the fruits, berries and vegetables found on the table of the American farmer. Experience has demonstrated, however, that vegetables and grains do best when carefully acclimated. Seed grown in Alaska produces better results than seed imported from the States; fruits and berries from the States do better when grafted or crossed with native trees or bushes. But the Alaskan farmers are learning fast and, with the aid of the government experiment stations, are now able to raise crops at a good profit. Yearly the imports of food products into Alaska are declining as the local supply increases.

GOOD LIVE-STOCK COUNTRY.

Having expended large sums on vegetables and fruit experiments, Prof. C. C. Georgeson, in charge of the work in Alaska, now seeks an annual appropriation from Congress to carry on experiments with live stock. Alaska imports most of its meats, and milk is today very scarce. A few live stock shipped to Alaska in times past warrant the belief that stock raising in certain localities can be made a success, provided the stock are well chosen and of breeds that can stand the rigorous winters. What Prof. Georgeson needs is what he terms a "general-purpose animal," one which makes good beef and can at the same time be used for the dairy. Congress has already appropriated over $200,000 for the introduction of reindeer into Alaska, and with good results, but he believes that even better results can be obtained by introducing cattle. To start with, he wants $10,000 to establish a live-stock station on Kadiak Island, that will suffice to determine the kinds of stock best suited to that region. Later stations could be established elsewhere, where there is good pasturage.

In August, 1905, Judge Andrew Heller of Copper Center imported from [illegible] Or., 25 grade Angora ewes and a buck. One year later he reports the Copper River Valley a fine place for the propagation of Angora goats, and announces his intention of importing 200 more ewes this season. He finds that a goat dresses from 40 to 60 pounds, and mutton at 25 cents a pound, is cheap in that market. He says feed is plentiful and cheap, and predicts a great future for the industry, in which he is the pioneer.

NEED MORE FOREST RESERVES.

Some years ago an enormous forest reserve was created to take in the best timber land in Alaska, found on the islands of the Alexander archipelago on the southeast coast. Now there is demand for reserves in the interior. Prof. Georgeson says that the forests of the interior are of such importance that they should be accorded government protection. The timber of the interior is smaller than that of the coast, the trees, mainly spruce, running only 18 inches in diameter, but right in the midst of these interior forests lumber is worth $100 per 1000 feet, and at the mines, only 20 miles from the mill, it brings $225 per 1000 feet. Fires do great damage in these interior forests, whereas the frequent heavy rains on the coast are almost an absolute protection against forest fires. The interior forests are doubly valuable because of their slow growth, for once destroyed or denuded they take many times longer to develop than the forests in the States.

Prof. Georgeson says that at the prices now prevailing the timebr in the Yukon Valley alone is worth all the Government paid for Alaska. He believes this enormous asset should be protected by the government and the cutting of timber be so regulated that the people of the future may share in its benefits. There is need of government regulation to prevent wasteful cutting, but more particularly to prevent the waste that results from fires. Reserves, once created, would need careful patroling. It is recommended that, if an interior reserve is created, miners and settlers have free use of timber, as in the States, but the use of timber should be restricted to the needs of the people who live in the vicinity and are developing the country.

HOT SPRINGS MAKE RICH FARM.

One of the most interesting features of Prof. Georgeson's report is his description of the Hot Springs farm. About eighty miles from the mouth of the Tanana River is a famous hot spring. The hot water bubbles to the surface in a number of springs, and at other points there are seepages. J. Karshner, a Kansas farmer, happened upon these springs and, correctly judging their importance, located a homestead, including the springs. Some twenty-five or thirty acres of this ground are warmed, either by the waters of the springs or from the underlying rocks which heat the water. Whatever the cause, Karshner is making some of the record crops of Alaska. He gets his vegetables on the market ahead of all competitors and he raises a wider variety of garden truck than any other farmer in the Territory. On July 24 he had marketed early cabbages, cauliflower, beets and peas, to say nothing of lettuce, radishes, turnips and other vegetables of rapid growth. "This farm," says Prof. Georgeson, "is a patch of the temperate zone put down near the Arctic Circle of Alaska."

[illegible] by hot springs is unique; [illegible] farm is the peer of any [illegible]

[illegible] of Lumber Industry.

No nation in the world uses so much lumber as ours; in fact, we consume more than all Europe outside of Russia. We use it in every possible way, for building purposes, fuel, paper, telegraph poles, etc., until the Government has sent out an alarm. In a few years we shall be compelled to substitute other material or be less wasteful now and [illegible] about reforestation. The Federal Department is considering a plan for giving national aid to the States for reforestation through the proceeds of public land sales other than those now set aside for irrigation purposes. Various States are aiding in a small way to prevent absolute deforestation, but all efforts now made are feeble compared with the waste that is in process. We can do with less wood and we will be compelled to do with much less than is convenient if we are not careful. Wood can be replaced to an extent by other substances, but the expense will be much greater. Already millions of acres are cleared every year to supply the pulp mills, and the increase has been 50 per cent. in six years.

Here is a chance for the nation and all the States to work together in aid of posterity, and if it is neglected this generation will be deservedly blamed for not only permitting waste, but refusing the easy and necessary steps to furnish a new supply.—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

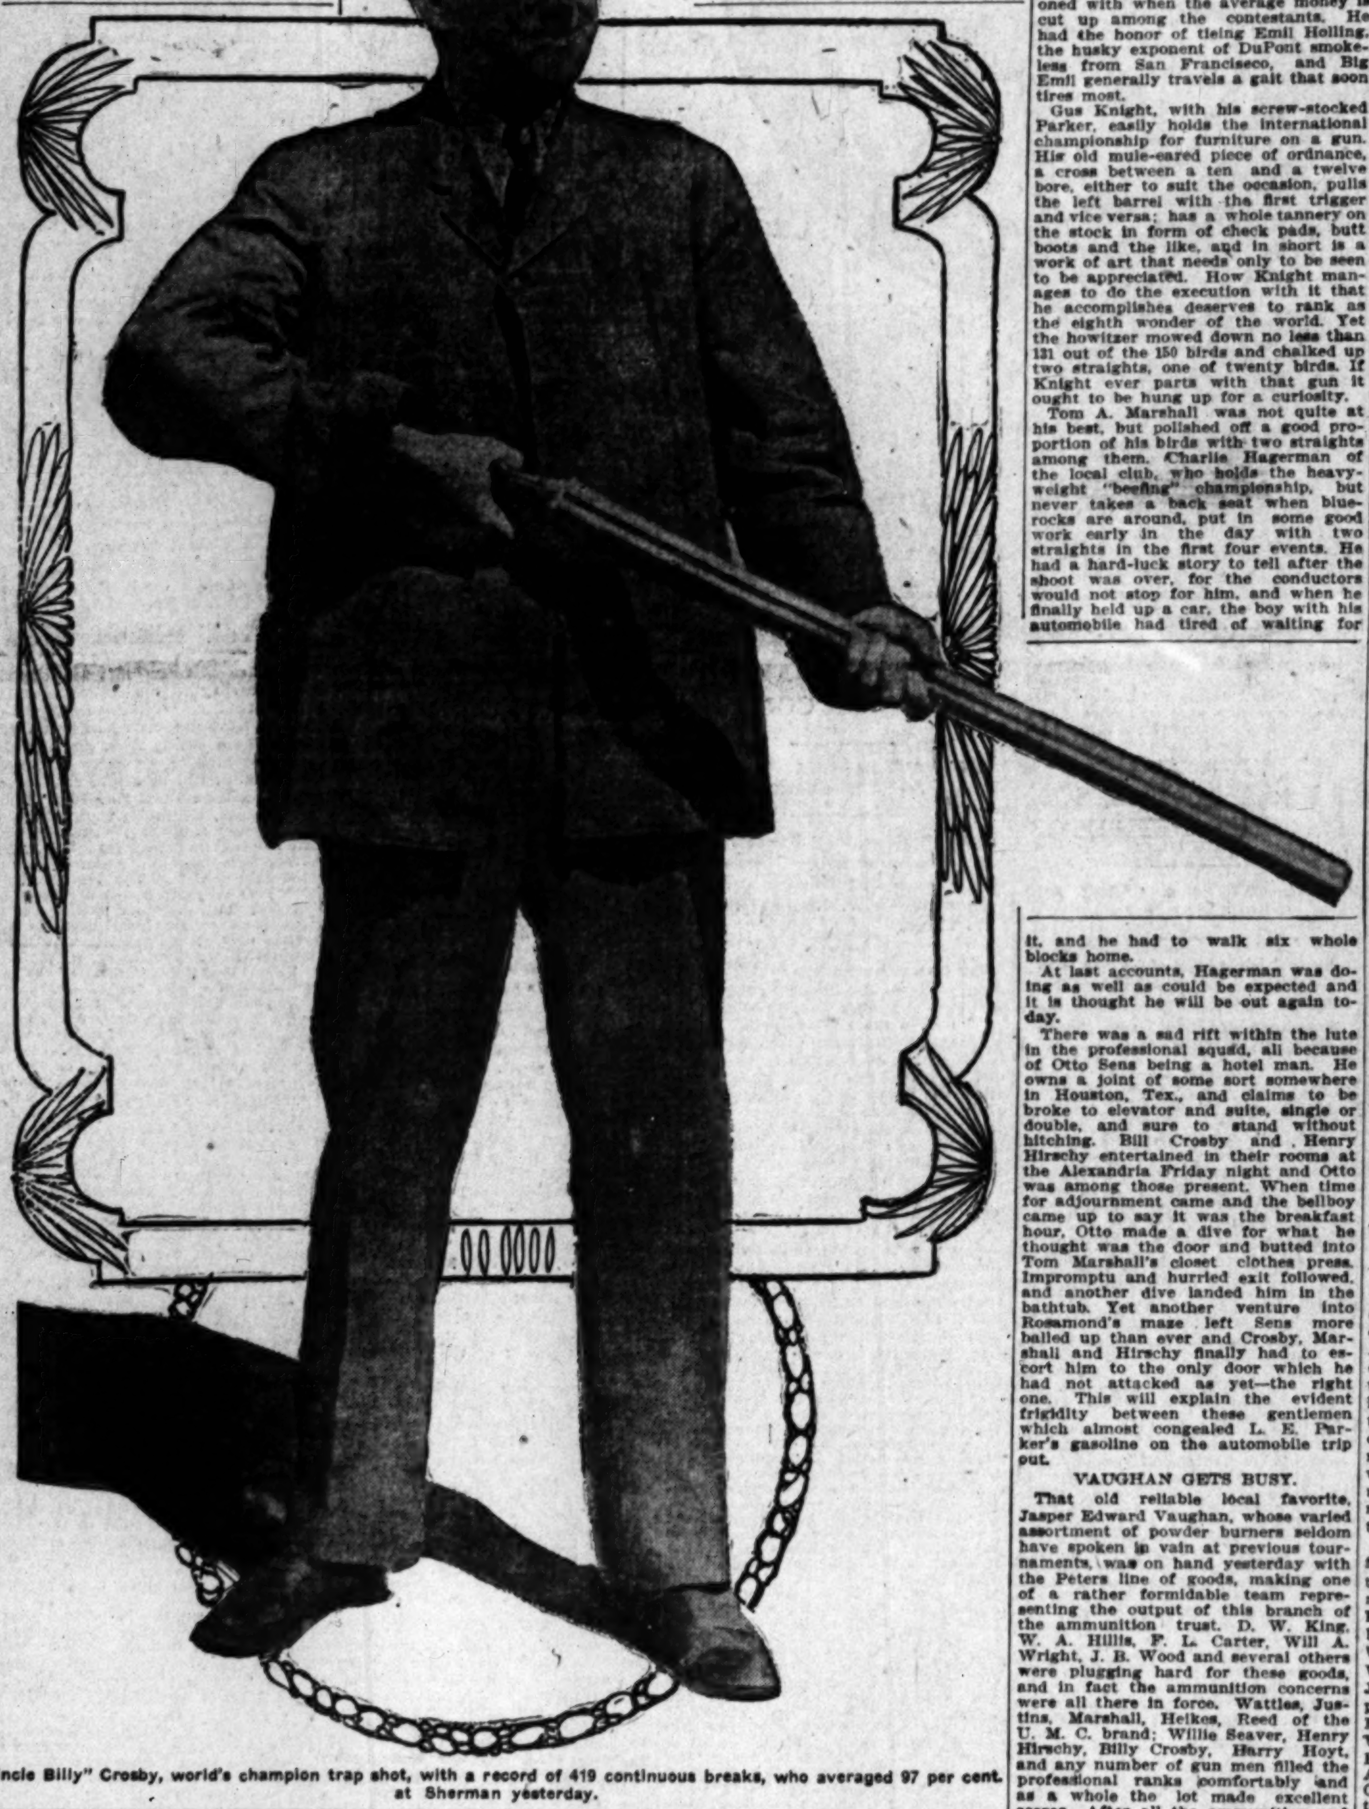
XXVth YEAR. SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 9, 1906. On All News Stands. Trains and Streets. 5 CENTS

CROSBY IN KEEN EYE; MILLS WINS AVERAGE.

Shooting With Spectacular Brilliancy, Crack Professional World's Champion Captivates Crowd and Averages Ninety-Seven Per Cent.

BY EDWIN L. HEDDERLY.



"Uncle Billy" Crosby, world's champion trap shot, with a record of 419 continuous breaks, who averaged 97 per cent. at Sherman yesterday.

SHOOTING that brilliantly steady gait that has shoved him to the front in many a local tournament ere the present one, pointing his battered old pump gun squarely to the right spot with a regularity only exceeded by the almost unvarying accuracy of his aim, Fred B. Mills, the pentland pirate of Santa Ana, splendidly maintained the reputation of the Sunny South in the big interstate shoot which opened yesterday at Sherman by pulverizing 141 out of the 150 birds which counted on average, taking the first amateur honors from that other cool and clever shotgun expert, W. H. "Redshirt" Varien of Pacific Grove, leading by one bird.

Cool as the cucumbers he raises in the garden patch behind the house, and steady as a ship in calm water, the eagle-eyed veteran of the Orange county duck marshes never seemed in better form, and within the first fifty birds had enforced the attention of all other contestants, who, in such a profusion of crack shooting material, were disposed to give an old favorite the overlook.

Southern California amateurs need have no fear in facing all comers while such shots as Fred Mills are growing up with the country. Of the crack eastern professionals—each and every one a magnificent shot, with trophies of a world's championship upon him—there was just one who topped Mills on the day's work, and that was the peerless king of them all, old Bill Crosby, by whom it is rather an honor, than any disgrace, to be beaten.

Always in good shape and trusty as steel, Crosby and his $40 gun got into the running early, struck a steady gait and never once departed from it. On the birds which figured for average, Crosby lost but five out of 150, for a percentage of .966, and by shooting off fifty more the grand old campaigner ran his record up to an even 97 per cent. for the day. The birds were anything but easy, although they were not thrown as far as has been the rule in local tournaments heretofore. Fifty yards was the limit, but after the breeze came up, the targets traveled down as if shot from a cannon, and indulged themselves in delightful little dodges, ducks and dives like scared snipe, baffling some of the younger shots, yet they all looked alike to the crack professional, Crosby, and all were fish that came to Mills's net. Yet with all of Crosby's fine work, he had only four straights in the ten events, and Mills had but two. The men worked like machines at a steady, consistent speed, making few spurts, but doing their level best all the time.

WHAT LONG RUNS MEAN.

To the casual spectator sitting on the clubhouses benches or under the tents of the ammunition people, the mechanical feat of knocking targets into dust looks like a simple thing. The men perform with an ease and a grace characteristic of the star in every line, and what they do makes little impression while it is being done, although the score afterward enforces attention enough. Of the hundreds who sat through yesterday's sport, probably hardly one except the shooters themselves, realized what breaking, say, ninety-seven out of a hundred targets shot at means. Most do not go behind the personal equation, and assume success is merely at matter of pointing the gun right. As a matter of fact, this is only part of it, and as good a shot as Uncle Bill Crosby, the best, will admit readily that luck plays an immense part in the game. The best shotgun barrel ever bored by steel will not deliver a charge of No. 8 chilled shot into such a pattern at forty yards that one can depend upon breaking every bluerock that is fairly "centered" at that distance. The hardest shooting, full-choked guns will occasionally throw an open or patchy pattern; sometimes one shell out of a hundred is not all it should be. Experts figure that with the best of material, carefully loaded, there will be an average of five cartridges in a hundred sufficiently inferior to the rest to allow a bird to get through, even though the aim be a correct one. Any man will miss occasionally, and these long runs of consecutive breaks mean either that a perfect lot of shells has been secured, or, more often, that the bad shells and one's natural time to miss happen to coincide. A shooter may be unlucky, and still hold as true, judge as well as another who is taking his money away in every event, and in this one feature lies the reason why bluerock shooting retains its hold on the shooters, in spite of the exorbitant prices charged by the trust for shells. It can never become an exact science—not even when exploited by such a master mechanic as William R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ill.

More enthusiasm, better feeling and a bigger crowd were never seen at a Los Angeles tournament. The purses ran around $85, and straits paid from $4 to $9, according to the number of professionals "for birds only" in the respective squads. Somebody always has to lose, but as a whole the gunners split up the fun quite evenly, there being a number close behind Mills and Varien for amateur honors.

Interest centered in the crack professionals early, and never left them during the day. Crosby, Hirschy, Tom Marshall, Walter Huff, Otto Sens were the cynosure of all eyes, and the thing most of the spectators came to see. In warm and unqualified words the visitors praised the skill of the local trigger knights, and picked more than one man who could attain high laurels in the business end of the shooting game. Drilling along at average gait themselves, Hirschy was considerably better than on the first day, and attracted a great deal of comment to himself by the rapid fire, snappy style of smashing targets that he has made peculiarly his own. The best shots, as a class, aim to nail their blue rocks before they have lost the first steadying influence of the spring that slings them, and Hirschy is a splendid example of the advantages of the system. He, if anything, breaks his targets closer than Crosby, though "Uncle Bill" does not let them get more than a yard farther as a rule. There is just that much difference in the natures of the two men. Crosby, cool, phlegmatic, methodical, picks them out in the same place as regularly as a clock ticks off the seconds; Hirschy, mercurial, volatile, a typical Frenchman, snap-shoots and sometimes gets only "10 cents' worth," but seldom indeed does he go entirely wrong and miss a target unless he is deceived by the first angle and tarries too long before pulling trigger. At the middle distance part of the game Crosby probably has never had an equal, for he seems able on occasion to break them regularly at the end of a gun's range, and that in blue rock shooting is about forty yards. He is too good a shot and too experienced to do it except as a last resort, however.

GOOD INDIVIDUAL WORK.

There were all manner of pretty individual races. Oliver Orr got away fairly well, and opened the ball with four fourteens, then dropped two, came back with fourteen, and went wrong on the two twenty-bird events in time to spoil a chance for third money, losing four in each. He shot straight in the eighth.

W. H. Varien was in rare form. He is no longer shooting the trombone gun, but has a double-barrel, and seems to have profited somewhat by the change. He went to bat in deadly earnest in the morning, opening with a run of somewhere around forty, pulverizing every bird in professional style. The sixth event kept him out of first amateur average, or at least of tying Mills for it. He dropped three out of fifteen in that bad half hour, but four straits, three of fifteen and one of twenty breaks, helped to bring him up to one bird behind the Peatland Prophet. Varien is to be reckoned with in figuring high average winners. Mills generally has his trouble-book full the second day.

Only two birds back of Varien and three behind high amateur honors, that sterling young shot, Bob Bungay of Ocean Park, a comer if ever there was one, totaled 128 on the day. A bad event, the third, contributed materially to his undoing; he then lost three out of fifteen birds. A pair of thirteens also helped the others. Bungay is another who must be reckoned with when the average money is cut up among the contestants. He had the honor of tieing Emil Holling, the husky exponent of DuPont smokeless from San Franciseco, and Big Emil generally travels a gait that soon tires most.

Gus Knight, with his screw-stocked Parker, easily holds the international championship for furniture on a gun. His old mule-eared piece of ordnance, a cross between a ten and a twelve bore, either to suit the occasion, pulls the left barrel with the first trigger and vice versa; has a whole tannery on the stock in form of check pads, butt boots and the like, and in short is a work of art that needs only to be seen to be appreciated. How Knight manages to do the execution with it that he accomplishes deserves to rank as the eighth wonder of the world. Yet the howitzer mowed down no less than 131 out of the 150 birds and chalked up two straights, one of twenty birds. If Knight ever parts with that gun it ought to be hung up for a curiosity.

Tom A. Marshall was not quite at his best, but polished off a good proportion of his birds with two straights among them. Charlie Hagerman of the local club, who holds the heavyweight "beefing" championship, but never takes a back seat when bluerocks are around, put in some good work early in the day with two straights in the first four events. He had a hard-luck story to tell after the shoot was over, for the conductors would not stop for him, and when he finally held up a car, the boy with his automobile had tired of waiting for it, and he had to walk six whole blocks home.

At last accounts, Hagerman was doing as well as could be expected and it is thought he will be out again today.

There was a sad rift within the lute in the professional squad, all because of Otto Sens being a hotel man. He owns a joint of some sort somewhere in Houston, Tex., and claims to be broke to elevator and suite, single or double, and sure to stand without hitching. Bill Crosby and Henry Hirschy entertained in their rooms at the Alexandria Friday night and Otto was among those present. When time for adjournment came and the bellboy came up to say it was the breakfast hour, Otto made a dive for what he thought was the door and butted into Tom Marshall's closet clothes press. Impromptu and hurried exit followed, and another dive landed him in the bathtub. Yet another venture into Rosamond's maze left Sens more balled up than ever and Crosby, Marshall and Hirschy finally had to escort him to the only door which he had not attacked as yet—the right one. This will explain the evident frigidity between these gentlemen which almost congealed L. E. Parker's gasoline on the automobile trip out.

VAUGHAN GETS BUSY.

That old reliable local favorite, Jasper Edward Vaughan, whose varied assortment of powder burners seldom have spoken in vain at previous tournaments, was on hand yesterday with the Peters line of goods, making one of a rather formidable team representing the output of this branch of the ammunition trust. D. W. King, W. A. Hillis, F. L. Carter, Will A. Wright, J. B. Wood and several others were plugging hard for these goods, and in fact the ammunition concerns were all there in force. Wattles, Justins, Marshall, Heikes, Reed of the U. M. C. brand; Willie Seaver, Henry Hirschy, Billy Crosby, Harry Hoyt, and any number of gun men filled the professional ranks comfortably and as a whole the lot made excellent scores. After all the ammunition and the gun are a secondary matter; the fellows could change with one another and do just as well. As a matter of fact any standard goods made nowadays are better than the man who shoots them, and fully up to whatever work may be required.

There were some fast-stepping aggregations gathered together yesterday, and Squad No. 3 was about as lively a quintet as any. In the seventh event they broke things wide open. It was a twenty-bird race, and Knight and M. P. Chubb scored straight; Ed Fissel, Dr. M. E. Taber and D. W. King, Jr. rattled out nineteen each. Three dropped out of a hundred by five men is going some—97 per cent. A loud yell worthy of Pumpgun McDonald, or a band of Apaches punctuated the performance at this juncture, and announced the achievement of something out of the usual.

George Julian of Phoenix, Ariz., was in good eye yesterday, and rolled up 135 for 90 per cent. Walter Huff, who won the Grand American this year at Indianapolis, stopped in the same notch. Ed Vaughan was not at his best, but still broke 131. Vaughan when he gets his hand in again, ought

LOS ANGELES BEATEN OUT.

State Tennis Honors Won by Northern Experts.

Bell and Bundy Are Beaten in Men's Doubles.

Mrs. Bruce and Miss Dobbins Lose Ladies' Match.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four championships were decided in the tennis contests at San Rafael today and all of them went to representatives of Northern California. In the finals of the men's doubles Charley Foley and Fred Adams won from A. E. Bell and Tom Bundy of Southern California; Melville Long of California Tennis Club won the Junior singles; Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Ethel Ratcliff, the women's doubles and Charles Foley and Miss Hotchkiss the mixed doubles.

The final of the men's doubles developed some splendid tennis. Adams and Foley were in the best form they have ever shown in doubles and had but little trouble in defeating Bell and Bundy. The latter team played the same game they have throughout the tournament, but they were outclassed in the match.

Foley and Adams went right into the lead at the outset of the match, and the outcome of the first set was never in doubt. They did some splendid smashing and volleying, and kept their opponents on the defensive at all times. The score of the set was 6-2. The second set was a repetition of the first. Bell and Bundy tried hard at all times, but they could never catch up. The score of this set was the same as the first, 6-2. Bell and Bundy played somewhat better in the third set. They realized that it was their last chance, but Foley and Adams were not to be denied and finally won the set, 6-4.

Melville Long won the junior singles without much effort. He first disposed of Harold Getz of the Golden Gate Junior Tennis Club, 6-3, 6-4, and then won from B. Batkin, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1. Batkin played in good form throughout the match and deserves considerable credit for the showing he made.

SOUTHERN WOMEN EASY.

The easy manner in which Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Ethel Ratcliff won from Mrs. Bruce and Miss Dobbins of Southern California came as a surprise to the local enthusiasts. With a Sutton on the Southern team it was thought that the match would be close at least, but such was not the case. The winners outplayed their opponents and won by scores of 6-4, 6-4. The match was replete with long rallies, which Miss Hotchkiss usually ended with a swift drive or a volley down the side line.

Miss Hotchkiss's playing was easily the feature of the day. She drove, volleyed and smashed as only Miss May Sutton could do. Some of those present even ventured the opinion that Miss Hotchkiss would defeat Miss Sutton were they to meet in the challenge match. Miss Ratcliff also played good tennis and proved an able assistant to her clever partner.

MIXED DOUBLE PLAY.

Miss Hotchkiss and Foley won the first set, 6-2, and Miss Meyer and Janes the second, 6-3. The third set was nip and tuck from start to finish. First one team and then the other was in the lead, but finally Miss Hotchkiss and Foley won out by an 8-6 score.

Only two matches remain to complete the tournament and these will be played Monday. Miss Hazel Hotchkiss will meet Miss G. Dobbins in the finals of the women's singles and Melville Long will be opposed to George Janes in the challenge match of the men's singles.

GOLFERS PLAY FIRST ROUND.

Thirty-two Qualify in the President's Cup Tournament on Club Grounds.

The preliminary round of the President's Cup golf tournament was played off yesterday on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club, with forty-two contestants. Ideal weather conditions favored strong playing and a high average of good scores was maintained. The thirty-two players who qualified for the first round all made a net score of 92 or under, and as there were three contestants tied at that number at the end of the round, it was necessary to eliminate one of them by the drawing process.

The list of those who are now qualified to continue play today contains the following golfers in order of scores made: J. A. Chanslor, F. R. Frost, A. H. Conger, D. K. Dickinson, W. A. Barker, W. H. Spinks, W. B. Walton, William Frederickson, R R. McKinney, W. Cosby, F. W. Coffin, S. P. Hunt, J. H. Vail, S. S. Parsons, J. L. Kirkpatrick, J. M. Guinn, S. Gilson, H. D. Requa, E. O. Robinson, A. A. Fries, W. W. Butler, V. E. Howard, J. O. Cobb, H. Jevne, J. E. Cook, J. R. Hardy, A. F. Morlan, F. H. Edwards, M. L. Graff and W. H. Holliday. The last two to qualify will be chosen from W. E. Waddell, E. T. Pettigrew, and W. W. Thayer, who tied at 92.

Play in the first round of the tournament will be taken up today, and all matches will have to be completed before 2 p.m. Monday. All matches in the second round will have to be finished by Tuesday evening, and play in the third round will be concluded Monday, September 17. The fourth round will then be taken up, and completed before the 24th, and the finals will be run off on October 8. All matches will consist of 18 holes, except the finals, which will be 36.

William Frederickson did the star work in yesterday's play, making the course in 79, gross score.

The fifth annual convention of the Master Steam Boilermakers' Association, which has been in session in Chicago for five days, has adjourned, after selecting Cleveland as a meeting place in 1907, and the election of officers.

Los Angeles Man Contributes to Tire Problem.

Sutherland's Cushion Wheel New Solution Offered.

Differs Greatly from Efforts of French Inventors.

A field that has hitherto been the exclusive province of French inventors has been invaded by a Los Angeles man—the endeavor to replace pneumatic tires on automobiles by devices variously called elastic wheels, spring wheels, resilient wheels, or cushion wheels.

E. Sutherland, Jr., of Hollywood is the man to break into this field. He has been a mechanical man for some years, and has invented and patented a half dozen devices. Lately he has been working over the problem that has attracted the energies of many foreign designers, and as a result has produced what he calls the Sutherland Cushion Wheel.

This wheel is in reality a spring wheel, as the source of elasticity are steel springs, and rubber buffers or blocks, which form the principal part of many French wheels are not relied on. The spokes are not rigid, and by their spring-controlled displacement afford the resiliency. The felloe carries a solid rubber tire, to insure proper traction.

The wheel has ten spokes of drop-forged steel, with broad bearings on the hub ends. The hub consists of the axle housing with its bearings, very like the ordinary hub, with an outer and inner raised rim to afford seats for the ends of the spoke bearings. Thus the spokes are attached to the hub firmly, but are allowed plenty of play in the direction of the rotation of the wheel. The inner ends of the spokes project beyond their bearings something like a cam, and on these ends work short stiff springs which tend to keep the spokes in their normal positions.

The outer ends of the spokes are not attached directly to the felloe, but by springs. These springs are broad and flat, and very stiff. They are bolted to the inside of the felloe, and then turned up so that they run tangentially to the driving circumference of the wheel. Thus when they meet the ends of the spokes, they are at nearly right angles to them.

This accomplishes two objects. When drive is applied to the wheel through the hub, the spokes pull on the springs along their length, and none of the drive is lost in the resiliency of the steel, nor is there any strain in that direction. When an obstacle is encountered, the wheel has a constant amount of resiliency independent of the speed, for the up-and-down motion does not affect the driving motion or cause its direction to vary perceptibly.

With ten spokes in the wheel, it is evident that on account of the "eccentric driving" of any wheel that has a resilient element, there are eight spokes in action relieving the roughness of the road. The only ones not so employed are the two in a horizontal line. Each spoke has two springs, so that there are constantly in operation sixteen springs, being compressed on the bottom section of the wheel, and working in the reverse direction when at the top.

In this manner all strains in a vertical line, and strains due to applying traction, are provided for. There remains the side-strain set up when turning a corner, the bete noir of all wheels.

In this wheel, side strain is resisted by bearings on the hub end of the spokes, the bearings where the other ends of the spokes join the outer springs, and by the bolts holding the springs to the felloe. Although the greater leverage is applied at the hub, this bearing seems ample to resist the strain. The spokes themselves also seem ample. Whatever weaknes may develop will develop in the outer springs and their fastenings.

Exhaustive tests alone can determine whether there is a weakness here. The wheel has just been completed, and has not yet been placed on an automobile, so that practical results are yet wanting.

The Sutherland wheel differs largely from most of those produced in France. There the spring wheel has received a black eye, and the present tendency seems to be towards cushion wheels. The spring wheels failed in tests largely on account of the cars to which they were fitted, and their temporary oblivion does not seem merited.

Of the many wheels presented to the French public, the three which have shown the best are the Edmond Levi, called the E. L., the Garchey and the Soleil. The E. L. consist simply of three bands of rubber between the felloe and a channel section rim, over which is a solid rubber tire. The Garchey and the Soleil are constructed upon somewhat the same plan, the buffers being placed between the spokes and the hub. In each wheel large rubber rings of slightly different form are placed on the hub.

The Halle, the most successful spring wheel, has spokes which work in the large hub onto coiled springs, preserving their traction power by sliding sleeves on the spokes. This wheel has been made with wire spokes, where the spring part is placed in a floating wheel surrounding the hub.

Then there are several others—the Yberty, which is a straight out and out elastic wheel, made for small and light cars exclusively; the Ducsable automatic, also for light cars, with a floating air chamber; the Securitas, a metallic elastic wheel; Cadignan, a spring wheel that works very stiffly and has succeeded in breaking some axles; and the Monnin-Darnidot, another spring wheel.

In England there has been shown only one resilient wheel of prominence, the Vico. This consists of an inner and an outer wheel, separated by a succession of rubber rollers, on the principal of a ball-bearing. The curious feature of the wheel is that the drive is not positive. Traction is applied through arms bolted to the outer wheel, which fetch against pegs on the inner. These pegs work in slots, and are backed by springs, so the drive itself is elastic—a rather curious arrangement.

The problem is one that is gradually attracting more and more attention. The high price of rubber, the constant annoyance from punctures and the other ills that pneumatic tires are subject to, calls for some remedy. So far the remedy has been one that purchasers have concerned themselves with more than have the manufacturers. Several discussions has been conducted in the technical papers, wherein users of cars were asked what they considered the most needed improvement in automobiles. In nearly every case tires or some other problem of traction was given first place. There is no doubt that to users it is a most vital question.

The problem has been attacked from two ways. One camp has tried to evolve a puncture proof tire, the other a substitute for the tire. It is remarkable that from Los Angeles have appeared two strong bids for final success. The Anti-Rubber Tire appeared here some time ago, and now comes an entrant for honors in the other field, the spring wheel.

MANY MARKETS FOR OUR AUTOS.

BRAZIL OFFERS A LARGE AND NEGLECTED FIELD.

Natural Disposition of Buyers Is to Go to Europe, but the Expected Reduction in the Tariff Will Aid the Americans—Belgium and South Africa Also Offer Chances.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, is a good market for American-made automobiles, says active Consul-General George E. Anderson of that prosperous city. Several fine avenues and a boulevard system have recently been constructed, and will result in seventeen miles of an asphalt drive along the bay. Naturally such an opportunity for automobiles is attractive, and there are not only a large number of machines now in use, but their number is rapidly increasing. In line with the general situation there—the custom of many years—the natural disposition of Brazilian buyers is to go to Europe for their machines, but some good American machines are in Rio de Janeiro.

It seems probable that all that is necessary for more sales of American machines is a vigorous proper effort by American special agents driving and exhibiting American makes on the streets of the city. It is a maker of fair competition in a fair field, and a large field at that, because the population is nearly a million. We have a better chance now than ever because it is considered certain that Secretary Root's recent visit will result in the Brazilian tariff generally being, in various ways, made 40 per cent. easier on American goods.

The majority of the automobiles in use are of medium grade and medium price. The people of Rio do not seem to have any preference in makes as to size, all grades of machines being seen in use.

There is a similar, though smaller, field in almost all the cities of Brazil. With the general wave of improvement now sweeping over these cities, there will likely be an increased demand for automobiles. Outside the cities there is really no demand. The country roads are too rough.

Addresses of probable importers in Brazil are on file in the Bureau of Manufactures, Washington, D. C., and can be had for the asking.

Consul-General H. L. Washington of Cape Town reports that stronger motor cars are required for public use in that city. The light makes have given out. These are for lines unable to support regular steam trains.

CHANCE IN BELGIUM.

Consul-General G. W. Roosevelt of Brussels says motoring is popular in Belgium; good roads. Most popular cars are two and four cylinders of ten to fifty horse-power. Duty is 12 per cent. ad valorem. American energy, if put forth, could sell many American machines here.

Another Agents Flits East.

A. J. Smith of Elmore fame, often called "self-starting Smith," has left for the East to visit the Elmore factory. He will be gone about a month, and hopes to see 1907 Elmores put on the cars for him before he leaves the manufactory. If possible Mr. Smith will take in the Vanderbilt Cup race and the elimination trials, but he says that as soon as the 1907 line of goods is loaded on the train, he will come back to Los Angeles.

WRINKLES FROM OUR COUSINS.

LATE AUTOMOBILE DEVICES FROM ENGLAND.

Front Braking Now Attracts the Attention of Motorists There—Allen's Brake and Steering Control Successful—Novel Touring Trunk the Latest.

The lastest automobile wrinkles are coming out of England just now, and one that our John Bull cousins have presented to the autoing public is attracting a good deal of attention. This is the front wheel brake, in which device an attempt has been made to apply brake power to the steering wheels of an automobile without impeding the steering. A man named Allen is the inventor, and tests have proven the practicability of the scheme.

The object of the device is to obviate skidding, relieve the transmission brake of overwork, and generally increase the braking effectiveness. Side-slip is said to be overcome by it quite remarkably, and a further advance on the idea is being prepared, by which rear wheel and front wheel brakes are linked together and applied by a compensating device, so that all four wheels are braked equally and at once by pressing a foot pedal. This is said to be remarkably efficient.

In the Allen brake, the front wheel spindles have over them, attached to the top of the steering knuckle, a column which turns with the wheel, thus keeping a constant distance from the brake drum. Through the columns works the cable to a compensating device and thence to the pedal.

The Allen brake has incorporated with it another device, the Allen steering control. This consists of a metal rim below the steering wheel, somewhat after the fashion of the Rambler's control. When the brakes are applied and the car shows any symptoms of side-slipping, due to too sudden application or otherwise, the under rim is gripped up to the steering wheel proper, which locks the steering gear, and the front wheels cannot turn aside.

Both these devices have been tried on a 1905 Cadillac and a heavy Durkopp auto bus, with good results in both cases. With the Cadillac a section of asphalt was greased, and when the car was running over it at twenty miles, the brakes were jammed on. The car stopped very quickly without skidding in the least.

Another device that has come out of John Bull's little island recently is a novel auto trunk. This is circular in form, and is arranged to fit inside the spare tires carried at the rear of the machine or on the side. It has a dust-proof cover, which has straps around the circumference to attach it to the tires without using the tire supports if necessary. It will carry quite an amount of dunnage, and utilizes space generally not available.

ANOTHER NEW GARAGE.

Oldsmobile and Peerless Cars Will Be Exhibited in Building to Be Erected Immediately.

The H. O. Harrison Company, which is handling the Oldsmobile and Peerless cars, is now fully in the swing of business and is preparing to go into new quarters as soon as they are ready. At present Harrison is housed in the old Peerless agency, but he expects that his new building will be started in a couple of weeks.

The exact location of the new showrooms has not been disclosed, but it is understood to be along Gasoline Row on South Main street.

The lot has a frontage of sixty feet and a depth of 160, making the new building one of considerable size. It will be used exclusively for the automobile business, and consequently will be only one story in height. White pressed brick will be used for the face, and Mr. Harrison expects to have a handsome place.

Inside the floors will be of finished oak, and everything in keeping. In his recent trip to the East, Mr. Harrison investigated all the fine garages and showrooms that he could find, and the results of his inspections will be incorporated in the new building. He has a good many wrinkles to spring on Los Angeles, he says.

DOUBLE-ACTION COMES.

Two-Cycle Cousin of "Little Mercedes" Differs Little in Appearance from Four-Cylinder.

Long-expected, the two-cycle Oldsmobile has arrived in town. It is a sporty-looking car, very much like in lines and finish to the familiar model "S," and hardly to be told from it at a distance. The same gray finish and straight lines in the body are retained. The absence of the gates on the front seat, the slightly shorter body and the slightly smaller hood are the only marks that serve to distingish it from its big brother.

In general make-up the car differs very much less from the model "S" than might be expected. Control is by a three speed selective gearset, and spark and throttle levers in the usual position. There is an accelerator pedal at the foot of the steering column.

The motor is two-cycle, for which reason it is called the "double-action." It is built on the three-port principle under the famous Sintz patents, which stirred up such a row last winter. Twenty-four horsepower is the rating made by the Olds people, and the car certainly seems to have it. The motor pulls hard, and improves under a load, a general characteristic of the two-cycle engine. If a two-cycle motor does go to four-cycling, it is almost always when it is running light.

By braking and slipping the clutch, so as to keep a load on the engine, this Olds motor can be throttled down to a very slow rate without missing or going sluggish.

FOR SERVICE, NOT LOOKS.

Designer of Dorris Car Incorporates Pet Ideas in His Machine—Little Known on Coast.

The Dorris car, with which A. C. Stewart made his unique camping trip, as reported in yesterday's Times, is a car practically unknown on the Coast. It promises to be better known, as Mr. Stewart has taken the agency for it.

The car has a unique history. Mr. Dorris, the designer and builder, has had a long experience in the automobile business, as he was the man who created the St. Louis car. He had some disagreement with the St. Louis people, and decided to go out on his own. His ambition was to build a high-grade car at a moderate price, mainly designed for service, and not for looks or speed, with several of his pet ideas incorporated, and anticipate as far as possible the true American type of generally useful machine.

As a result, the main points of his car are in the line of simplicity and accessibility. The motor is very clean looking, and the working side, the left, has a rakish look because of the long valve rods and overhead tappets. Valves are mechanically operated and placed in the head. On the right side of the motor is a large mechanical feed oiler. This has been placed high, to be accessible, resulting in the peculiar shape of the hood, which looks more useful than graceful.

REPORTER WINS FORTUNE.

Bets All His Capital on a Long Shot Winner.

Buys Ticket on "Good Thing" Miss Crawford.

Lucky Man Was Refugee from San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That there is fortune waiting at the race track for any man who can take a few rebuffs and then come back with bells on as if nothing ever had happened, is proved by the case of Willie Cross, a western newspaper man who had his all wiped out by the San Francisco earthquake. Cross came East after the quake and finding things here slow in his chosen field, betook himself to the race track and proceeded to have a bout or two at fortune.

At first he had things coming his way and it was not long before he found himself lugging around a bank roll that made his spine bend. Out on the Coast he had seen a filly named Neva Lee perform quite cleverly, and knowing her trainer, framed up a killing that would send half the bookmakers back to their delicatessen shops. It was to come at Saratoga. He stood to win $60,000, but Neva Lee was beaten.

Wednesday, Cross came back again and he learned that Miss Crawford was going to be sent out for a killing in the fifth race, and resolved to have his share. He had exactly $1200 to his name, and this he proceeded to bet on the Darden mare, getting all the way from 30 down to 15 to 1 for his money. He stood to win exactly $28,000.

At no stage of it was Miss Crawford worse than second, but at that, at the head of the stretch did she look to have a chance to beat Martin Doyle, the leader.

Cross began to root, and no such rooting ever has been seen on an American race track. In the excitement of the moment he forgot the name of the horse he was betting on, so all that he could do was to do the best to help "the mare" in her gallant fight. "Come on, you mare," he shouted, snapping his fingers and throwing his hat in the air. "Oh, come on you mare," and he started on a dead run toward the finish with her and he beat her to it at that, but as she beat Martin Doyle and got the big end of the purse, he was satisfied.

ASCOT STAKE BOOK OUT.

Ten Stake Races Have Been Raised in Value—Horses Formerly Here Will Return.

Programmes are out for the winter race meeting of the Los Angeles Jockey Club, which will begin Thursday, November 29, and continue for ninety days. There will be sixteen stakes, as there were last year, and there has been an increase of $2750 added money to the stakes over last year. Last year the Riverside Stakes was a handicap event, and this year it will be a selling race, and the Hollywood Handicap, formerly a mile and a sixteenth, will be a mile this season. The Jonathan Club Handicap, Riverside Stakes, California Club Handicap, Hollywood Handicap, Coronado Selling Stakes, Pasadena Handicap, Santa Anita Handicap and Ascot Oaks each had $1250 added money last year, and this year they are raised to $1500 added money; the Catalina Selling Stakes has been raised from $1000 to $1250 added money, and the Ascot Handicap from $2500 to $3000.

These are the changes in the programme of stakes, as compared with last year, and these were made in the hope that by increasing the value of the stakes a better class of runners could be attracted here this winter. The big majority of the horses that were here last season will return this winter, and some of them are at the track now, having come down from Seattle. Horace E., the best two-year-old at Ascot last winter, will probably not be seen here again, for he is now the property of the Rainey boys and they think they are too rich to ship horses several thousands of miles to run in winter races. Horace E. didn't surprise any one this year but his owners when they bet on him.

ARIZONA SHOOT.

The Arizona Sportsmen's Association announces its fourteenth annual bluerock tournament at Tucson September 21 to 23 inclusive—a three days' affair.

The event will occur under the auspices of the Tucson Bluerock Gun Club. J. M. Konstadt, F. J. Stewart, George Martin, Jr., are officers of the State association, and H. A. Smith, George Julian and J. M. Ronstadt president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the Tucson club.

The dates claimed are unfortunate. They will prevent most of the eastern crack shots now here from competing. The weather is likely to be warm, too, and it would seem as if the Arizona brethren would have done better by waiting.

About 200 birds are programmed on average each of the three days, together with many special trophy events open only to Arizona shooters.

BRITAIN APPEALS TO CHINA.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The London Times this morning publishes and strongly supports a memorandum submitted to the China Association, representing almost all of the great British commercial houses and undertakings doing business in China, asking that the government take steps in concert with other powers, to procure the abrogation of the recent Chinese customs decree, which they regard as pregnant with danger to the smooth conduct of foreign trade. They contend that nothing short of a fresh edict can undo what the imperial edict has done.

I never took much stock in that lame ankle he complained of the last time he was to meet me. I don't want to lose time away from my business training if he's going to do that again. You know I never trained a day that time he got a lucky decision on me. This time I'll be right, and I'd just a little rather fight, winner-take-all—this GOES with me. Dalton never knocked out, you say—just wait another week before you say that again."

Manuel Torres, one of the most level-headed boys in the business, drops in to announce that he will have no trouble in making the 115 pounds ringside agreed on in his match with Eddie Menney. "Will I win?" repeats the little colored wonder in answer to the usual query. "Did I look much like a looser that last time when I put Menney out in the first round? You can just bet I haven't gone back any since then, and you just watch my smoke when we 'uns come together again." Pressed closely, however, Torres will admit that he has a weak jaw and on this point alone can he figure any remote possibility of defeat, but he adds as a clinching argument: "You can just bet he ain't a-going to hit me on that jaw."

Menney, one of the habitues of the battling headquarters, is not long in answering roll call. Considerably more humble in spirit since he lost to Torres the Chinese championship which he acquired by reason of his defeat of Ah Wing, he nevertheless is brimful of confidence that he will reverse the decision when they meet again. "I went in like a crazy man and let that hard-hitting colored boy make a monkey of me in that last fight. Thought I had him out sure when he went down with that wallop on the jaw, and I waded right in to him when he got up. I was so surprised when he came back at me that he had me licked before I knew what happened. No more taking any chances for me, and you just watch me wear him down this time. Now on the dead, boys, the fourth round is where he gets his, if you want to know."

"Montana Kid," who does battle with George Memsic in the main event of the evening, drops in to find out what he can about the peculiar method of boxing of his well-advertised antagonist. Serious, business-like and never holding an opponent too cheaply, still "Montana" does not fear to express unlimited confidence in himself. "You know how badly shattered some of these eastern reputations have been after the owners have been up against me," is the local boy's argument when talking of the coming battle. "Well, I don't care to talk about it, but isn't it just possible that there will be another name to add to the list in another week or so?"

Memsic, training out at Arcadia, works much and says little, but when he runs in for a car ride two or three times a week, only says he hopes "Montana" is as good as he has heard him cracked up to be. "No easy propositions for me; the harder they are the better I like them," is the way he puts it. "I guess if I can beat Adam Ryan in ten rounds, nobody around here is going to scare me a whole lot. I never did strike such a perfect place for training as Arcadia, and I'm getting just a little better than I ever was before every day."

And so it is with all the others, Leonard Lauder, Young Barry, Scotty Johnson, Jimmy Ervin, Tommy Leahey and last but not least, the New Turk, protegé of the Terrible One, who is confident his weight in wild cats would not be any too much for him. When all has been said and heard, it seems quite inconceivable that within the next few days half of all these boys will have experienced the bitter sting of defeat. Nevertheless, not one among them but will be just as self-confident the "next time out."

SPORTING MAN FEELS GLUM OVER LACK OF CROAKERS.

Buffalo Visitor Tells of His Happiest Hours in Going Boating at Night and Catching Big "Yellow Bellies" in Still Waters of the Empire State.

"The recent little affair in Goldfield, combined with the big shoot now taking place here, has caused many strange faces to be seen along the Los Angeles Rialto during the past week," said a well-known man about town yesterday. "On one of the first trains in from the scene of battle was my old friend Dick Evans, one of the leading sportsmen in Buffalo, N. Y., in the days when Frank Erne was breaking in to the lightweight ranks as a possible champion and Robert J., the great little Hamlin pacer, was establishing world's records every other day.

"Dick had a troubled look on his face, wholly foreign to his usual jolly countenance and expansive smile, and I determined to get at the source of his trouble in the most diplomatic manner possible.

"What do you think of this part of the country, I ventured. Has it come up to all your expectations?

" 'Fine country, and the greatest for real sport I ever saw in my life,' Dick answered promptly, 'but———,' and that was as far as he would go on my first attempt at cross-examination.

"Feeling pretty certain much of his spare time would be put in searching the waters of the Pacific for denizens of the deep, or in looking up future prospects for game back in the mountains, I pursued, my investigations along those lines.

" 'Yes,' he acknowledged reluctantly, 'plenty of big fish in these waters and hunting will be out of sight here this fall, but———,' and then again came his strange reluctance to go any further."

"In sheer desperation, I then suddenly determined to give up trying to elicit the truth through any further attempt at diplomatic lore, and taking my courage in both hands, asked bluntly:

"Well, then, what on earth is the matter with you, going around with that long face? You have already told me that the family is well, the babies grown up and fit for a beauty show, and that fortune has dealt kindly with you in every way. Loosen up old man, and perhaps we can find a balm for your wounded feelings.

"This appeal evidently stirred Dick considerably, for he no longer avoided the issue, and with some look of relief on his clouded countenance, he blurted out: 'Frogs!

"Frogs!—what on earth did he mean?

"For a moment I did not know whether I had better take Dick to a specialist in mental diseases or have him overpowered by an officer before he ran amuck—then suddenly the truth dawned upon me in all its humor and looking up at Dick, we both joined in a hearty laugh.

"Nearly twenty years ago, when we were boys together, Dick and I had become the mightiest frog hunters in western New York. Craft and cunning had increased with years. None of your red flannel brigade were we, conten to get a 'mess' after an all day hunt, but in the dark of night, with an improvised searchlight in the bow we would glide noiselessly along the still waters of the neighboring streams, and carefully selecting only the monster 'yellow bellies' sitting roaring on the lily-pads, would come back with a hundred or more pairs of the luscious hind legs.

"It became a mighty passion with both of us, and where before we had been ruthless slaughterers of game and fish, it was seldom indeed that the old pastimes were reverted to, at least during frog season. The old times had been treasured up by Dick, and in his mind's eye he had pictured another mighty onslaught to be made by us on our old jumping friends when we met again after a long separation, under Southern California's cloudless sky.

"After we had both regained our equilibrium, my old friend went on to tell me that careful inquiry and search by him had failed to reveal any game worthy of our steel in the immediate neighborhood. 'Why,' said he with disdain, 'the only frogs I have seen around here were of a size we used to throw back in the river—think of you and me going after that kind of game, my boy! No, I have found much pleasure in the short time I have been here, but I shall never quite get over my disappointment at finding myself in a frogless country.'

" 'Never mind, old man,' Dick ended with a touch of sadness, 'you shall come East next June when the frogs are thickest. We will devote a whole solid week to our old sport and will discover so many new styles of cooking the edible dainties that the greatest French chefs in the New York hostelries will be green with envy!'

"And you can just bet your last dollar that if I am alive, I will be there with Dick when that time comes," concluded the local sportsman with enthusiasm.

MURPHY WINS EASY BOUT.

Beats Johnny Dwyer in Six Rounds in Philadelphia, but Neither Man Was Injured.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tommy Murphy of New York won from Johnny Dwyer of Perth Amboy in the six-round battle before the National Club last night, but neither man was hurt and both could have gone as they did for many rounds more.

Murphy had the better of it on points, and in the fourth round nearly put his man out, but Dwyer came back strong and was making a good showing at the finish.

David S. Taggart, recently appointed district freight and passenger agent for the Oregon Short Line at Reno, Nev., has resigned, and in future will engage in other business. His resignation becomes effective September 15, and he will be succeeded by E. W. Clapp of San Francisco.

COACHES IN FRONT RANK.

Names That Are Household Words in Football.

Stagg, Williams, Yost Are Among the Famous.

Reed's Salary Equals That of a Congressman.

Football as the national college pastime has long since so firmly intreached itself in college life as a sure means of working off surplus energy that there will probably never be any sport that can take its place in the curriculum of the young man who is looking more for the strenuous side of an education than for the valuable or practical part.

Admitting this self-evident fact it then becomes of the first importance to consider the men who make this sport what it has become in college life, and one does not have to look far before he sees the football coach as the leading man in the game, for largely on the success of his team depends the question as to his value in college work and whether or not he is worth considering. Many think he should be put upon the staff of instructors, for he is a far more important man to a majority of the students of a big university than any professor in it, for he not only exercises a great influence on the lives of the men under him, but draws down a salary often largely in excess of many of the most learned professors connected with the institution. For these reasons he is a very important man in any college.

Just who is the greatest football coach is a matter of opinion, for each big college has its favorite, and that is the man to swear by. He may not be as successful as other coaches, but his apologists have always the excuse that he had poor material to work on, or that the men were sick or did not follow out his instructions. There are hundreds of excuses for the failure of coaches, and under these circumstances it is difficult for a non-college man to pick out the best one.

Among the recognized best are Dr. Williams and Murphy of Pennsylvania; George Woodruff of Pennsylvania and Carlisle; Reed of Harvard, Yost of Michigan and Stagg of Chicago University. These are names to conjure with, and football enthusiasts dream about them and yearn to even see such mighty men, and while they hug the whole bunch to their hearts as an aggregation of wonders, it is doubtful if the most rabid fiends could pick out one he thought the best, unless he had been to the school to which some particular one lent his presence—for real money.

All these men have a national reputation, and it is practically useless to attempt to give their history, which is certainly known to all football men. Reid of Harvard is probably the highest-priced man in the business, for he is said to receive a salary of $5000 per year, but he is evidently worth all he is paid, judging from the fact that he is paid that money and gets his share of victories with his team.

Yost is probably better known than any of the coaches, owing to his phenomenal success with the Michigan University players year after year. His bunch is spoken of as Yost's Football Machine, and when it is in working order it certainly does business with the regularity of a machine. His hardest work now is the training of a team that will beat the Pennsylvania team, the undisputed champions of the East.

Every one that has heard of Chicago as a city has heard also of Coach Stagg of the Chicago University footfall team. Stagg is equally famous as a man who has turned out some fine football men, and as a coach who emphasizes the educational importance of the game on his men in after life.

George Woodruff may not be so well known to the average follower of the game as some of the other coaches, but he is known to thousands of players as the inventor of the "guards buck," the "flying interference," and half a dozen other famous schemes for gaining ground. He is one of the best strategists that has ever been connected with the game. For some years he was coach of the University of Pennsylvania team, and last year had charge of the Carlisle Indians.

Last, but not least, by any means, in this brief list are Dr. Carl Williams and Mike Murphy, coach and trainer of the University of Pennsylvania team. For the past three years these men have made the Penns an unbeatable team among the eastern colleges, and from all accounts the prospects for the team for the coming season are better than ever, for a number of men who were ineligible last year will be able to play this season.

These are some of the men who do the real work of directing the forces at their command, and it would be as difficult to pick out the best one as to tell which team will win the honors this season. All have an almost countless number of partisans, who will hope for their success.

SANTA BARBARA ATHLETICS.

High School Sports Will Be Boomed in Adjoining Counties—No Football in Sight.

Interscholastic athletics will be lively this winter in Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, if the plans now being formed by the high-school pupils of Ventura, Santa Paula, Oxnard and Santa Barbara, are carried out, as they hope and expect they will be. The formation of the Channel Athletic League, which was started two weeks ago in Ventura between pupils and instructors of these schools, will probably be consummated next Saturday, when William Wyman and Principal Montieth of the Santa Barbara school go to that city to give their approval to the rules and regulations of the league, and to form a schedule of games between the different schools.

Baseball, basketball and tennis will be the principal games played this year, and, of course, there will be the regular field sports next spring. Football will have to take a back seat, so far as the Channel high schools are concerned. The general disapproval placed upon the national college game seems to have put an end to any interest that ever existed here, and the local High School athletes are not very enthusiastic over that kind of sport. The game as it has been played does not appeal to them. Rugby has been suggested as the proper sport for high schools and colleges by President Wheeler, but the Santa Barbara boys don't agree with him, and the association game has never been seriously considered by them.

The first games of the year will be played on Saturday, September 15. There will be tennis games in the morning and a baseball game in the afternoon at Ventura between the Santa Barbara and Ventura High School boys. On the same day the Oxnard and Santa Paula athletes will play the same games at Santa Paula. The try-outs in tennis and baseball will be played in Santa Barbara next Saturday, at which time the Santa Barbara teams will be selected.

CAMBRIDGE BEATS HARVARD'S MEN.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PUTNEY (England) Sept. 8.—By the decisive distance of two lengths Cambridge won the great international boat race today, stalling off by a steady, powerful stroke all Harvard's desperate spurts. The light blues had the advantage of the choice of stations, which gave them at least a length to the good in consequence of the wind-sheltered water on the Surrey side of the river. They got away ahead at the start, and were able to maintain their lead, and even increase it as soon as they reached the wind-roughened water at Chiswick. It was a pretty race throughout.

There was a moment of intense expectancy as the two crews backed their craft to the stakeboats, and then leaned far forward, awaiting the signal. The pistol shot broke the spell, and both crews got away from the mark boat cleanly, amid a deafening roar from the multitude. The start was perfect, both crews taking the water at the same instant. Neither splashed, but with soft, steady precision the Cambridge men drove the bow of their boat half a length ahead within the first two boat lengths. As the English boat shot ahead a wild yell went up from the patriotic masses.

Cambridge went at a tremendous pace of forty-two strokes to the minute at the start, gradually reducing this rate, while the Harvard men hardly rowed above thirty-five. The light blues gained stroke by stroke until by the time Craven Steps were reached daylight showed between the shells. Then the crowds went mad, and it was 100 to 1 that Cambridge would be the winner.

Little more than a length separated the boats at Craven Steps, but on reaching the mile post the bow of the river on the Surrey side gave the Cambridge crew a small advantage. The head wind sent the tide rolling down this reach making a broken sea of which the Americans got the full benefit, while the Englishmen were protected by the river bank in the Surrey side.

By the time the boats reached the Crab Tree, about a mile and a half from the start, Stuart, the Cambridge stroke, had taken his boat over two lengths to the front. Harvard's stroke, Filley, at this point called on his men for a great effort, and they responded gamely. The quickened stroke soon told, the daylight between the boats was seen to be visibly lessened and when the Cambridge shell shot by Hammersmith bridge, the Englishmen were barely a length and a quarter ahead.

ushing on past the Lead Mills, where both boats were doing thirty-seven strokes, Cambridge maintained her lead and the crew appeared to be coming well within themselves. As the boats turned the bend and entered rougher water, Harvard again spurted and the magnificent effort sent the American boat up on its opponent foot by foot.

At Chiswick, the English stroke shook up his crew and began to pull away from Harvard. At the three-mile post Cambridge was over two lengths in front, and on reaching the Devonshire Meadows, the Englishmen were two and a half lengths ahead, and the race was practically over. Harvard, however, was game to the end and spurted again, gaining a length. But it was too late to retrieve the fortunes of the day, and Cambridge passed the winning post, easy victors of a gallant race, by two lengths. Time 19m. 16s.

French Trade Disturbed.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A local automobile scribe remarks that in spite of the indifference displayed by the French automobile trade toward foreign competition, those interested in upholding the supremacy of the French automobile show are showing a good deal of uneasiness in the fact of efforts being made to divert business to London and Berlin. The writer then proceeds to examine the customary French argument of maintaining the regular date for the French show. He thinks the argument weak, owing to the fact that whatever the French makers say, they are taking care to exhibit both in London and Berlin.

MANY DOGS TO BE SEEN.

Entry List Closed Thursday at Midnight.

Several New Breeds Will Be on Exhibition.

Airedales and Wolf Hounds Never Here Before.

Things were doing among the dog men during the past week, for on Thursday night at midnight the entries closed for the big dog show that is to be held at Venice the latter part of next week. While the returns will not be in for several days, it is expected that there will be between 100 and 150 entries to the various classes. All the classes have filled in a manner satisfactory to the management.

While a number of the entries that were seen last year will not be in this year for various reasons, there will be several new kinds of dogs that have never been seen here in a bench show, and possibly never on the Coast. Chief among these is some Russian wolf hounds that will be shown by Carl Curtis of Pasadena, and a class of Airedale terriers that will be exhibited for the first time on the Coast.

Two of the big features of the show will be the fine specimens of Dalmatians or coach dogs, and the St. Bernards. There is a large class of St. Bernards, and the pick of these will probably be Sir Violet and Sir Violet, Jr., who won first and second prizes at the St. Louis Exposition. There will also be a number of imported puppies from the Feilchenfield Bros.' kennel, which shows the Sir Violets.

The pick of the Dalmatians is doubtless the valuable dog "Coach," that his owner, Zue Peck of this city, asks $1500 for. Sheriff White will also have a good one in Pat, and there are about sixteen others entered from this city alone.

The Boston terriers will be represented by at least twenty-five fine dogs, all good enough to win prizes. Mrs. Frankie Turner shows her fine bitch, Anna Gift; J. W. Brooks has in his champion, Bayside Chauncey; the Glenwood kennels will send Mischief, Smuggler and Chum, among others; Edmund Morgan enters his fine dogs, Conqueror and Vixen, and Marshall Cooper, of the Hotel Hinman, has in Miss Victor.

There will be a dozen English bull terriers, the list including, among others, George MacClean's Moston Monarch; Mrs. P. C. Meyer's Endcliffe Baron, and the Bencroft kennel's fine dog, Togo. Among the French bulls there will be two new importations in Philip Meyers's Glenwood Margaret and Mrs. Edwin Edelhoff's Duc de Bordeaux.

There will be plenty of Dachshunds, Toy Spaniels, Collies, pointers and setters, and the best way to be assured of this is to go to the show and see them. Special arrangements will be made to carry the dogs down to Venice on the morning of September 20.

VIM WITHDRAWS FOR FOULING.

GERMAN YACHT WANNSSEE WINS ONE CLOSE VICTORY.

American Boat Collides With the Caramba at the Start—Auk Took the Lead at Once for America, but Was Beaten Out at the Finish. Races to Continue This Week.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MARBLEHEAD (Mass.) Sept. 8.—With the New York yacht Vim having two victories to her credit and the Boston boat Auk one, it was today or never for the other four aspirants for the Roosevelt Cup, including the three German challengers. Today was fixed for the fourth race, and under the conditions only the winners of the fourth event could continue in the contest for the trophy.

Although the chances of the Germans capturing the cup were regarded as very slim, the foreigners did not seem discouraged.

At the start of the race the American yacht Vim, winner of Wednesday's and Thursday's races, fouled the American yacht, Caramba, and withdrew.

After the foul the Auk took the lead, with the Caramba second, while the German yachts fought between themselves for third place. All five boats were around the mark within four minutes of each other, the Auk leading at 12:19:05.

After an exciting run to make the starting point, Wannssee got the wind of the Auk, took the lead and rounded the point ahead. This was the first time a German has led at one of the marks. The Auk was second, and the Caramba third.

The Wannssee won by more than a minute. The result of today's race leaves the American yacht Vim with two victories, and the Auk and the Wannsee one each.

AUTO PARTY AT TAHOE.

Riverside People Return After Unusual Trip to Lake Over High Pass.

A party of Riverside people, consisting of D. Cochrane, proprietor of the Hotel Holyrood; Mrs. Cochrane, A. J. Sheldon and A. F. Hammon, have just returned from a two months' trip to Yosemite and Lake Tahoe. Their car was a four-cylinder Rambler, and they experienced little trouble on the trip.

The trip into Lake Tahoe is one that few cars attempt, and especially is the road over by Summit let alone by the machines. The usual way into the lake district is by Truckee and up the valley of the Truckee River. Unusual rains had flooded the road bed here, however, and the Cochrane party went in over the Summit.

In this trip an altitude of about eleven thousand feet has to be climbed, a heighth greater than that of the mountain passes in Europe, about which we hear so much. The rise in the road runs about a thousand feet to the mile for some distance, and the grade is the worst long one for automobiles in the State. The Cochrane party had to make many continuous miles of low-gear work to get over the summit.

The Navy Department is informed that the cruiser Charleston, with Secretary Root and party on board, sailed from Tocopilla, a small Chilean port about 100 miles north of Valparaiso, Friday evening for Callao, Peru, where elaborate preparations are being made for their reception.

GIRL PITCHES BALL AND DOES IT WELL.

MISS CARRIE MOYER.

THERE is a very widely-spread tradition that no woman can throw anything, and if she does attempt the impossible, the one place of safety for any human being is directly in line with what she aims at. So often have the jokesmiths thrashed over this idea that it has become fixed in the public mind as a great scientific fact. Anatomy is called in to support the idea. It is said that a woman's shoulder blade is constructed on a plan totally distinct from that employed when a man is in prospect, so that she really isn't to blame when the stone hits the house insetad of the chicken.

But a living refutation of this pseudo-scientific theory has arisen. A girl has been discovered who cannot only throw straight, but hard, and with perfect control. She is Miss Carrie Moyer. The West, which has produced so many girl athletes, cannot claim her. She is the product of Macungie, Pa.

She is now winning fame twirling for a ball nine in her home town. From earliest childhood she has had a love for baseball, and played o' cat" with the boys of her borhood. When the rival boy tossed up for first choice in a game, she was certain to be selected by the lucky winner.

But it was not until she was a dent at the Kutztown Normal that her great ability as a pitcher into public ken. There she came out for the school nine, a place on it, playing regularly pitcher's box.

It also gives less opportunity for controversy among the people over the merits of the game. All classes will enjoy and approve of the Association style. I have nothing against Rugby, but believe the other game would prove better all around."

Fourteen straight victories is the record of the baseball team this season and not until last Saturday was it defeated, when the Harper-Reynolds aggregation took them into camp, although in justice it must be said that many of the best Y.M.C.A. players were absent. The team has been playing in the Saturday Afternoon League and for two years has beaten every club which went against it.

Some of the players are among the best amateurs in Southern California. Beal is the crack second baseman and captain of the Occidental team and was considered the best for that position on the all-star collegiate team last spring. J. Reinhard, who has been playing short until recently, when he left the city, pitched the game which the University of California won from Stanford last season, and he is also a football star. James Gray is a crack catcher, and Jessen and Ward are considered two of the best amateur pitchers hereabouts. Other members of the team are: Wilson, first base; Goodwin, shortstop; Reiley, third base; Cole, left fielder; Swartwout, center fielder; C. Reinhard, right fielder. McKenzie and Smith are substitute outfielders.

INDOOR BASEBALL TEAMS.

An indoor baseball team undoubtedly will be formed to enter the Southern California League which is in process of organization. Those especially interested are M. L. Rice, a member of the business men's class, and John Goodwin, a member of the outdoor baseball team. It is probable that most of the members of the latter aggregation will try for positions on the indoor team, as many of the professionals in the East find it beneficial to do so. It is possible that a large tent will be erected under which the games can be played. Bleacher seats will be provided for spectators.

Harry G. Vorhauer, the new assistant director, has been a member of the physical department for two years and has developed into a first-class gymnast. He has been a member of the secret "E.G.O." Society of the Y.M.C.A. since its organization and also is a member of the Leaders' Corps and as such has had experience in taking charge of classes under direction of the physical director. Vorhauer has proved to be a popular leader and has the confidence and respect of the members. He succeeds J. D. Foss, formerly director at Riverside, who has entered U.S.C.

"It is not only the ambition of the physical department to provide hygienic exercises and recreation for young men of the city," says Director Price, "but also to develop them into leaders of men and to enter into the physical directorship as a field of great usefulness. Mr. Vorhauer is an example of what we are aiming to do. Another is B. R. Larkin, who expects to become a physical director in the near future and who proposes to enter the training school at Springfield, Mass., this fall, with that end in view. Still another is Walter Sheck, formerly of this city, who is giving exhibitions through the East and is taking the opportunity to address meetings of Y.M.C.A. men and others on athletics."

CRACK ATHLETES READY.

As soon as the gymnasium is fitted up the crack gymnasts will prepare for the contests to decide the Coast championships. Among the most prominent are Claude Littlepage, Harmon H. Bittman, Louis L. Alauzet, Eugene McCann, George Livingston, Stanley Hart, Roy Sutherland, R. R. Hatch, John Macready, Harry Macready, William W. Beaman, Grover Adams, Charles Dane and Jack Clark. Most of these men are in light training now and expect to get down to regular work when the gym is open to use.

Bittman is the best all-around gymnast in the Y.M.C.A., and is captain of the gym team for the season. He also is the second best all-around indoor athlete, thus ranking higher than any other man. Second to him comes Alauzet, chairman of the Exhibition Committee. He is a crack swimmer and fancy diver, in which he shows his best form. In addition he is a fair boxer and good football player.

Littlepage is the champion indoor athlete and captain of the indoor athletic team. He will head the team which goes to Watsonville, Cal., to compete at the time of the State Y.M.C.A. convention in February. He has been a member of the association for five years and received all his training in the local gym. He was one of the men picked to represent Los Angeles at the St. Louis Fair, but was unable to attend.

McCann was second to Champion Bittman in the gymnastic contest with Pasadena last winter. He will attend Stanford University this fall and has already been appointed a member of the Leaders' Corps there. The local team will suffer by his loss.

C. H. Price will continue to act as physical director. He came here five years ago from Mont Clair, N. J., and has turned out some of the best athletes the State ever produced, among whom is Parsons, the crack sprinter. At Portland the team representing this city won a large majority of the events and took first prize. Price will have entire charge of planning the gymnasium to be installed in the new Y.M.C.A. building.

SAY BURNS WILL BEAT FLYNN.

Simply Case of Wheelhorse Against Mudder, Is Claim of the Wise Dopesters.

Jim Flynn, who is to meet Tommy Burns in Los Angeles the 28th inst., is a hard-hitting, husky lad who has been in the game a number of years, but is the victim of the stay-at-home germ which has kept so many persons in the background, whether in the fighting game or in other walks of life. Pueblo, Colo., is Jim's home town, but occasionally he jumps over to Colorado Springs, and once is known to have gone to Denver. If he comes to Los Angeles it will be the first time he has traveled outside his native heath. Flynn might have given a good account of himself back East had he been brave enough to cross the Mississippi. At that Jim has met many of the top-notchers and gave Jack O'Brien one of the battles of his career. If he does not get homesick for the sight of Pike's Peak and Cripple Creek, he should give Burns a run for his money. Burns will win, say the wise ones, for it is a wheelhorse against a good mudder. Flynn is game, but Burns has more class.

By the way, it was Flynn who kicked up such a fuss a couple of years ago about the proper way to count a fighter out, and his friends gave Otto Floto, the Denver sporting writer, the scare of his life. It was when Flynn fought Jack O'Brien. The Colorado boy was outclassed, but game to the core, and was prolonging the battle by taking out time whenever hard hit. Incidentally he was receiving a good beating and along in the twelfth or thirteenth round he forgot to come back when the referee counted seven and delayed to take the full count. When Floto said "nine," Flynn waited for ten, but the referee yelled "and out." Flynn had lost the fight. His miner friends thought he had been jobbed and started for Floto. It was all the fat boy could do to get out of the hall under escort of the police and he was compelled to jump the first train back to Denver.

Flynn's seconds claimed the referee should have counted the full ten and then called the man out, but Floto said that the count of nine only was necessary and the "your out" sufficed for the tenth count. Flynn, though beaten, was ready to go a few more rounds.

NEW BREEDING FARM.

Newman, Well-Known Horseman of New York, Is to Go Into Breeding Business in Kentucky.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LEXINGTON (Ky.) Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. N. Newman, the New York horseman and owner of the trotting stallion, The Director General, has purchased the Headley farm of 275 acres and will engage extensively in the breeding of trotting horses. He has a corps of civil engineers at work laying out the farm into paddocks, and will select a band of brood mares in the stud this fall. His famous stallion has attracted much attention this season by the performances of his sons and daughters, the most noted of his get being Mainsheet, 2:07¾, the season's fastest trotting stallion, and one of the biggest winners in the string of "Al" Thomas.

ELECTIONEER IS SPEED MARVEL.

FUTURITY WINNER EXPECTED TO MAKE HIGHER RECORD.

Son of Voter Comes of One of the Best Racing Families in the World and Should Make His Mark on the Turf for Several Years to Come.

Electioneer, the son of Voter, which won the rich Futurity Stakes at Sheepshead Bay recently, had attracted unusual attention from his owner, Maj. G. B. Thomas, even as a yearling, the major declaring that he was a second Domino and would prove his worth early in his racing career. How this was to come true is now only too evident, and how good he really is will probably be shown before the end of the racing season, for a colt which can come from eighth place at the head of the stretch and beat such a speedy filly as Pope Joan, the latter having a long lead throughout, is bound to get better as the season progresses and the distance for two-year-olds is increased.

That the colt was not given more consideration for the Futurity was simply because he had been both green and unlucky in his first three starts. At Brighton July 13, his first start, he was beaten a head by McCarter, the latter a colt of ordinary caliber. Electioneer was practically left at the post in that race and was coming like a Kansas cyclone at the end. His second start, in the Montauk Stakes at the same track, July 25, he was beaten a length by Salvidere, possibly the best 2-year-old of the year, but easily disposed of his former conqueror, McCarter, which finished fourth in the race. His last start before the Futurity, in the Flash Stakes, at Saratoga, August 6, again resulted in his finishing second, this time being beaten a head by Peter Pan. Electioneer bolted at the head of the stretch in this race, otherwise he would have won, showing dazzling speed throughout.

IS OF RACING FAMILY.

The peculiarities of horse racing are well illustrated in this colt, which in his first three starts gathered in $1200 for his owner, Billy Lakeland, and ended up by winning $27,000 the fourth time out. That he comes by his speed honestly is evident not only in his breeding, but from the fact that he is a half-brother to the famous Tommy Atkins, the greatest 2-year-old of the year 1900, which died as a result of his trip to England. He is also a half-brother to the many time winners Trumpet, Maxine Gomez, David II. and Trogan, while his dam, Quesal, was a high class mare, winner of six races as a three and four-year-old, and the horses named above are her only foals on the turf. Electioneer certainly comes from one of the best racing families in the world, and moreover from one of the durable kind, and he should make his mark on the turf for several years to come.

RICH PURSES GARNERED.

That the amounts given away in stakes and purses by the different racing associations in the East is greater this year than in any previous seasons is amply proven by the enormous amounts won by the leading owners of racehorses in this country. Twenty owners have won a million dollars in the first eight months of the year, while those owning smaller stables have profited to a corresponding extent.

James R. Keene, with $109,290 to his credit, heads the list, while Thomas Hitchcock Jr., mainly through the winnings of his splendid two-year-old, Salvidere, comes second on the list with $88,000. Then comes Sydney Paget, Harry Payne Whitney, Barney Schreiber, Alexander Shields, James B. Brady and the Newcastle stable, with over $50,000 each.

Winners of $25,000 or over, in addition to the above, are as follows: G. J. Long, $47,312; F. R. Hitchcock, $46,000; W. S. Williams, $39,770; J. A. Drake, $39,020; August Belmont, $36,960; Ed Corrigan, $35,175; J. W. Fuller, $34,354; Oneck Stable, $31,635; R. T. Wilson, Jr., $30,515; C. R. Ellison, $30,474; S. C. Hildreth, $29,296; Ormondale Stable, $28,780.

DR. GARDNER PROMISING.

Barney Schreiber's great California colt, Dr. Gardner, is extensively engaged in the big stakes to be run at the eastern tracks for the next two months, and if he still retains that wonderful speed that characterized his running last spring, he should hold his own with the cracks of the East. On the first day of the Sheepshead Bay meeting, he showed great speed in the Fall Handicap, at six furlongs, but tired as if short and will no doubt do much better after he has had two or three races, his long rest precluding the possibility of his going to the post in the best possible condition on the occasion of his first start. His work will be watched with considerable interest locally, as he was considered a world-beater when he left here at the end of the winter season.

SAWYER IS GOLF CHAMP.

Defeats Warren Wood of Homestead Club in a Very Close Match, Requiring an Extra Hole.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—When D. E. Sawyer of the Wheaton Country Club, and Warren K. Wood of the Homewood Golf Club of Chicago, teed off today for the first thirty-six holes which decided the amateur championship of the Western Golf Association, it was under conditions that were very disagreeable. The links have been drenched almost daily since Monday, and a heavy early morning rain made the going loggy and uncertain when the championship round was started. Wood had Sawyer three down at the end of the first eighteen holes.

Sawyer finally, won the golf championship, one up, defeating Wood.

It took thirty-seven holes to decide the championship match.

LIGHTNING KILLS CADDY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—During a sudden and severe storm which swept over the western part of the city this afternoon, Ed Maggin, a caddy, was struck by lightning and killed on the Glen Echo golf links, where the final round of the Western golf championship was being played.

Many Futurity Entries.

LEXINGTON, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Secretary H. W. Wilson arrives here from the East he will announce the entries in the classic events of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, to be decided here in October. The lists show that all the good ones will be on hand. There are about twenty-five entries in the famous Kentucky Futurity for 3-year-olds and the other stakes have filled equally well.

USE STUB RODS FOR PUP TUNA.

ONE BRILLIANT SCHEME OF THE "LIGHT" TACKLERS.

Wise Anglers Are Watching for What Will Happen Down San Pedro Way After the Suction Dredger Has Been Working Awhile on the Bar Back of Croaker Point.

The tuna and yellowtail have gone on strike—that is to say, they have refused to strike at the anglers' offerings outside San Pedro in the places where fishing is generally good.

Usually splendid in September, the trolling outside has all gone to the bad during the last week, and many are the theories advanced by the boatmen to account for it—heavy swells and the like predominating.

Catalina's light-tackle brotherhood had quite a seance with the pup tuna a few days ago, plenty of forty to sixty pounders being available. Some of the anglers—in justice to the rest of the light-tackle users, a very small minority—have turned their attention to the subject of rods, now that the fat nine-thread line proposition is no longer tenable, and have evolved a way of setting the rod regulations at naught. The latest is to saw off a section of cane pole of the desired stiffness, lash a reel, some agate guides and other light furniture on the same and dub it a "light-tackle rod." One young man whose sportsmanship is as filled with holes as a forty-niner's gold pan, boasts of catching ten tuna on such "light tackle" the other day, the biggest weighing sixty odd pounds. That seems like an inexcusable butchery of good game fish, and if true, is more proof of physical endurance than skill, for one or two of these tuna in a day are all that any man ought to be able to take, and quite enough sport when caught on legitimate light tackle. Of late the Catalina brethren have, as a whole, been coming to their milk in the light tackle matter.

Fishing outside has been reported best west of Santa Monica and below Newport. In both places big catches have been made. From Point Fermin to Point Vincente, the fish are off feed, and the same conditions rule even far out into the channel.

At Newport yellowtail have been taken from the wharf in considerable number, some of them thirty-pounders. The rod and reel men have run across this game generally and with satisfactory results, aside from their troubles with the hand-liners, who are always in evidence when the big fellows are biting.

Alongshore the surf fishing has been of fair average quality, and some fine specimens have been landed. C. V. Barton got a four and a half pounder at Balboa in the middle of the week, and then had to run for his car—an unsatisfactory end to a day's fishing, for one always feels as if there was another big one there, had he only time to get him.

Casting off the beach has not been as generally followed during the present season as usual, although some good fish have been taken in this manner. Notable among them are recent catches of perch south of Redondo. The farther south the anglers can go, the better they are satisfied. Sport, as a rule, seems to be better about Newport and Balboa than anywhere else.

Croaker fishermen consider September and October the months par excellence for their favorite game, and will be glad to learn that the spotfins are already doing business in the bays. Billy Kessler, Louis Breer, E. L. Mitchell and several others prospected San Pedro inner harbor pretty thoroughly last Sunday, and were rewarded with a good catch of rather small spotfins, a few China croakers and a number of big yellowfin.

When the big suction dredger begins to cut out the bar back of Croaker Point, the harvest time for anglers will commence, as this long bar of mud is literally alive with every kind of shellfish. The croakers will have all kinds of feed stirred up for them by the dredger's big cutter, and the record-breaking sport of last October may be repeated. At that time catches of from ten to eighteen spotfins averaging seven pounds apiece were made in San Pedro Bay, and the occurrence is not one soon to be forgotten by those lucky enough to have declared in upon it.

In Anaheim, Alamitos and Bolsa bays croakers are being caught by seiners, deep holes being the favorite places. Apparently no one has tried the dredger at Naples, but it would seem as if a trip there might prove worth while.

Those who are satisfied with small fry will find plenty of jack smelt and mackerel ready to their hands at all the longer wharves, particularly along the west coast.

Pompano and sea trout have been unduly scarce this season, and very few catches have been reported.

Advices received yesterday from the middle of the channel between Cataline and the mainland tell of schools of small tuna seen there, possibly the same fish that afforded so much sport at Avalon a few days ago. Local light-tackle anglers are preparing to invade them, and try the blandishments of bright Wilson spoons on the big fellows, flying fish bait being almost impossible to procure.

Jensen for Spokane.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The National Baseball Commission, in a decision handed down yesterday, awarded Jensen, now with the New York American League club, to the Spokane club. The Spokane club contended that Jensen accepted terms and transportation from them, and then joined the New York club. The New York club did not submit any evidence in the case.

STEAM YACHT EXPENSIVE TOY.

Millionaires Divided Between Styles of Cruising.

Some Prefer Sails to Engine-Driven Vessels.

How Most Famous Sailors Enjoy the Sport.

BY STINSON JARVIS.

Not every man wants a steam yacht because he can afford it. Many prefer the sails only. Of course, some have both. And when a man gets into the big racing classes, a steam yacht is almost a necessity as a ferry. For instance, J. Roger Maxwell, the president of the Jersey Central, devotes nearly all his spare time to the racing of the largest and best yachts, but he has a steam packet, the Kismet, for family use and to tool him around to the different racing courses. I don't think anybody ever saw Frederick T. Adams, formerly commodore of both Larchmont and Atlantic yacht clubs, on a steam yacht. His old flagship, the schooner Sachem, is good enough for him. He says: "When I want to do nothing but sit and look at the water, I will fish on the end of a wharf." Robert E. Tod, who recently sailed his Thistle in the trans-Atlantic race, could have any kind of a steam yacht he wanted, but he sticks to the sails.

Pretty much the same may be said of Cornelius Vanderbilt's North Star, now the flagship of the New York Yacht Club. This palatial vessel is first rate for the purpose of entertaining the German Emperor and taking out parties of friends to see the America cup races, but when Corny takes the yachting he wants he gets down into the 70-footer, Rainbow, where he has some slight and inconspicuous assistance from the celebrated Charlie Barr. His brotehr, Willie K., Jr., owns the Tarantula, an imported turbine yacht, the first known in this country, but when he has fun he sails the Virginia, of the same 70-footer fleet.

There is probably no more expensive toy for a millionaire than a yacht, taking itno consideration the fact that it is used as a rule for only three or four months out of the year, and that during these months the usual run is from New York to Newport or some other seaside resort and back again. Some of the owners, most of them, perhaps, take long cruises now and then, but not every year. The ship is generally used for short cruises of a week or two.

Most of the well-known steam yachts are ocean-going vessels, able to withstand the roughest kind of weather, and the best kind of navigation is assured when the owner is able to hire a captain whose skill and caution are certainties. The engaging of a crew of picked men is left entirely to this skipper: expense being beside the point when the men are of the right sort.

Anywhere from $50,000 to half a million may be paid for a good steam yacht, and perhaps the average price of the larger vessels will run at about $200,000. To put a yacht in commission at the start of a season is no small task. She has been docked all winter, covered with canvas and planking to protect her from the driving sleet that eats into the fine mahogany finishes of the deckhouses. She has to be overhauled in every part. All her brasses and fine woods have to be prepared, and her furniture, which is sometimes stored in the buildings of the big yacht yards, has to be taken on board in perfect condition. This is the time that a good many fine wicker deck chairs float about New York Bay, because the skipper has no legs or arms mended. He simply has the broken material heaved overboard.

All the silver is handed over to the head steward, the coal is put into the bunkers, and the outside and inside of the vessel is scraped, painted, or polished. The captain of these vessels is generally a man of rather unusual ability and personality, coming as he does in close touch with the owner, and to a certain extent with his guests. He must understand not only his business as a vessel captain, but also the owner's way of entertaining. because some owners allow their captains to be rather friendly with guests, while others are quite the reverse.

Next to the captain in importance is the chief engineer. He has three assistant engineers, and oilers, cleaners and stokers. A very important person is the chef de cuisine. He works in conjunction with the head steward, and has under him a force of assistant cooks, stewards and other helpers. The duties of all these men are not nearly so continuous or strenuous as with the employés of the Atlantic liners or in the merchant service. They all have a well fed and prosperous look, for there is nothing in their life to bring on any other look.

All these things have to be paid for: and it comes high. The sum of $5000 a year is not out of the way for a good captain, and I think Capt. Scott of Oliver H. Payne's Aphrodite, used to get about twice that sum per annum. The chief engineer's pay is also very high. On one of the schooners on which I cruised the chef was getting paid $1000 a month; but, of course, that was only for a short time. In addition to these expenses there are the wages of the crew, each man being served out with two suits a year. And then the paying out of money has only commenced. W. K. Vanderbilt's Valiant, which is the largest in America, burns eighty tons of coal a day when on a cruise. The average number of tons on a fairly large yacht ranges from thirty to fifty tons per diem.

Most of the larger yachts have bunkers holding some sixty tons of coal, which costs $6 or $7 a ton. This is not wholly for propulsion, but also for the power of the dynamo, ice plant and electric lighting.

Food is an item which figures largely. The guests must always have the best. On board H. H. Rogers's well known Kanawha, which has a crew of thirty-five men, the following stores were consumed on a three months' cruise: Three tons of beef, 1000 pounds of mutton, 100 pounds of chicken a week, game of every kind, quail, English partridges, canvasback duck, English pheasants, several bags of each. The granulated sugar weighed 400 pounds; vegetables of the finest French preparation were represented by seventy cases of each; there were 15 barrels of flour; 600 pounds of butter; 300 pounds of coffee; nearly 100 cases of wine; 100 cases of eggs a week; half a ton of ice a day; fish at every port, besides oysters, clams, crabs and lobsters, etc. Ten or twelve pounds of hot-house grapes a day at $2 a pound; twenty pounds of Huyler's candy a week. This wacht is famous for liberality to the crew, which consumes six turkeys every Sunday, and the best meat and eggs on week days. The laundry for this yacht is sent from port to port, and costs about $200 a month.

The florist bill is close to $500 a week. Cut flowers, the rarest and costliest American Beauties, and many others, are to be found in every cabin and other apartment. Every day they are brought in fresh. These expenses are for a vessel carrying only thirty-five men, and the Kanawha is not one of the largest vessels. The interiors always represent the taste of the owner, or his advisers, and they vary in expense.

Perhaps the best of these is seen on Sir Thomas Lipton's Erin, where the dining-room is very quiet and rich in hand-carved woods. But they vary greatly. The big Aphrodite has her front deck dining-room in hand-carved teak. The Goelets had much flowered crimson satin on the Mayflower and Nahma, with the glasses of the electric lights made in imitation of lilies and other flowers. Men who buy yachts that seem to already have the cabins nearly perfect, turn up their nose at the whole thing, tear out the interior and spend a fortune in a complete alteration.

H. Clay Pierce, a Standard Oil Magnate, bought a yacht from the King of Portugal, which was upholstered in a way fitting for royalty. But not for Pierce. He had the interior done over in rosewood, satinwood and with a Chippendale outfit. All the metal used was mercurial gold. His dining-room had also stained glass, with crystal buffets and other trifles which alone cost $50,000.

After William B. Leeds had paid out $360,000 for his new Homa, he disliked the boudoir, which was in white mahogany. He said he preferred white enamel, and was able to pay for it. So the handsome native woods were scraped and covered with white enamel.

Considering that the so-called annual expense is for the most part laid out for two or three months' sailing, it may be said that the average cost for each day in commission is about $1000 a day. A rather average and not peculiar cost per year is $130,000, and of course the bigger boats don't get off for anything like that sum. Pierpont Morgan's Corsair, the Valiant, Commodore Bourne's Delaware, the North Star, Lipton's Erin, Eugene Higgins's Varuna, Mrs. Robert Goelet's Nahma, Howard Gould's Niagara, John Jacob Astor's Nourmahal and others, go up over $200,000. But if $120,000 may be taken as an average cost, and the owner stays out only for the New York Yacht Club cruise and a few other events, this has to be calculated for sixty or ninety days, in which case he is paying a great deal more than $1000 a day for his summer outing on the water.

Even among the smaller vessels the expense for coal is heavy. Miss Susan de Forest Day, who used to have pleasant afternoon teas on the old Scythian, used to groan over the price of locomotion. She converted a tramp steamer into a combination of boudoir and art gallery, and with the whole of the interior arranged to suit her feminine and artistic tastes, but she could not get along on less than ten tons a day, which means $70 as regularly as sunrise. The auxiliary sailing yachts burn more coal than would be expected. The Anemone burns eight tons a day, and she was carrying a good deal when she raced from here to Honolulu. This only drives her at six miles an hour, which means less than 150 miles for the whole eight tons.

But when you change from the steam yacht to the sailing vessel, you stop paying for coal power and pay for man power and skill. The crew of a defending ninety, fifty-five men at $30 a month, runs to money. When I raced with Mr. Bokaw on his celebrated New York schooner Amorita, I think it was said that his yearly expense was about $80,000. But he raced all the time, and everything was done for speed and comfort without the slightest regard for expense. So, that although the coal bills may be dodged by keeping to sails, it must not be supposed that the expense vanishes. The towage bills of a racing yacht as she proceeds from port to port are most fatiguing and endless; and as a first-class racer wants to clean before every race, the charges for hauling out and dry-docking go far to equal the coal bills on the steamers.

Polo Match Monday.

In place of the match game of polo that was to have been played tomorrow at Santa Monica between the beach team and the Los Angeles team, there will be a mixed team contest, in order to give the Santa Monica ponies a much-needed rest. Five games were arranged between Los Angeles and Santa Monica and of these the Beach Combers won two and tied two and a deciding game or another series will have to be played later on. The beach players started in with a small number of ponies and some of these had to be used through an entire game. The mixed team match tomorrow will begin at 3 o'clock.

Admission Day.

L. A.A.C. PLANS MANY TOURNEYS.

WILL PUT FOOTBALL TEAM IN FIELD THIS SEASON.

Organization Decides to Develop Championship Winners Among the Many Athletes of the Fast Growing Body—Expert Bill Traeger Will Be on the Gridiron Eleven.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club has decided to put a Rugby or Soccer football team in the field this season. There has been a good deal of discussion regarding a team to represent the club. When questioned about the matter last night Mr. Hayes, superintendent of the club, said:

"We have a wealth of material and will enter a team in the League that will be a factor when the championship game is played. The men from whom the team will be selected are Bill Traeger, Dick and Ray Dunnigan, L. L. Day, Adolph Frankel, Dick Retzer, Stan Mitchell, Billy Loomis, Chester W. Moore, Marshall Brothers, Dan Long, Walter Stone and Ed. Moriarity."

Traeger was tackle on the Stanford team of 1900-1903, and won the Stanford-Berkeley game of 1900 by a drop-kick from the 35-yard line in the last minute of play. It is quite well known that Sherman will put no team in the field this season and the action of the Los Angeles Athletic Club in bringing out a possible championship team will be a big boost to the football situation. There is no question that a team selected from the material mentioned would be a large black question mark to the rest of the league. Results will be watched with considerable interest by the local football fans.

PLAN TOURNAMENTS.

Tournaments in handball, chess, and checkers, and a rowing regatta are being planned for this autumn by the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and in addition, other forms of popular sport in amateur athletics will be indulged in. Basketball will be played and the club hopes to put up one or more first-class teams to attempt to win city and possibly State championships. Boxing classes already have been formed, and rowing has attracted much attention this season, several excellent oarsmen and crews having been developed. Altogether the club has enjoyed great athletic success during its short life and is preparing to win still greater renown this fall and winter.

A billiard tournament is being planned for the latter part of this month, or around October 1, to succeed the successful pool tournament pulled off recently. Early in November the chess and checker tournament will be held. About the middle of November another handball tournament will take place, similar to the one held last spring. Around Thanksgiving a rowing regatta will be held. Then will follow various other tournaments, including basketball, etc.

T. A. Gordon will manage the billiard tournament. He is an excellent player and will enter the events. Recently he won prizes in the pool tournament. Among other good players are Charles Brownstein, Dr. R. B. Griffith, J. D. Wiley, J. W. Routzahn, C. D. Mahannah, J. B. Price and Fred Siegel. A committee is arranging the dates and order of events and will announce the detailed programme soon.

DOCTOR CAN PLAY SOME.

In the chess and checker tournament, Dr. R. B. Griffith will probably be matched to contest, simultaneously with five or six of the best players in the club. He is considered to be the most expert player in California, and there is no one who would be a match for him, even in a handicap match. He has played as high as twenty-one men at the same time, going from table to table in succession and making the moves in each game. But he will not be asked to play that number in this tournament as other members of the club also are very fair players. Among the best men are: H. T. Rudiscell, Frank A. Garbutt, W. F. Chandler, Frank C. Taylor, A. K. Goodwin, Mell Nordlinger, and Walter C. Fisher.

In the handball tournament W. D. Whelan will have to defend the trophy he won during the spring matches. The cup is held, by whoever wins it, so long as he is not beaten, but the holder is open to perpetual challenge. Stanley Mitchell won second honors in the spring match and will give the holder a hard fight to retain the cup. Other good players who will make a try for the trophy and additional prizes are Frank A. Garbutt, Sam C. Hall, Billie Loomis and Adolph Frankel. The latter is chairman of the old committee, which had the last tournament in charge, but a new committee will most likely be selected to carry out the autumn tournament.

J. E. Franklin, the rowing coach, is planning to hold a regatta at Playa del Rey about Thanksgiving Day. The success of contestants in the early events held Admission Day, and the keen interest taken by the rowers during practice, encourages the coach to hold the Thanksgiving event. By that time he hopes to have the young men expert enough to row a four-oar shell race and possibly single scull-shell races. There will be single and double scull-gig races, and possibly a barge race for the novices, though Coach Franklin does not take kindly to the unwieldy craft. There will be no eight-oar events as there are no contestants in Southern California to row against, and there might not be enough first-class men to make up a crew for the two local shells.

LOEB AIDS FRANKLIN.

Franklin uses a thirty-one-foot scull shell, ten inches wide, but to date none of his pupils can manage this delicate craft. By Thanksgiving they may be able to do so. Just now the candidates for rowing honors are mastering the four-oared shell. Joe Loeb, formerly coxswain of a Berkeley crew, is assisting Franklin in teaching the young men to row in the four-oared shell. He is pulling an oar to help out, while Franklin pulls stroke, thus taking two green young men aboard at a time and setting them through the paces. At present the best rowers are Dick Dunnigan, Ray Dunnigan, Leroy P. Swain and James Routzahn. Others who are learning fast are Sam Levi, Adolph Frankel and Stanley Mitchell. Coach Franklin has great faith in the future of Mitchell and believes some day he will be a champion. He says Mitchell is the best-formed young man he ever saw. He is trained to excellent condition and weighs about 165. Mitchell is 19 years old and has the development of a man of 27.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club never was represented by a basketball team, the club having been organized last February, too late in the season to form a team. But this season the young men are going in for the game and they expect to have a team good enough to compete with the best in Southern California. Some of the prospective players have been on eastern university teams and will be able to not only play a great game themselves, but to coach other players.

A league of four or six basketball teams will be formed inside the club, and then a team composed of the best players will be selected to represent the club in outside league or championship contests. Stanley Mitchell, Harry Marshall, Billy Loomis, Ben Watlington and Chester W. Moore are taking much interest in the game.

MEDICINE IS A PROGRESSIVE SCIENCE—THE APPLICATION AN ART

I do not try to treat you at a distance—You must come to my offices—If you want the best I can give it you. NOT TEMPORARY HELP, BUT LASTING CURES.

Functional Decline
Fagging of Strength

I believe the treatment I employ in the cure of this derangement is the only scientific, rational and absolutely certain method whereby functional activity of the parts can be fully restored to normal. I do not excite temporary activity. This would be followed by reaction. Instead, I remove the local cause producing the derangement, and restore normal physiological conditions throughout the organic system; as the congestion or inflammation is removed, circulation is increased, and the parts take on a healthy, strong and vigorous action, the effect of which is felt throughout the entire body. Men suffering from general debility will find the cause directly traceable to these conditions.

Varicocele
4 to 6 Days

To all who have treated for this condition and failed to obtain satisfactory results, I wish to say I offer an absolute cure in 4 to 6 days, devoid of any painful harsh measures. The cure I offer is especially thorough and permanent. There are no evil after effects to undermine the health and power. My treatment shows an improvement from the first. All pain ceases, soreness subsides, and a normal physiological condition is brought about. The circulation is rendered normal. Increased strength and renewed vitality is noticed. In the cure of varicocele I offer a service superior to any you have ever had—absolute and permanent cure.

Contracted Diseases

To but partially cure is worse than no treatment at all. Chronic complications are sure to follow. My treatment is thorough, prompt and effective.

PILES

I cure without any operation whatever; they are a condition which may be treated unsuccessfully for years. I cure by direct contact, and by restoring tone to the hemorrhoidal veins. The cure is absolute, and no return will occur.

Contagious Blood Diseases

Contracted Disorders

Be sure your cure is thorough. Not one of my patients has ever had a relapse after being discharged as cured, and I cure in less time than the ordinary forms of treatment require.

Specific Blood Poison

No dangerous minerals to drive the virus to the interior, but harmless, blood cleansing remedies, that remove the last poisonous taint.

WHAT WEAKNESS IS AND HOW I CURE IT.

"Weakness" is merely a symptom of chronic inflammation in the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or by the improper treatment of some contracted disease. A complete and radical cure is, therefore, a question of restoring the prostate gland to its normal state, and this I accomplish promptly and completely without the use of internal remedies. My treatment is a local one entirely. It is original and scientific, and has been proven absolutely effective by thousands of tests. I am convinced that by no other methods can full and permanent restoration of strength and vigor be accomplished.

Varicocele

Absolutely painless treatment that cures completely in one week. Investigate my method. It is the only thoroughly scientific treatment for this disease being employed.

Stricture, Piles, Lost Vigor, Hydrocele, Organic Weakness, etc., are also among the diseases I cure to stay cured.

I State Nothing In My Announcements but the STRAIGHT, SQUARE TRUTH.

It will cost you nothing to call and talk over your case. You can find out all about your trouble and you can later arrange to begin treatment any time you like. My offices, comprising ten rooms, are the largest, most elegant and best equipped in the West.

Varicocele

Have you treated for varicocele with people who claim to cure without your quitting work? If so, you still have your varicocele. No varicocele was ever cured while you work. Any reliable specialist can and will show you plenty of successfully cured cases before you treat. We have been curing varicocele in Los Angeles fifteen years and are ready to prove our success by introducing you to hundreds of first-class men who will give you the facts. One week under our treatment makes a permanent cure. You should see some of our cases here who were treated eight and ten years ago. We use no knife, you have no pain, your cure is permanent. Our examination is free. Are you going to hand your money over to any man before you see the absolute proof of his success?

Contracted Disorders

Of all the diseases peculiar to men, contracted disorders are the most abused by cut-and-try, hit-and-miss treatments administered by good friends, druggists, doctors in general practice and most of the would-be specialists. It is certainly interesting to hear the story of the average patient telling his experience with the different kinds of so-called treatments he has been up against. A large majority of our patients come to us with all the original disease and part or all of the complications resulting from delay and mistreatment. We generally have to cure them after some or all of the following conditions have developed: Chronic discharge, stricture, or all of the chronic bladder troubles, diseased prostate, sores, swellings, etc., besides a patient whose confidence and mind are diseased through failure and disappointment. Don't trifle with these disorders; go to a doctor who knows how to cure you; it is the cheapest, surest and shortest way out. We have been twenty-one years in the business.

NEW TURK CAN PUNCH SOME.

Embryo Pugilist Credited With Having Blow Like Kick of a Mule.

Another Turk has invaded the pugilistic kingdom, and if reports as to his prowess are worthy of credence, he is going to cut a much wider swath than his countryman, Abdul Malgar, whose windmill tactics have never yet caused serious trouble to any of his opponents. The New Turk, as he has been dubbed by the Naud Junction contingent, possesses considerable science for one comparatively green at the game, and is gifted with a mighty swing resembling the kick of a mule. Overanxiety to annihilate his opponent is his weak spot so far, but he is expected to overcome this laudable desire with a little more experience.

His first antagonist at his professional début Friday is to be Tommy Leahey, the hard-hitting local boy. The bout between the two was substituted in place of the Godfrey-Gaines affray, Godfrey being called away on business to New York City. Rumors that faintheartedness had caused his departure have no foundation in fact, as before leaving he informed Tom McCarey, manager of the Pacific Athletic Club, that he would be willing to accommodate Gaines immediately upon his return, and the two will be seen in action at a later date.

Nearly five hundred fight fans gather at the pavilion every afternoon to watch the belligerent evolutions of two-thirds of the boys who are to be seen in action at the next show. "Montana Kid," Scotty Johnson, Tommy Leahey, Kid Dalton, Eddie Monney, Leonard Lauder, Manuel Torres and the New Turk are those who are getting in condition there, while the Arcadia headquaretre of George Memsic form the training rendezvous of Jimmy Ervin, Young Barry and a few other rising pugilists. There is no lack of action at either place. Tommy Burns is at Arcadia, also keeping up light training, and hoping that he will be able to drag one of the many aspiring heavyweights inside the ropes some time before winter.

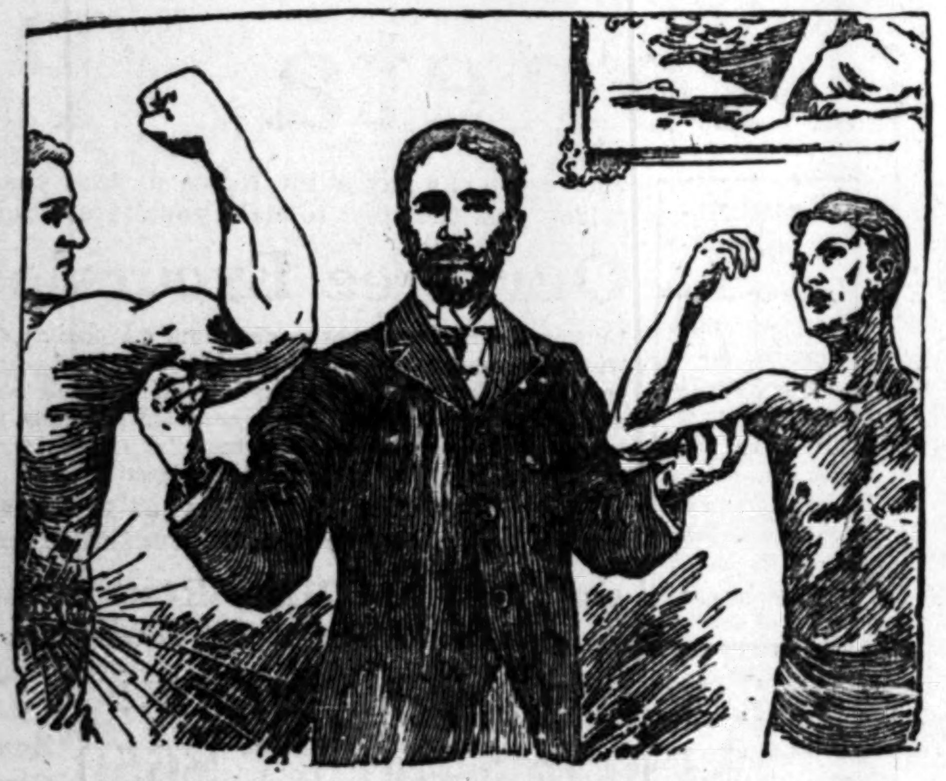
HOW WE CURE



Weak Men

Give us a man broken down from dissipation, hard work or worry, from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age.

We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is; but the man who has been strong and who has lost his strength we can make as good as he ever was. We can give back to any man what he has lost by violation of the laws of nature.

A man who is nervous, whose brain and body is weak, who sleeps badly, awakes more tired than when he went to bed, who is easily discouraged, who is inclined to brood over imaginary troubles, who has lost ambition and energy to tackle hard problems, lacks the animal electricity which the Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt supplies.

The whole force of vitality in your body is dependent upon your animal electricity. When you lose it in any manner our Belt will replace it, and cure you.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., JEROME, A. T.
Dear Sir: Nearly a month has elapsed since I began the use of your high grade Belt, and I will therefore comply with your request for a report every thirty days. As to my condition, I am pleased to say that great improvement has taken place. The pain in my back has about disappeared, the rheumatism is much better, appetite and digestion greatly improving, and my sleep is more refreshing. This I may lay to your Belt, as I have taken no medicine. I shall continue the treatment faithfully, for I know I will receive permanent and complete relief.
Yours very truly, ALBERT BEVEN.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., Box 1135, ROOSEVELT, A. T.
Dear Sir: No words can express my feeling of gratitude to you. When I received your marvelous Belt I was in a very bad condition physically. I was nervous, weak, digestion was poor, I couldn't sleep but two or three hours in the night, my mental power was weak, though I had been naturally very strong, and all these symptoms were the result of a sexual weakness. Now I am well, and I am glad to have this opportunity to recommend the Belt to those who suffer from such troubles as mine, for they will be restored to perfect health by your Belt.
Very, very truly, HENRY SMITH,

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., PRESCOTT, Ariz.
Dear Sir: I have your Belt three weeks now, and its application for that time has convinced me that it is very effectual indeed. The urine is not so profuse, the loss of semen has entirely disappeared, my appetite is good and the palpitation of the heart is gone. The rheumatism is also leaving me, and I am sure to be able to tell of my cure in a short time. With best wishes, I beg to remain, yours very truly, E. L. MORVELL.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., SEARCHLIGHT, Nev.
Dear Sir: I am very much pleased with your Belt. You are the first man I ever met who did what he claimed to do in his advertisements. If you could overcome the prejudice which the general public feels towards any advertised treatment, and this prejudice is due to the fact that advertisers overdraw their claims so ridiculously, it would be a godsend to the great army of sufferers, for they would not then deny themselves the relief they will find in your Belt. I have improved under your treatment—no more back ache, indigestion or weakness.
Yours very truly, O. T. LANDON.

Letters like that tell a story which means a great deal to a sufferer. They are a beacon light to a man who has become discouraged from useless doctoring. We get such letters every day.

Our Belt has a wonderful influence upon tired, weak nerves. It braces and invigorates them, and stirs up a great force of energy in a man.

We make the best electrical body appliances in the world, having devoted twenty years to perfecting it. We know our trade. Our cures after everything else has failed are our best arguments.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., BAKERSFIELD, Cal.
Dear Sir: A friend of mine from Los Angeles has just written to me asking whether or not I found your treatment a permanent cure, and it was a great pleasure to me to write and tell him that I have. I purchased a Belt of you some two years ago to cure a bad case of sexual weakness, complicated with neuralgia and rheumatism, but in two months I was a very different man, completely restored to health. Since then I have not had a relapse of any kind, not a trace of the severe pain I formerly suffered has returned, and I have not had an emission. I heartily indorsed your treatment to my inquiring friend. I am writing you to let you know that I shall be glad to have you publish this letter, for it may bring to the knowledge of some sufferer the news that there is hope for him, and if at any time I can do anything in the way of recommending your treatment I certainly shall be pleased to do so.
Yours respectfully, E. J. WAREHAM.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., 234 Cypress Ave., RIVERSIDE, Cal.
Dear Sir: I have worn your Belt as directed for two weeks, and am thankful to say that I have been greatly benefited during that short time. The varicocele is almost gone, and the losses are becoming less and less all the time. I am certainly on the high road to health after a long search.
Yours respectfully, E. W. ROBINSON.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., WHITTIER, Cal.
Dear Sir: I am completely and permanently cured by your Belt. You may use my name as you like, for I certainly feel the obligation I am under to tell other sufferers that your Belt is all right, first, last and all the time.
Thanking you for your attention, and wishing you success, I am, yours respectfully, W. H. KOHLER.

Give us a man with pains in his back, a dull ache in his muscles or joints; "come and go" pains in his shoulders, chest and side, Sciatica in his hip, Lumbago, Rheumatism or any ache or pain, and our Belt will pour the oil of life into his aching body and drive out every sign of pain. No pain can exist when our Belt is worn.

The Dr. M. D. McLaughlin Co., TERMINAL ISLAND, Cal.
Dear Sir: My health has greatly improved since using your Belt; I am gaining in flesh and the rheumatism is gone.
Respectfully yours, DANIEL McKENZIE.

They come every day from everywhere. There is not a town or hamlet in the country which has not cures by Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt.

Now, what does this mean to you, dear reader? If you are not what you ought to be, can you ask any better proof to make you try? Is there a remedy which is as simple, as easy to use, as sure to cure, and as cheap as Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt? We have not seen one. You must try it. In justice to yourself and to those who look to you for their future happiness, try it now. Act this minute. Such a matter ought not to be delayed.

It's as good for women as men. Worn while you sleep, it causes no trouble. You feel the gentle, glowing heat from it constantly, but no sting, no burning, as in the old style belts.

INVESTIGATE

We hope every afflicted man will carefully read the following statements without prejudice or partiality, and then act on his own good judgment. Many men have had the opportunity of their lives—opportunities that would have brought wealth and happiness in the place of suffering and regret—if they had availed themselves of them, but negligence in the matter of investigation has caused many to spend their hard-earned money where it would have been better for them to have thrown it away, for in many cases they have not only injured themselves by inferior treatment, but through it become so discouraged that they refuse to try again.

"Investigate all things and hold fast to that which is good." This plan has made us successful specialists, and it should make you successful in your efforts to obtain the right kind of treatment. Do you not believe that after such an extensive business we are in a position to impart at least some points of value that you have not yet succeeded in learning? Should the experience of doctors who have received the unqualified indorsement of clergymen, physicians and laymen not be worth something in your own case? Under our care you are absolutely assured of the most modern methods and the latest discoveries known to medical science. The unsolicited testimony from cured patients and business men should be of some value to you, and the amount we charge for treatment is insignificant compared with results.

If we accept a case for treatment and fail to cure we agree to pay railroad fare and hotel bill if you live out of the city. We have developed new methods of treating ailments in pelvic disorder that are invaluable to you, and which in this short life, if a sufferer, you cannot afford to go without. Perpetual service to the public for so long has demonstrated the firm basis on which our business is founded, and the increase each year over the past reinforces the old claim that there is no permanent success without genuine merit. We cure in one week without the knife or radical operation, without pain or detention from business, and thousands of people from actual experience know that my statements are true. It is the same with

Delays are dangerous and if you need treatment at all you should accept none but the most reliable and trustworthy. We can furnish bank or personal reference as desired and will take pleasure in doing so. Dr. Harriman's New Sanitarium in Pico Heights

This is the fourth and largest sanitarium established this year by Dr. Harriman. At this last place, which is the largest sanitarium of this kind in California and on Pico Heights, every approved method for healing the sick is adopted, but more special attention will be given to diet and the MILK CURE, which is becoming so popular in Germany, the Eastern States and Southern California. The milk diet consists in scientifically administering, with baths, electricity, massage, etc., pure, rich, unadulterated milk. This MILK CONTAINS NO RADIUM, nor other abominable stuff, which makes it unfit for the human stomach. The result of this treatment is attracting attention throughout the country. It is now surpassing all other treatments for Kidney troubles, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Inflammation of the Bladder, Uric Acid Poison, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Trouble and Nervous Diseases. This sanitarium is a home-like place, where the usual forms of red tape are discarded. The downtown headquarters is situated at 333-335-337½ South Hill street, where a corps of able physicians examine the patients. Those who require special treatment are sent to the Sanitarium, while others are treated at the headquarters. The institute is thoroughly equipped with microscopes, apparatus, etc., for scientifically diagnosing disease. Here all kinds of Baths, Electricity, X-Ray, Massage, Swedish Movements, Osteopathic and Chiropractic are given for the treatment of all chronic diseases.

MICROSCOPICAL EXAMINATION of Consumptive Sputum made in the next four days FREE. If you think your lungs are diseased bring your sputum in a clean bottle and we will discover any germs existing.

CUBS BEAT PITTSBURGH.

Shut Out Smoky City Nine Twice in Series.

Fans Are Practically Insane Over Their Club.

Pirates Escaped Shut-Out Friday on Error.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Cubs are still going up. The slugging Pittsburgh Pirates were handed their third straight defeat and second shut-out of the present series this afternoon. The score was 3 to 0. In the East the humble Brooklyn "door mats" arose and swatted the Giants mightily, shutting out the world's champions in both ends of a double-header.

Chicago fans are in a state of blithering idiocy that is constantly growing more pronounced. They declare that never before in the history of the national game was there such an irresistible machine as that assembled by Frank Chance. The Cubs have played remarkably well since returning home from the last eastern trip. Only two games of the twenty-two played since the team came back have been lost.

The Cubs have proven themselves a far better road club this year than they have been a home team. Of the thirty-two games they have lost during the whole year, twenty-one of them have been lost at home, while only eleven were lost on foreign territory. This is a remarkable record, considering the natural tendency of a team to play better at home among friends than among the hostile fans, who keep up a continual fire of rooting against the visitors. The Cubs are fighters, and it shows that the rooting of the enemies only rouses them to a more determined effort to win.

The lone tally scored by Clark in the ninth inning yesterday prevented the Pirates being whitewashed, and it was only by the intervention of a dark cloud of smoke that the run was possible, for, if the sky had been clear Slagle would have caught the ball easily. As it was the leather went between center and left before either of the fielders saw it.

TRAVERS ISLAND ATHLETICS.

Best Men of Entire Country in the Many Events and Several New Records Are Made.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Athletes with national and international reputations representing all the prominent clubs in the United States as well as the Montreal Athletic Association, entered in the big track and field games at Pelham Manor today. There were fifteen events on the programme, which will decide the national senior championships of the amateur athletic union.

The Travers Island athletic oval was never in better condition and, judging from the clever performances of the juniors yesterday, new records were expected in at least three of today's contests.

Most of the men who composed the American team which won so many events at the Olympic games in Athens last May were among the entrants. Among these are Archie Kahn, the Milwaukee sprinter; Meyer Printzstein, formerly of Syracuse University, America's best broad jumper; Harry Hillman, the champion hurdler; Martin Sheridan, who won the discus-throwing event in Greece, and Lawson Robertson, a local sprinter.

Results:

Discus throw, won by M. J. Sheridan, Irish American A. C., 120ft. 10in; M. F. Horr, Irish A. C., second, 115 feet; John J. Flanagan, Irish A. C., third; time, 2:5 1-5.

The 220-yards hurdle, won by Harry Hillman, New York, Joseph Malcomi, Chicago, A. C., second, John J. Eller, Jr., Irish American A. C., third; time, 25 1-5.

Running broad jump, won by Myer Printzstein, Irish American A. C., 22ft. 4 1-2in; J. T. Mahoney, New York, A. C., second, 21ft. 4 1-2in.; T. F. Cronan, Shawmut, A. C., Boston third, 21ft. 2in.

Throwing 16-pound weight, won by John E. Flanagan, Irish A. A. C., 35ft. 7in. M. J. Sheridan, Irish, A. A. C., second, 32ft. 1 1-2in.; M. F. Horr, Irish A. C., third, 31ft.

Point scores: Irish America A. C., 63; New York, A. C., 48; Chicago, A.A., 13; University of Michigan, 5; Milwaukee, A. C., 5; England, 5; Multnomah, A. C., 2; Malden, Mass., 3; Shawmut, A. C., 1.

On the St. Vincent grounds yesterday the Y.M.C.A. team beat the Edisons by a score of 11 to 9. The Harper & Reynolds team defeated the T. G. & T. Company team by a 2 to 1 score, the batteries being Harkness and Donovan and Lyons and Watson.

Portland Must Lose It.

A protest lodged with President Bert of the Pacific Coast League involves a question of baseball law. In the absence of the regular umpire, a game was started between the Oakland and Portland teams, with Hopkins, a player of the former club, and Donahue, of the latter club, officiating. In Portland's half of the ninth inning, with two out, the manager of that team ordered him to go to bat, and Garvin, another player of the Portland club, succeeded him as umpire. Donahue made a safe hit, which sent in the tieing run, and another hit following, the game was won. Manager Van Haltren of the Oakland club bases his protest on rule 63, which reads as follows:

"The umpire cannot be changed during a championship game by the consent of the contesting club, unless the official in charge of the field be incapacitated from service by injury or illness."

The players selected to conduct the game became league officials and their relations with their respective clubs ceased during the performance of their duties as members of the staff of President Bert. Each was vested with the authority of an umpire, and neither was under the control of the manager of his club. The Portland club's contention that its title to Donahue is absolute under the national agreement, except during the drafting period, is unassailable as between it and another club, whether of a major or minor league, but its right was suspended upon his assignment to duty as an umpire and fully restored at the termination of the game.—[Sporting News.

Dan Patch Breaks Record.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 8.—Dan Patch broke the world's record pacing at the State Fair grounds this afternoon, going the mile in 1:55 flat.

CROSBY IN KEEN EYE.

to be good for better than 92 per cent., which is going some in any country.

San Francisco sent a surprisingly heavy representation, many of them manufacturers' agents. Dick Reed, Emil Holling, D. W. King, Harry Hoyt, Fred Feudner, who by the way, broke 124; H. P. Jacobson, E. L. Schultz, T. Prior, F. Schultz, W. H. Seaver, Pete McRea and D. Daniels are quite a squad to hail from the Bay City.

The San Joaquin Valley was well taken care of also, many of the little towns being drawn upon for such sterling good shots as the Stones and Holdsclaw of Fresno; Ed Fissel of Davisville, J. Freitas and W. E. Greene of Salinas, R. Cadwell of Hanford and A. J. Ferguson of Bakersfield.

All the Southern California trapshooting clubs sent in their best men. Parker of Long Beach, Bungay of Ocean Park, Knight of San Bernardino, Taber of Riverside, Diehert and L. E. Walker of Ontario, Halbritter, Charlie Julian of San Diego, Clyde Walker, Mills and H. McCullough of Santa Ana, E. C. Redman of Lancaster, Y. Leonardt and Matt Cassou of Escondido; E. R. Simms and C. E. Lewis of Gardena, and the Gibson brothers of Nordhoff took care of the interests of this end of the State very well, indeed. In the face of such an array as this, only fourteen Los Angeles shooters were on hand to uphold the city that is supposed to be the host of these visitors—in fact, a dozen would cover the list. Lovelace, Smith, Van Valkenburg, Hagerman, . Justins, Vaughan, Lane, Childs, Orr, Wright, Englehart and Wood, five of them engaged in the business in one form or another, are a pretty poor showing for a town that sets as much store by its sport as does this. With the biggest shoot west of the Mississippi River to draw them out, a paltry half dozen or so of amateurs come to keep company to the men who in some instances have traveled from New York for this shoot.

THE ARIZONA SQUAD.

In proportion, Arizona sent a bigger representation to the tournament than came from Los Angeles. D. E. Morrell, D. D. McDonald, J. H. Carlisle, Dr. Purcell and George Julian, all hail from the Territory.

Perhaps today's turnout will prove better, and those of the boys who do come had better bring their guns and shells with them for a change if only to ante up a few chips for sportsmanship. The same programme will be shot off, and about the same number of birds will count on average. Yesterday the main events were run off by mid-afternoon, and fifty extras were switched in by Secretary Shaner.

"Hip" Justins shot yesterday under a big handicap. While fixing a trap before the shoot, a splinter of steel flew off and entered his eye. This necessitated a slight, but very delicate surgical operation, and Justins had to don blue glasses. His eye began watering in the ninth event, and that accounts for the nine out of twenty broken.

Grandpa Redman, who is over 60, but looks 40, challenged any man on the grounds of his age to a shoot, but as he appears to be the oldest one in the lot, nothing was doing. Out of 150 birds, 118 broken, is not so bad for a man of his age.

Toward noon the sea breezes began playing havoc with scores, and some queer antics are thus to be explained. Everybody is welcome today. But shooters cannot enter for the birds only; they must go down the line in the pools. Otherwise an injustice is worked the money shooters, but it takes too much space to explain how so that anybody who cannot see the reason on the face of it may be convinced.

BREITENSTEIN BACK.

HE'LL PLAY WITH ST. LOUIS.

Theodore Breitenstein, "the $10,000 beauty" with whom St. Louis buncoed Cincinnati about six years ago, has come to life again in the circles of the big leagues and will be taken back to his old love, St. Louis. McCloskey has given notice that he will draft the southpaw this fall and "Breit" is worrying a whole lot, down in New Orleans, about the matter. The "old man" is far from being old in actions and ginger and has been pitching great ball for three years for the Pelican city team. Shut-out ball is his specialty and in his general work he is not unlike Clark Griffith, the manager of the New York Americans. He plays as much with his head as with his arm and works the corners and the weaknesses of batters to perfection.

"The" ought to be able to make good in the big league again and the wonder is that he has not been drafted before. But his flat failure with Cincinnati four years ago caused his retirement to the Southern League and there were none who believed he would ever come back. But he has taken good care of himself and taken an interest in his work down South. In fact, both in Memphis and New Orleans he has been Manager Frank's assistant manager and it is said he is financially interested in the latter club.

Reports were that Breitenstein was a "lusher" and failed to keep in trim, but he has cut out all that kind of stuff and settled to work. The real cause of his failure in the big league was that Von der Ahe worked the life out of him in St. Louis. The crack southpaw used to pitch three times a week and occasionally worked in double-headers. That was enough to kill off any pitching arm. Compared with the youngsters, Breit has little speed or curves, but he works every turn to advantage. He is full of ginger and as scrappy as of yore. Some weeks ago he umpired part of a championship game at Memphis. First Baseman Carey is alleged to have called him a vile name and the red-headed one promptly struck him, for which he was fined $25 in Police Court and suspended ten days by the league president.

Immediately after McCloskey's announcement of the intended draft, Breit pitched the worst game of years, and the story goes in the southern city that he is stalling in the effort to have the Cardinal manager call the deal off. The southpaw likes the Crescent City. He has his home there with Manager Frank.

ROW IN DETROIT TEAM.

Three Players Are Trying to Cause Trouble and Are Warned by President Johnson.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Johnson has been appealed to by owners of the Detroit American League club to quell the warring factions among the players. Certain of the players, the leaders among them being Bill Donovan, "Red" Donahue and Jack Warner, were jealous of Manager Armour, it is said, and looking for a turn of events that would land them in that official's position, and the result was that when it was officially announced that Hugh Jennings was to manage the Tigers next season, these players practically revolted. "The Detroit club is in a bad muddle, and unless these players straighten themselves out in a hurry, I'll take the situation in hand. There will be some fur flying," said President Johnson today.

Record Questioned.

In answer to a correspondent at Bisbee, Ariz., it is stated that he must be mistaken in regard to the world's record he claims for the Topeka team of the Western League in 1887, which he says won twenty-eight straight games. The dope sheets give the National League record to the old Providence team, which won twenty straight in 1884. An American League record has been made this season by the Chicago White Sox, who won [illegible] straight. From August 2 to 23, both inclusive, it played [illegible] games and won every one, with the exception of the game [illegible] on August 13, when the [illegible] 0 to 0. These are big league records. The minor league records, as [illegible] by the sporting sheets, are [illegible] straight by the Houston Texas club in 1900; twenty-five [illegible] the Charlotte club of the [illegible] lina League in June, 18[illegible] seven straight by the [illegible] Corsicana club in 18[illegible] Topeka team made it [illegible] straight in 1887, it is [illegible] peka has not been put [illegible] sheet.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, of 305½ S. Spring st.

THE CELEBRATED PALMIST (and astrologer) whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life, that his remarkable readings and PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS in their lives are unparalleled.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious reading of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, psychics, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one line or mount from the other. THE HUMBUG READER ALSO CLAIMS TO TELL YOUR NAME AND ANSWER QUESTIONS WHICH YOU YOURSELF HAVE WRITTEN. THIS BEING AN ABSOLUTE FAKE SCHEME, GIVING POSITIVELY NOTHING OF THE FUTURE, AND NO HONEST READER WILL RESORT TO SUCH DECEPTION. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this wonderful science through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand, combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases can be accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc.; also of financial success, love affairs, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know, which cannot be mentioned here.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of his profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other palmist. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY. AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

E. H. Sothern says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in Palmistry." Frederick Warde says: "Your reading of my hands was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE, and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Valerie Bergere, actress, says: "I am greatly pleased with your reading; with you, palmistry is not only a science, but an art." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Louis James, Ysaye, Sousa, Innes, Chiaffarelli, Creatore, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Calve, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Edison, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Lillian Russell, Constance Crawley, Ellen Beach Yaw, and hundreds of others. These are a few names of PUBLIC persons, and show the class of people being read, as well as the very best people of Los Angeles. WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. Intelligent, high-class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY—the casting of horoscopes, etc. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast—from the position of the planets at your birth; in fact, tells everything about one's self worth knowing, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. Your horoscope is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS—EMBRACING ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE, new undertakings, or information desired for the present, immediate future and events up to the close of life, as calculated through these sciences and the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE, IN HIS LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE, has acquired a varied experience of his fellow-men in life. HIS WONDERFUL PROFICIENCY IN HAND READING AND CASTING OF HOROSCOPES ENABLES HIM TO SEE FOR THE FUTURE, both the good and evil. His chief aim being to help others and to have them become interested in these useful sciences—the sublimest and noblest studies that ever engrossed the attention of mortals. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., (Suite 17,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES, aided by years of EARNEST STUDY AND PATIENT PERSONAL INVESTIGATION. Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are EXACT, PRACTICAL AND TO THE POINT; give PAST as well as FUTURE events, and cannot fail to be of benefit to you. They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for, and lead you to wealth through information as to investments and enterprises, quite unobtainable through other sources.

Changes of business, losses and gains, lawsuits, deaths, marriages, separations, and in fact all that life holds for you is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(Mrs. Masson's methods of hand reading do not require that the names of her patrons shall be disclosed, nor does she seek to discover the identity of her clients; they may, therefore, rest assured that no publicity attends upon her readings, and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

FOR FOUR DAYS ONLY.

SPECIAL READINGS.
Regular fee, $2, $3 and $5.
All readings reduced this week.

If you contemplate consulting a life-reader, several things should be taken under consideration, ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON-SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

These things, taken under consideration, will place a thinking public in a position to judge for themselves and not be misled, imposed upon or their time thrown away.

WONDERFUL—ASTONISHING—CONVINCING.

The moment you enter his parlor he will tell you your full name, age, occupation, your mother's maiden name, and whom and when you will marry, and what you called for, without asking a question; will tell you the name of your sweetheart, or anything you want to know. He sends you away much wiser and happier than when you called.

IT IS NOT ONLY WHAT CAN BE SAID BY AN ABLE LIFE-READER, BUT WHAT CAN BE DONE, for besides the wonderful gift of second sight, Mr. St. Elmo possesses the secret knowledge of reconstructing unhappy domestic affairs, of making the home happy, of gaining the one you wish in marriage, of making the one you love admire and love you, of overcoming rivals and enemies, gives you the secret power of influencing others (without their knowledge) into doing your every wish. MY MAGAZINE, "INVESTING FOR PROFIT," (which I'll send free) is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small; who has money invested unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit.

It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money—the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses.

It shows how to invest small sums and how to make them grow into fortunes—the actual possibilities of intelligent investments.

It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how one can make the same profits safely.

It explains HOW stupendous fortunes are made and WHY they are made—how $1000 grows to $22,000.

To introduce my magazine write me NOW, mention this paper and I'll send it SIX MONTHS FREE.

BUSINESS CHANCES—

I WANT TWO OR THREE RESPONSIBLE business men who can invest from $2500 to $5000 each to join me in establishing an entirely new manufacturing business to cover the territory of Southern California; the product has never been manufactured before and is of daily use and consumption in every home and elsewhere. A factory is to be started at once and a large factory building fully equipped with spur tracks running into it from both the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railways, has been leased for a term of ten years. The NET profits on the output necessary to supply the PRESENT daily demand will be over $3000 per month, and recent developments prove conclusively that this demand will increase rapidly from month to month. This business is practically a monopoly as the product as well as the automatic machinery for manufacturing it is fully protected by United States patent just issued; it is absolutely safe, permanent, sound, of the highest class and will appeal at once to the most conservative business man. Much money and labor have already been expended in developing the subject so that it is now easily investigated. It has been submitted to the highest authorities in Los Angeles as to its sanitary feature and has received their hearty indorsement. Knowledge of the details of the business, which can be easily acquired will convince any person that the above statements are true and not overdrawn. Any person answering this advertisement will please give references or information which will enable the advertiser to determine their standing and responsibility, otherwise an interview will not be granted. No agents, principals only. For personal interview address E, box 142, TIMES OFFICE. 10

HENS FED RICHLY NOW will moult early and lay later, in the late fall and winter, when eggs are scarce and high.

EGG—MORE

is highly nitrogenous poultry food, rich in protein, to keep the poultry in good health, build up a vigorous system, make the hen moult early and convert the surplus ailment into eggs during the season when eggs sell at 50 cents. Just the right addition to a good grain ration.

Contract—Lot in Redondo Villa Tract, cheap.

And many others, too numerous to print. A meeting of the stockholders of the Goldfield Herald was held last Thursday evening in the hall of the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, 114 South Broadway, at which meeting there was represented nearly 225,000 shares of the stock. The meeting was called to order by E. MacDermott, in the chair, and Harold St. John acting as secretary. Mr. MacDermott stated that the purpose of the meeting was to protect the interests of the stockholder, and to make a committee of the stockholders to investigate the affairs of the company. The following were named on the same: E. MacDermott, chairman; L. F. Rotsler, A. Gans, J. W. Moore and John F. Hubbard, who will report to a stockholders' meeting to be held Saturday evening at 8 p.m., September the 15th, 1906, at 114 South Broadway.

For those who wish to purchase stock in a good producing mine I advise the purchase of the Round Mountain Antelope pooled stock at 40 cents per share. Investigate this or take MacDermott's judgment and purchase. A good Manhattan stock to buy is the Manhattan Standard at 10 cents or the Manhattan Rand at 10 cents per share. Ask MacDermott to show you why these are good buys. A good Searchlight stock is Searchlight Parallel at 9 to 10 cents. Bear in mind MacDermott has no interest in any of these companies except as a stockholder and a broker. I cannot afford to go into detailed statement about it, as I cannot afford to pay for advertising stocks that pay me only commission, whereas, if I were a promoter I could afford to pay for ads. with the money the purchasers of such stocks would pay me.

MacDermott advises you to purchase the listed stocks and to sell such stocks as the Manhattan Gibraltar, the Greater Manhattan Consolidated, and in fact, all the promotions of the Pacific Coast Mines Bureau, unless you want to be like the people who purchased Five Metals, Cecil R. Frances M and M, and others. The poor suckers who bought them must hold them, for they are practically worthless. Any firm or promoter who promotes a new company every month cannot be relied upon. They simply promote to sell stock, and not to make a mine. You can buy good listed stocks, but go to an independent broker, and not to a promoter. Come to the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, where all stocks are bought and sold at their market value on public call. A square deal to both the miner and the investor.

FOR SALE—
COEUR D'ALENE MINING STOCK.
I handle al the stocks quoted on this market of the Coeur d'Alene Mining District. I have visited a number of the properties owned by the different companies, therefore am familiar with the majority of the best known and most active stocks of the Coeur d'Alene, and know from personal invesigation the real merit and value which these stocks represent.

Through my efforts in placing the treasury stock of numerous prospects, they have been developed into paying mines, among these being Snowstorm, Big Creek, and Tamarack and Chesapeak.

SNOWSTORM I originally sold at 15c. It is now worth $3. This stock will pay a dividend of $90,000, or 6c a share, in September.

BIG CREEK, another property the treasury stock of which I sold at 10c, is now soaring toward the dollar mark.

I am in the market for:
Reindeer,
Idaho Los Angeles,
Tarbox,
O. K.,
Big Creek,
Tamarack Chesapeak,
Stewart Benton,
Moonlight,
Rex.
I have for sale:

THE D. & W. MINING COMPANY owns a copper property located 40 miles from the Needles, Cal., which has a most excellent showing, and will bear the strictest investigation. We are offering the first block of treasury stock (limited to 50,000 shares) at 15 cents a share. This is a new property, but has the highest recommendation of the best mining experts, and has exceptional values on the surface which have been proven to increase with depth. We have personally inspected the property, and what we say to you is from personal observation and not hearsay, and we are willing to back up our statements by offering to pay your way to and from the mine, if our statements are not facts. From assays we have had of the ore, we expect to be shipping before a great while, therefore the opportunity to buy at this price, 15c, will not last long.

Stocks, Bonds and Mortgages.

For a meritorius investment you cannot find a better one than the shares of the Searchlight-Parallel Gold Mining Co. This stock is selling today, for just about half of its real intrinsic value. The company has up to date, over 1600 feet of underground development work already performed and has just uncovered another rich ore vein on the "Birdie" claim three feet in width, which carries values of $85 per ton, right across.

If you desire to make money, buy the shares of this company immediately, at the present selling prices. In fact, all of the better mining shares are extremely low at the present time, and most investors are availing themselves of the opportunity of purchasing heavily. They never will be any cheaper.

ONLY A FEW MONTHS AGO
THE BROKERS THROUGH-OUT THE COUNTRY
WERE BEGGING THE PUBLIC TO BUY GOLDFIELD NEVADA MINING STOCKS.

TEN TO FIFTY TIMES the amount invested is the net profit now offered for the Goldfield mining stocks which were sold at 5c TO 10c A SHARE.

WE WATCHED THE DEVELOPMENT of Goldfield mining claims, and advised the public to buy shares before the claims owned by the many companies operating in Goldfield made a big strike.

YELLOW TOP GOLD MINING CO. own two full claims, which were located in the early days of the Goldfield camp by a man fully competent to select the best location in the camp, and we have been informed that the Yellow Top claims only need development to prove they are on one of the rich Goldfield ledges.

WE BOUGHT 150,000 SHARES Yellow Top stock, which we are selling at 12c a share. YOU PAY 3c A SHARE CASH, and 3c a share monthly until paid in full.

WE BELIEVE THE YELLOW TOP will soon be in shipping ore, and if you wish to take a chance with us you stand a good show to get from ten to fifty to one for every dollar you invest, because the DEMAND FOR GOOD GOLDFIELD STOCKS is many times greater than it was a year or so ago, on account of the fact that the camp is now proven to be good.

THOSE WHO BUY YELLOW TOP MINING STOCK NOW SHOULD be able to sell every share they buy within two months at good profit, because the rest of the capital stock is pooled for six (6) months, and to make a profit on the stock we have bought, we must advance the price to at least 30c a share within 30 to 60 days.

IF YOU LOOK UP YELLOW TOP ON THE MAP, we believe you will buy every share your capital will permit.

Hoping to receive your order by return mail or wire, we are, yours respectfully,

OUR TRADE IN TURKEY.

Big Opportunities There for Yankee Capital.

Many Lines of Business Are Now Promising.

Manufacturers Must Adopt Eastern Ways.

Writing from Constantinople, the Washington Post's correspondent at the Ottoman capital draws attention to some American opportunities in business ways in Turkey. His letter is an outgrowth of a series of interviews with English, German and American importers and shippers at Constantinople, who point out, with the knowledge of residence and familiarity with the Turks, various phases of business development which Americans can utilize to the profit of their commerce.

The same criticisms of American methods in Constantinople are made there as are made by consular agents and returned travelers of the business ways pursued by American firms in Central and South America, the West Indies and China. And the results—rather the want of results, in the way of American profit—are the same as in the case of the last mentioned countries, namely Europeans—chiefly Germans—get the business because the preferences of the natives are not considered by Americans.

It is a little more strange, however, in the case of the Levant trade to hear these criticisms, in view of the fact that what the Turkish people want is to have wares brought literally to their very doors, while that is, traditionally, just the method of operation in which American business men have distinguished themselves at home. In the other countries named, criticism has been to the effect that Yankee firms would not bother to put up goods in the forms preferred by their prospective customers. In Constantinople the complaint is that they will not take the trouble to put down goods at the people's doorsteps.

WANT STEAMSHIP LINES.

One of the ways suggested by the Constantinople merchants for accomplishing this is the establishment of an American line of carriers from New York to the capital of Turkey. At the present time, when the shipping subsidy question is so actively discussed throughout the United States, this suggestive comment from a waiting patron carries its own argument.

Already the freight on $3,000,000 of Turkish products imported to the United States annually awaits such an American line of steamships. And while the present east-bound cargoes do not reach any such total, the Sultan's subjects await the opportunity to make increased American purchases under the improved conditions of quicker transportation and lower carrying costs which such a service would give.

The new Turkish law governing the analysis of imported alimentary products and drugs, permits many American products to compete more freely with European goods in the Turkish market. One of the chief of these products is flour. Constantinople and the immediately surrounding districts alone require 16,000 sacks per day. The major portion of this supply is drawn from abroad.

Half a dozen years ago some consignments of flour shipped here from the United States were brought, unfortunately, in ships not provided with means to ventilate the cargoes. The sacks were piled upon each other, and under the blazing Mediterranean sun, as the vessels called at various ports, the flour deteriorated. Upon arrival here the gluten did not possess sufficient elasticity to pass the customs requirements, and a trade of excellent promise was abandoned.

CHANCE FOR EXPORTERS.

Under the new regulations no mention of the elasticity of the gluten in flour is made. Opinion among the business men interviewed is that the opportunity is renewed for American exporters of flour to obtain a large share of the Turkish market if they will see to it that their flour is shipped under suitable conditions, and will also offer their product to the people in a manner which the people approve. We do not "go to market" here. The market comes to us—to the homes of the inhabitants. Here in Turkey a house abutting on the highway commands a much higher rental than one standing in greater independence within its own grounds. The reason is simple. It is that the occupants may sit at their window and make purchases. They may bargain through the shutters—the Oriental lattice, the "Rafoss" of the harems—with the passing vendors in the streets. Accustomed to this method of market supply, they do not welcome ways strange to them.

This example is typical of the general method of trade in Turkey. If the American manufacturer wishes to capture the Turkish market he must conform to the eastern way.

So far, one American firm only seems to have grasped this fact.

It will scarcely surprise Americans with memories of half a generation to learn that the firm the Constantinople letter refers to is a maker of sewing machines. The description of the simple method pursued recalls the days when in the States the sewing machine man and the lightning-rod man followed close upon each other's heels through town and country.

The system of credit employed by Europeans dealing with Turkey, more liberal than that generally practiced by American dealers, also tends to leave American products in the background. Merchants here say that if European manufacturers can be liberal with credits and still make profits, it is reasonable to presume that American manufacturers are in position to do as well. And it should be borne in mind that the Turkish importer has frequently to sell to his customers on three to nine months' credit. European sellers are ready to allow for this. The first to do so were the French and the Germans, but the British have reluctantly come to it.

It is to be remembered, also, that under police regulations in Turkey an Ottoman subject may travel only upon payment of much baksheesh, and then under harassing restrictions as to the time which may be occupied in journeying or in stops at the towns. Foreigners, however, through their consulates, may readily obtain all necessary travel permits.

SENTENCE WOMAN TERRORIST TO HANG.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 8.—The court-martial which tried Zenaide Konoplaivonko, the girl member of the "flying group" of terrorists who assassinated Gen. Min, August 26, today sentenced her to be hanged. She smiled on hearing the sentence. The woman, who was represented only by an army captain detailed as her counsel, refused to rise at the opening of court, and did so only when threatened with force. She declined to plead, saying that she regarded the trial as a mere comedy. The trial lasted scarcely an hour. The only witnesses examined were three officers of gendarmes.

The growing indulgence in spirits by the Russian peasants, despite the present famine and distress, is shown by a report of the Minister of Finance on the receipts from the vodka monopoly, which for the last seven months were $18,750,000, an increase of $25,750,000 over the corresponding period in 1905. This is an important factor in the financial condition of the government, as the receipts are $40,000,000 greater than calculated in the budget estimates.

BOMB HITS POLICEMAN.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

RIGA, Sept. 8.—Three policemen were wounded, one fatally by a bomb thrown today at a street car. Five revolutionists, armed with automatic pistols, were halted in the center of the city by a policeman, who made them throw up their hands. They did not comply, and the policeman began exchanging shots with them. He killed one of the revolutionists, wounded another and arrested two. One escaped.

A bomb was left today by an unknown man in the office of the Conservative, a Lettish newspaper. One of the editors caught sight of the burning fuse and threw the bomb into a pail of water.

The band of revolutionary bank robbers, led by the well-known Lettish writer, Plekshan, who combined the functions of poet, sociologist and bandit, has escaped from the country.

CRAFTY REDS GET FUNDS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 8.—By means of a bold artifice a party of revolutionists today obtained possession of $107,000 which had been sent here for the Thirtieth Regiment. Three men, one attired as an officer and two as soldiers of that regiment, appeared at the bank where the money was on deposit and withdrew the entire amount. The men disappeared immediately and later it was learned that they were imposters.

CANAL COMMISSION IN NEW SHAKE-UP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That Theodore P. Shounts, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, has resigned or is about to resign his position on the commission; that Gov. Charles E. Magoon of the canal zone is making preparations to leave the isthmus on September 25; that John F. Stevens, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, is about to take entire charge of all the work and thus replace the commission, is the information embodied in private advices received here in the last mails from Panama.

Another shake-up in the personnel of the commission is looked for, and the advices state that this will result in the transfer of the headquarters of the commission from Washington to the canal zone. Subordinate officers will be stationed in the United States, but the real head of the work will be John F. Stevens, and his headquarters will be on the Isthmus.

Henceforth, it is said, he will be in entire charge of the sanitation, health and all other departments connected with the building of the canal. The news regarding it was embodied in a personal letter sent from Washington to the Isthmus and another personal letter from a high official on the isthmus brought it to New Orleans.

RAILROAD RECORD.

FIRST EFFECT OF RATE LAW.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS ENJOINED AT SEATTLE.

Attempt to Enforce Joint Wheat Order Causes Roads to Appeal to the Federal Court and Judge Hanford Grants Restraining Writ Until the Case Can Be Heard on Merits.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Federal Judge Hanford this morning granted a temporary restraining order forbidding the State Railroad Commissioners from interfering with the O. R. & N. or other State railroads in an attempt to enforce the joint wheat rate order.

The temporary restraining order will continue in effect until the case can be heard on its merits. It was granted after ten hours' discussion of the law.

Judge Hanford declared at the outset that he did not care to hear any argument on the constitutionality of the law until the case finally was called at its trial. He asked merely for argument over the jurisdiction of the Federal Court and the danger of injury to the railroads.

The Harriman system showed that the parties at interest were residents of different States and that steam railroads were subjected to the commission's rulings while electric roads were not, satisfying the first requirements.

On the second it was demonstrated that a daily penalty was imposed for ignoring the commission's rulings. Then followed the injunction.

The formal organization of the Michigan Sugar Company, which will take over six beet-sugar factories, has been completed. The capital is $12,500,000, $5,000,000 of which is preferred, and $7,500,000 common.

Brooding over the disgrace caused by the arrest of his son for defaulting to the extent of more than $100,000 was the cause.

Fire in the refinery plant of the Argo Smelter in Denver caused a loss estimated at over $300,000 on the building and furnaces. Bullion and partially refined metal valued at $75,000 were melted by the flames, causing a loss of several thousand dollars more. There was no insurance on the plant.

The collier Nero, which was so badly damaged on Rock Island some time ago, is being examined at the New York Navy Yard to ascertain if her injuries are such as can be repaired. The whole bottom of the ship is in very bad shape, as, with 4000 tons of coal aboard, she pounded on the bottom for several days.

At Perry, Ga., Jeff Hillhouse, a negro, was hanged for killing Florida King, an 15-year-old mulatto girl, last June near Williston, this county. Hillhouse met the girl and a younger brother in the woods, and after criminally assaulting her, broke her skull with a hoe. The boy's skull also was broken. Hillhouse made a full confession.

The Esperanto movement in favor of a universal language has created a furore throughout the neighborhood. A sermon in Esperanto was preached in the Church of St. Francis at Geneva by Father Guinard, a Spanish priest, Sunday, before a large congregation, the permission of the Holy See having been obtained for the occasion.

AZTEC ARCHITECTURE.

How the Old Indian Buildings Endure While the American Work Goes to Pieces.

The Mexicans or the Aztec Indians can give the people of the United States lessons in architecture and in solid construction of buildings, says a writer in the Hobart News-Republican. There are buildings standing today in the City of Mexico that have stood for three centuries and are in an excellent state of preservation. There is not a frame building in the city. There are a few adobe, but most all are stone, brick or cement. There is a brick building down in the old part of the town that was erected prior to 1450.

It shows that so long ago as that the Indians were experts in the manufacture of bricks. But probably 80 per cent. of the buildings are made of concrete cement. In the United States within the last few years experiments have been made in the erection of buildings out of manufactured stone, but they have been pronounced, as you know, by the insurance people as unsafe. It is not because they are not as solid as brick and stone, but on account of the inferior work of the American mechanic in that line. Cement and concrete have been used successfully in Mexico for five hundred years, and all the cathedrals and churches are of that material. On the line of the Vera Cruz Pacific can be seen the ruins of Toro Bravo, where there are evidences of a city ruined centuries ago. There are some twenty pyramids of solid cement, which must have been erected more than five hundred years ago. One of these pyramids is 170 feet in height, and on the summit rests a cement ledge thirty feet in diameter. This, as well as others, is of filagree work and carved statuary.

Near this stands another of white limestone, built in four terraces, with carvings and ornamentations which would put to shame the modern American sculptor. It has stood all these centuries, yet limestone is much easier broken than the cement. Think of a town of almost 400,000 persons, and the fire record is three in one year. The inside walls of many of the buildings are as much as six feet through, and all buildings are built around courts. There is no provision in any of them for fire, and at the present time small coal-oil stoves are selling in the city for $20—the same that sell for $3 in the States. The floors are of stone, the ceiling of filagreed cement, the walls of coarse plaster, and almost without exception hand painted. The architecture on many buildings in the republic shows that the Indian of centuries ago was ahead of the modern builder of today.

I was out to the shrine of Guadaloupe the other day—a few miles out from the city. There is an old story that on Saturday morning, December 9, 1531, an image of a woman appeared before an Indian named Juan Diego, on top of the Tepeyacac Mountain. The Virgin told him in his vision to tell the bishop to erect a temple in her memory on the hillside and dedicate it to the holy shrine. It is said that he gathered a bunch of flowers on the hill that had never before produced vegetation, and when presenting it to the bishop there appeared on the flowers the picture of the Virgin Mary. The story was taken to the Pope of Rome, who refused to countenance it. But a few years later the finest shrine in the world was built on the spot where the Virgin appeared, and it stands today, a bewildering, amazing monument of modern architecture, projected hundreds of years ago. It is given up to be the finest place of worship on the Western Hemisphere, and was built by Indians for Indian worship. The richest and the poorest are seen here hourly, kneeling and praying aloud to the Virgin. At certain times of the year thousands and thousands of Indians come from distances of a thousand miles to worship at this shrine. It must be remembered that 90 per cent. of the population of Mexico is Indian, but all speak the Spanish language.

OZONE PURIFICATION.

Philadelphia Is Making a Most Elaborate Test of the New System.

The failure of filtration plants to check the summer epidemic of typhoid fever has drawn attention to the ozone purification of city water supplies. The Vosmaer ozone system, which is in successful operation in Holland, has just undergone prolonged tests at Philadelphia, where the United Water Improvement Company has constructed a test plant and offered to rent a large plant to the city at a rental of $3.50 per million gallons of water purified. It is coming to be accepted as a fact that sand filtration does not remove all disease germs from polluted water, and that sand filtration, therefore, while it reduces disease, is not a complete remedy. For the ozone system it is asserted that it destroys practically all pathogime bacteria.

To make the test as convincing as possible, at Philadelphia the company has undertaken to purify the water of the Schuylkill, at the point where it is taken from the river below the dam—slaughter-houses and manure yards—and is little better than diluted sewage. It contains as high as 2,500,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter, which is twenty drops; after a rough straining, to remove the coarser particles of suspended matter, the water contains from 253,000 to 700,000 bacteria; after ozonization it contains from five to fifty-five, the average being twenty-five. The twenty-five bacteria which are left are of the harmless varieties, mainly the hay bacillus, which has no effect whatever on the human organism. The bacillus coli, always found in sewage, always the companion of the typhoid fever germ, a sure indication of organic pollution in water, and very abundant in raw Schuylkill water, is found to have been entirely destroyed by ozonization. The offensive odor of the water is also destroyed, and its discoloration removed. In brief, the tests have demonstrated that the foulest water can be rendered absolutely free from disease-breeding germs, made bright and sparkling and free from color and odor, and rendered as palatable as the finest spring water.

The reason of this is extremely simple. Chemical analysis of the bodies of bacteria show that they are made up of 84 per cent. of water, and about 16 per cent. of solids. Of these solids, more than one-half is made up of carbon. The strong affinity of oxygen for carbon is well known. Ozone, being a concentrated form of oxygen, has an even greater affinity for carbon; and the moment a bacillus comes in contact with a bubble of ozonized air the carbon of its body combines with oxygen, and the bacillus is consumed as completely as if it had touched a flame. Indeed, the process is analogous to that of combustion. Just as though burnt up, nothing remains of the bodies of the bacteria but carbonic acid gas, which partially rises to the surface of the water and passes off into the air, and is partially taken up by the water. This gives it its brightness and pleasant taste.

ROOSEVELT'S COUSIN'S AMERICAN SODA-WATER.

Here Is the Authentic Story of Maude Le Vinson's Feat of "Clerking" in an American Candy Store in Berlin. Troubles of the Yankee Women.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—Black and spunk of the American sort—the kind which has made President "Teddy" himself famous and beloved of his countrymen—has been shown in Berlin by one of his young and beautiful cousins, Maude Roosevelt Le Vinson, who is spending a year in the Kaiser's capital, preparing, under Mme. Lilli Lehmann, for a career on the grand opera stage. She recently finished a "début engagement" as clerk in the new American candy and ice-cream soda establishment opened in the Potsdamer-strasse, and is the heroine of Uncle Sam's big colony of exiles for the part she played in enabling the shop to continue an existence which was threatened for a while by the zealous police of this well-policed community.

A couple of enterprising New York women, to whom had been told the longing of American girls in Berlin for caramels, marshmallows, ice-cream soda, "sundies" and the other delights of homeland, came over here last spring and started a beautifully-equipped place, fitting it up in the best American style, importing home candy-makers, home soda fountains and home materials. With childish innocence of the pitfalls awaiting the foreigner who essays to do business in a German city, trouble in forty different forms was encountered. The women found it was necessary to procure a license to hang out a sign, to put up curtains, to make popcorn in the windows, to open the doors before 9 in the morning and to allow pedestrians to stop and watch pretty girls pull molasses. Each of the proprietors was fined and arrested nearly a dozen times, but their tribulations didn't really begin until the glistening silver soda fountains arrived from New York and began dispensing the summer girl's delight to jostling throngs of pretty damsels from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Washington, who are here in great batches at this season of the year.

The fiercely-whiskered policeman on beat in the neighborhood of the shop, discovering, one torrid afternoon, that something extraordinary was doing in the region of No. 126 Potsdamer-strasse, telephoned headquarters to investigate the cause. The result was the appearance, within an hour, of two chemists of the police department, who said they had reason to believe drinks were being dispensed illegally, and not only that, but drinks of a character so strange and injurious that they were calculated to devastate the German empire by paralyzing the health of the community. They said the fountain had to be put out of commission at once, and continue hors de combat until an analytical test of the soda's properties had been made and a license granted for further dispensation. In Germany this means a delay of anywhere from a week to a year, for miles of red tape have to be unwound.

AMERICAN CANDY SHOP
Ice Cream Soda
Home Made Candy

The American candy store in Berlin, where President Roosevelt's cousin "clerked."

It was at this juncture that the President's cousin, Maude Roosevelt Le Vinson, got into the game. Happening to be in the crowd at the soda counter when the minions of the law abruptly shut off the supply, Miss Le Vinson called for volunteers to join her in a "demonstration" at Berlin police headquarters in favor of persuading the functionary who decides the destinies of such things that ice-cream soda was fit for the gods and that international hostilities might ensue if Americans in Berlin were debarred the privilege of getting it.

The "Polizei-Prasidium" was stormed and Miss Le Vinson came away with the license. An hour later she turned up at the candy shop, waving it aloft like a captured battle trophy, while shouts from a dozen soprano-throated fellow-countrymen, panting for more "vanilla" and "strawberry," welcomed her. Then Miss Le Vinson solicited the honor of drawing the first glass of "licensed" ice-cream soda ever served in Berlin, and she did so in professional fashion. Rolling up the sleeves of her pretty shirt waist, she was kept at it until no less than 192 glasses had been "brewed" by her. The story of how a "Roosevelt" had saved the day for the "national drink" spread through the American colony of Berlin like wildfire, and the shop and the fountain have prospered ever since. It is destined to play a big role in Yankee life here. Every afternoon it is the rendezvous for all the pretty American girls in town, and military officers, of whom American girls in Germany grow very fond, come in and lend a dash of color to the frocked and frilled picture.

PISTOL PLAYED IN POKER GAME.

DRUMMER TELLS OF EPISODE HERE MANY YEARS AGO.

Tenderfoot Who Lost All His Coin in Gambling House, Over Old Los Angeles Theater, Forced Man Who Fleeced Him to Disgorge at Point of Revolver.

Apropos the olden time when the festive jackpot was always boiling in this Pueblo and the seductive kitty was being sweetened nightly at a score of gaming houses throughout this district, a Louisville, (Ky.,) exchange relates the following narrative as told by a tenderfoot of the earlier days:

"Several years ago, Eugene Travers, a St. Louis salesman, for hops gathered along the Pacific Coast, was saying while a guest at the Galt House, 'I spent a few months in Los Angeles when that city was not as big and thriving as it now is.

"'Having a tendency toward speculating on a small scale I used to play in a game over the Los Angeles Theater, and many a long session we had in 'Sam's' rooms. I never knew him by any other name, but Sam, and he certainly knew how to treat men who dropped in to dally with the pasteboards at his game. About 1 o'clock a luncheon fit for a king was served, and drinks cost you nothing, unless you drank too many of them, and played cards, on which occasion it was an improvident venture. Any old card player will tell you that it takes a cool, clear head to take care of your roll in a poker game.

"'A strange thing to me has always been the tendency of many to drink if the luck goes against them. If a man had a knotty problem in book-keeping or was straightening out any puzzle in his business, he would let the 'flowing bowl' be the last thing on the programme; but many a gambler will invariably endeavor to mend in spirit the damage done to the purse, and in this manner get a ferocious whipsaw. There is no use, however, talking about eliminating liquor when at the card table. I don't mean to be dealing out any lecture or to be handing out that free-for-all article, free advice, as it is never heeded and seldom anything but offensive. It was whisky, however, that played an important part in the story I am about to relate, which, by the way, was an actual experience, and one I did not soon forget.

"'In the game that evening was a fellow named Lon Hughes, an inveterate gambler on the sure-thing order, and known to be a desperate character. While running a steer stud-poker game on Spring street earlier in the season he had badly gashed up a young Easterner who had been robbed, and who had the temerity to protest.

"'eH was a giant in stature, with one of those eighteen-inch necks read about in pugdom. His eyes were small and set well in toward his nose. They danced when casting about, and would never dwell longer than an instant on your own. It was impossible to get a look into his optics—about as much so as to get a careful survey of the iris in the eye of a humming bird. The fact of the matter is that when it came to putting up cards he was a bird and a hummer. The most dextrous worker I ever saw. With the deck carelessly in his hand, while two or three were jockeying over a pot, he would have a hand framed up for himself, and, being liberally inclined, one for yourself, and all right under your nose.

"'How that man Hughes would manage to shift your cut when he was dealing and get the cards back the way he had arranged them was a matter worthy of the occult performances of an Indian faker, but he could do it, and did do it, right up under your nose, so to speak. He was a mild-mannered thief, and as pleasant in conversation as any cutthroat I ever heard talk to me about my own home folk in my own home town, away back East anywhere. He had a stock of information about places, and there was hardly a city, town or village in America in which he did not appear familiar with a few of the sporting characters. At any rate, he would make you believe he knew them—and he would call off their names. He had a line of con that would have made 'Hungry Joe,' the veteran New York bunco steerer, feel like a camp follower. The fact of the matter is, Sam was afraid of Hughes, and it was on account of this that he gained access to the game. Sam was, at heart, honest, and desired that his game should go on the level. I was told that on certain occasions 'Little' Sam would plead with Hughes not to play, and even stake him in some other game about the town to get rid of him. But, as a usual thing, when there was any money changing hands at Sam's, and the game looked like it was worth geting into, Hughes was in a choice place and had some rogue at his right.

"'Such was the case in the night I have in mind.

SHOWED HIM THE REVOLVER.

"'There was a young fellow, evidently from Kentucky, for he had been talking to Hughes about Cynthiana, Maysville and other Kentucky towns. The latter seemed to know the majority of the people in the places referred to as well, if not better, than the young easterner. During the earlier part of the game the young man had shown Hughes 'the kind of gun they carried in the old commonwealth,' and certainly did produce a jewel of a shooting arm.

"'Yes,' replied Hughes, 'the boys down your way know something about shooting, too. You know ——,' he continued, 'who used to run a blacksmith shop at Catlettsburg? Well, that fellow used to wear a $9 suit of clothes, and never had a gun in his hip pocket that he couldn't get $20 on anywhere.' Several laughed, and the game went on. Hughes picked the young man out for severe punishment, and handed it to him mercilessly, all the while keeping him jollied up about the old folks at home.

"I could see Sam getting nervous. The young man's name I never but as we were playing table it was a case of buy more chips every half hour for the Ken While the sweat came out drops over the bridge of his took his agony like a true sport was fleeced out of about $300 time. We all felt sorry for him cept Hughes, who kept on and chatting. He had a piece of in his chest instead of a blood peller, and you could knock out of it quicker than you knock out any sympathy, let money, even a day's grub fare. denly a queer look came into young man's eyes as he saw his all ricked up in front of Hughes reached back with a quick, ous, but determined movement wrenched his high-priced gun his pocket. He was shoving it the table at Hughes. Then came unexpected move. Though a big Hughes, with just as quick a ment, slipped from his chair the table. As his long muscular got mixed up with the under that well-established piece of ture, over it went with a crash, ing chips and cards all over the

"'For God's sake, don't yelled Hughes.

"A broad smile spread over Kentuckian's face, as he expl that he had no intention of him, but only wanted $20 on tol. He tumbled then that he being robbed, and, standing up against the wall, accepted his losings back, called him everyth could think of from a cur down then stepping off about fourteen in the big double room, he told cheater he would try out his breasted nerve.

"'I am a good shot,' he exp 'and if you stand still I won't you; but if you move I will you to the morgue. I am going how close I can come to your scalp without puncturing your Stand up!' he yelled.

"Some of those present tried terfere, but there was an air about the young fellow which ill for any one butting into the and Hughes stood up.

"Close your ratty eyes!" he manded, 'or you will try to dodge in doing so get in the path of of lead.'

"Hughes shut his eyes and rang out, a bullet being buried plaster in Sam's poker room over Los Angeles Theater. It small wisp of jet-black hair Hughes's head, directly on the and grazed his scalp. A few later, and before the police rive, the Kentuckian was gone room was hastily emptied by who was scared in eleven languages, and I learned after that Hughes never troubled Sam with his presence, as he town."

FACT AND COMMENT.

THE TIMES in its real estate department takes great pleasure from time to time in calling attention to the great prosperity prevailing in other cities in different parts of the country. We have enough prosperity of our own, enough activity in real estate, enough firmness and enhancement of values for real estate, and enough activity in putting up new buildings, both for homes and for business purposes, to kill the ugly germ of jealousy in all our minds. Los Angeles has prosperity enough of her own to enable her people to rejoice sincerely in the prosperity of every other city in the United States. There is perhaps no city of which The Times has spoken more frequently or in more complimentary terms than the city of Minneapolis. The two cities are far enough apart and distinct enough in their characteristic types to prevent either from being jealous of the other. Los Angeles can scarcely take anything from Minneapolis, and surely Minneapolis can get nothing away from the city of Los Angeles. There are a great many Minneapolis people here, but undoubtedly for every person or family which has left that great city at the headwaters of the Mississippi a dozen new ones have gone to take their place. The climate of Minnesota is one which, it cannot be denied, tries exceedingly the endurance of those who live there long. Her winters are long and of excessive severity, the summers short and excessively hot. And yet the city is situated most beautifully at the falls of St. Anthony. It is surrounded by an exceedingly rich agricultural region of great extent. The city has numerous and great manufacturing industries. Her population is growing, and her people are becoming daily richer and richer. She has nothing for which to envy any people on earth. If now and then one of her citizens, alone or with his family, who has made a fortune in the prosperous [illegible] of that city, and feeling the age of his youth passing away, or one of his family threatened with illness on account of the trying climate chooses to remove to Los Angeles, Minneapolis can stand that. That city is not going down or backward. It is going up and forward.

Why All This?

It is said because in spite of the [illegible] with which Minneapolis is treated and in spite of the warmth of affection expressed for that one of the twin cities, as well as for her sister St. Paul, the Minneapolis Tribune of June 25 allowed one Bernice O. Bolton to publish through an interview a great deal of exceedingly nasty information about the city of Los Angeles. Bernice O. Bolton seems to have a peculiar conformation as his name is peculiar. He has got an old woman's name, and probably ought to be dressed in petticoats instead of pantaloons. He says he was in Southern California for eight months, most of the time in Los Angeles. And of course he studied conditions thoroughly, if you believe what he says. This is what he says: "That city is a very dirty place because of the poor sewer system. . . . The city has outgrown its improvements. It has grown so fast that it cannot meet the requirements of sewer, water and streets. A big fire would be a great benefit to the city in cleaning up the old, out of date districts. . . . Then, there are practically no industries there."

—o—

Germ of Truth.

There is just a germ of truth in all that Bernice O. Bolton told the Minneapolis Tribune. The city is not dirty, neither is it very dirty, nor has it, all things considered, a poor sewer system. The city of Los Angeles is one of the most beautiful in the whole world. It is, generally speaking, one of the cleanest. There is a great deal to be done to make this city what ambitious citizens wish it to be, and a great deal is being done, morning, noon and night, every day in the year, to bring the city up to a higher standard. It is true that "the city has outgrown its improvements." It has grown so fast that it has taxed the energy and resources of its citizens to keep pace with the growth in streets, water and sewers. But when all is said, it is one of the best streeted and one of the best sewered cities in the world. Years ago the city constructed an outfall sewer to the sea, which at the time was thought sufficient to carry the sewage for twenty-five or thirty years. The growth of population has been so rapid that this old sewer is inadequate for the use of the city, and the city is now engaged in building a new outfall sewer of capacity enough to take care of a city of half a million inhabitants. It is true that some difficulty has been encountered in putting through this enterprise because of the incompetency of the engineering department of the city, but all cities are subject to difficulties of this kind, and Los Angeles is not one to "lie down" because of any difficulties. The new outfall sewer will be carried through in spite of all hindrances, and will very soon [illegible] the inconvenience from this [illegible] put aside. As in every other city [illegible], there are out-of-date districts in Los Angeles. The old Spanish quarter has been held back in improvements for years, mostly because of the difficulty of giving clean titles to property in that part of the city. In old times the simple people, partly of Indian blood, had a very careless way of passing title one to another, and in old town, as we call that part of the city, there has been a good deal of difficulty in acquiring clean titles. But when you have made allowance for this as well as for other things, there is less extent of out-of-date districts in Los Angeles than in any other city [illegible]. One has only to look back a period of twenty-five years when the population of this city was [illegible] souls. It is now at least [illegible]. There were no spare houses [illegible] years ago, to speak of, and [illegible] people have had to be [illegible] new homes, each of the [illegible] most modern and up-to-date [illegible] found in any city in the [illegible]

Deeds and Contracts.

A subscriber writes to ask some questions about transferring property. He puts a hypothetical case of a house and lot for sale incumbered with a mortgage, the equity in which is to be sold on time. He asks which he had better give, a trust deed or a contract to the buyer. The question is from his point of view, which would be better for the seller. [illegible] somewhat complicated by the mortgage resting upon the property. The answer depends somewhat upon the amount of money the buyer is to pay down and how large the installments are to be paid until the balance is cleared up. The simplest way, if satisfactory, would be to give a contract, and probably that is the way it is generally done. The writer asks if the contract should be recorded. Most assuredly it should be recorded. There is a way in vogue in the city at the present time where lots are sold on small payments down and small monthly installments of giving a contract which is not recorded. There is only one reason for keeping a contract off the records, and that reason is that it costs about a dollar to pay for the recording. Even although the lot is a cheap one, say not to cost above $100, surely it is worth while to pay a dollar to put the contract on record, where it cannot be lost or destroyed. When these contracts for a deed are given, it is the usual practice for the seller not to furnish a certificate of title until the last payment is made to the deed to be passed, yet where the buyer demands a certificate of title up to the time of the contract being signed, it does not seem fair to refuse to furnish it. Of course in that case, the buyer will not require the contract to be brought down when the transaction is ended, the last payment made and the deed to pass. If he has any doubt about any incumbrance being put upon the property without his knowledge, it would be his affair to pay for bringing down the contract to the date of the transfer.

—o—

Reinforced Concrete.

The National Board of Underwriters has now published in full a report on the San Francisco fire. The report is the work of S. A. Reed, consulting engineer of the board, and covers very completely the subject. One of the most interesting sections is that on the material to be used for buildings best designed to withstand a heavy fire. Mr. Reed says that in the San Francisco fire there were thirty-one buildings of considerable height which were protected by reinforced concrete. The concrete was for the most part in the floor arches and around the steel columns supporting the structure. Thirty of these buildings had steel frames. He says that they all stood the test. One building is mentioned particularly, the Bush-street telephone exchange. The report says the temperature in this building was not only very extreme, but very protracted. The windows were of such a nature that they withstood the fire and thus prevented the air from entering the building from the sides. A break in the roof afforded sufficient draft to convert the building into the nature of a furnace, where the heat generated was intense, and lasted for a long time. There was combustible matter in the building enough to furnish ample fuel. Yet in this building the protected columns and floor arches came through the ordeal apparently sound. The only breaks were one in the roof and one on the floor below. These were at points where some cutting away had been done to accommodate the switchboard equipment. The architect thinks that but for the concrete encasing the steel columns might have been softened sufficiently to have given way. With such reinforcement, even although some softening of the metal might be effected, he thinks enough effect of this kind could not be produced, even to cause any deflection.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

GOOD SALES REPORTED IN MANY PARTS OF CITY.

Prices on Close-in Property Southwest of Present Business District Show Continued Advancement, and Several Changes Noted—Demand for Suburban Residence Lots Fair.

The week just closed has shown no remarkable features in real estate activity. The continued rumors of large enterprises slated for the vicinity of Seventh street and Broadway and Hill have caused excitement among dealers, and several sales in the close-in southwest section have shown increased valuations. The demand for well-located suburban residence lots on streets where the improvements have been completed has been fair, and many purchasers are buying for home sites.

Lot 50x180, vacant, on the north side of Jefferson street, 280 feet west of Grand avenue, Arthur J. Goehner to Cyrus G. Adams, for $7500. The recent announcement of the plans of the Shriners to erect a convention hall on West Jefferson street, near Figueroa, at a cost of about half a million dollars, has stimulated realty operations on this street, and dealers report an unprecedented demand for frontage on Jefferson, between Main and Wesley. Owners are holding firmly, and there seem to be more buyers in the market than sellers.

The grounds which were laid out years ago by Mr. Petsch, have long been noted for their beautiful palms. There are over seventy of them, each of a difference species, and imported from all parts of the world. A number of them are very rare and are valued at $1000 each. The sale was made on the basis of $230 a foot for the Figueroa-street frontage, which is believed to be the highest price ever paid for residence property in Los Angeles.

Pittsburgh Man Invests.

A sale noted in The Times during the week, and giving an indication of the sustained values of well-located property was that made by Black Brothers for John J. Thornton to E. H. Antone of Pittsburgh, Pa., who is heavily interested in the American Bridge Company. Antone purchases the unimproved northwest corner of Seventh and Flower streets, 62½x115 feet, for $93,750, being at the rate of $1500 per front foot. He will hold it as an investment.

—o—

Ormond Beach.

The sales at Ormond Beach last Sunday amounted to something like $70,000. There were 213 lots sold. The reception accorded this new claimant for public favor was enthusiastic. A special train left the Arcade depot at 8:15 a.m. crowded to capacity. It was originally intended to run five cars, as the railroad company could promise no more. Emil Firth is greatly pleased with the results and has advertised a second special train for today.

A BEAUTIFUL HOME.

One of the most attractive new homes gracing the western hills is that of J. M. Flowers, located at the southeast corner of Hobson and San Marino streets. The location is high and sightly, with a magnificent vista of mountain, valley and ocean stretching out before it. The structure is a combination of the Moorish and mission styles, and has ten rooms. The ceilings are beamed and the lower rooms are paneled in golden oak. The outside finish is cement and stucco. There is a commodious roof garden and a charming patio, giving ample opportunity for family outdoor life, so desirable in this climate. The residence is valued at $20,000. It has a north frontage, the lot being ninety-four feet on San Marino street. A handsome garage in mission style occupies the southeast corner of the lot. The place is known as "Casa de Flores."

FOR SALE—
In that pleasing location, Harvard blvd. between 16th and Washington, on high ground, and but half block from car, I have recently built by day labor an 8-room house with cement cellar and furnace. You will find no cheap trash here. It is a strictly modern home, artistic in design, hardwood floors on first floor, large colored art glass windows with pleasing effect, rock built mantel 6 feet 6 inches in breadth with hearth, and irons and asbestos logs. This flue is built to burn both coal and gas. Plumbing modern and complete upstairs, also on screen porch. Expensive fixtures, gas and electric shades to windows. There is a fine clover lawn and broad cement walks. It is unnecessary to speak of the inside finish.
There is not a cheap fixture in this house and I do not believe its equal in value (at the price I offer,) will be found in this city. Adjoining lots cannot be bought under $1850.
The number of this delightful home is 1719 and the owner's name is CRICHTON SMITH,
201 Currier Bldg.

I could not duplicate this house, contents and lot today under $6500; but what about the price I offer this bargain at? 9

FOR SALE—
WIDENING OF WILSHIRE BOULEVARD FINISHED.

The costly and extensive improvements bordering "Wilshire" from Vermont avenue west are attracting the attention of the home-seeking and investing public.

Many features possessed by this territory alone fairly entitle it to a preference over other sections and account for the backing given Wilshire Boulevard property by the foremost real estate firms of the city.

In elevation and outlook it is unexcelled. The approach due west on Seventh through the Westlake section is absolutely the key to the finest high-class residence territory available. Absolutely no more to be had except by going further out.

We say to you that with the more assured future of the city in mind, the history of the West Adams Heights section is being duplicated in property closer in along Wilshire Boulevard.

Remember Los Angeles is the fastest growing city in the world and your opportunity is offered in the closest and lowest priced tract along Wilshire—namely

"WILSHIRE HARVARD HEIGHTS"

Eighty acres of gently sloping tableland extending from Wilshire to San Marino, from Normandie to Harvard.

Tract is all inside city, with city water, a vital consideration, and one you must inquire into, already in, a twenty-inch main traversing the tract on Irolo. We are spending between $300 and $400 per lot in improvements, assuring the very best of street and cement work. Five-foot walks, three and one-half-foot cement gutters throughout; road graveled, oiled and rolled streets, lined with shade trees are included in the price of lots. Over $35,000 in sales to date. Prices range from $1000 up and the terms are easy—only one-fourth down.

A few hundred dollars will secure one of several bargains at $1325 to $1600, located on very crest of knoll overlooking the valley clear to the ocean.

Two magnificent corners on Wilshire, $5000; Wilshire and Jasmine, S.W. corner, 70x146. $6250; Wilshire and Harvard, 132x150. Will sell 60 or 65 feet inside; make appointment for auto to call. Agent on tract Sunday.

FOR SALE—"WE SELL THE HILLS."

$18,000 is the price just realized for a lot 60x107 on southeast corner of Valencia and W. 7th sts.

$3500 is the price at which we offer a great big double corner, splendid business or apartment house location, 128 ft. frontage on Beaudry, 90 ft. on Everett st., 92 ft. on Sunset blvd. and 100 ft. across the north end. It is closer to the Courthouse than the Valencia-st. lot. True, 7th st. is a fine street, but Sunset blvd., 100 ft. wide, winding through the beautiful hill country in the northwest to Hollywood, is "going to be" just as fine. Do you know that the way to make BIG MONEY in real estate and make it QUICK is to get in just a little ahead of the crowd on "going to be" principal streets and buy property before the big advance comes? The very best field for that class of investment in the city today is out Sunset blvd. way in the northwest part of the city; but quick action is necessary if you are to reap the golden harvest. Properties on W. 7th, W. Pico, S. Main, Central ave., and in fact on all main streets in those portions of the city, have increased in value generally in the last few years from 300 per cent. to 1000 and 2000 per cent., the greater advances being on the principal streets. Sunset blvd. has been doing "quite well, thank you." Prices have doubled and trebled, a vast amount of street work and grading has been done, and beautiful homes have been built, but the BIG ADVANCE that has come to W. 7th, W. Pico and other sections has not yet been realized on Sunset blvd. It is just ABOUT DUE NOW, and the big profits that will shortly be realized on Sunset blvd. investments will make the old settlers "sit up and take notice," and "don't you forget it." Our esteemed friend, H. E. Huntington, remarked not long since that "Los Angeles as a city has only just begun to grow." The railroad companies and the hotel people tell us that more people are coming to Los Angeles this season than in any previous year. These people are not GUESSING; they KNOW. This means that Los Angeles will grow more next year than it did last. It means that the W. 7th st. and Valencia lot is NOT TOO HIGH, but that the Sunset blvd. and Beaudry st. lot is AWAY BELOW VALUE. We are making no effort to dispose of our own lots in the vicinity of Sunset blvd. and Alvarado st. at present prices, but a client of ours has a beautiful lot, 50x150, on Sunset blvd. near Alvarado, that he wants to sell for $1500, part cash. Three lots, making 150x140, on W. 7th near Alvarado were sold recently for $33,750. $1500 for a lot on Sunset blvd. and $11,250 for a similar lot on W. 7th, same distances from center! This great disparity in prices is out of all proportion to actual values! We will not offer a list of properties we have for sale, but if you are looking for homes or for investments, we can do you some good. Just call up Home phone 771 or Sunset Main 2356, or call on the RANNELLS LAND COMPANY, main office 127 N. Main st., or take Hollywood or Colegrove cars to branch office, Sunset blvd. and Alvarado, and let us "show you." 9

WESTMINSTER TERRACE.
HOLMES-WALTON CO.

NEW ELECTRIC CAR LINES ARE OPENING UP A NEW DISTRICT THAT IS CLOSER IN THAN PICO HEIGHTS AND AS BEAUTIFULLY LOCATED AS WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS.

The beautiful high ground at the intersection of Western ave. and Second st. has been overlooked and neglected because it had no street car service. It is close in and there is a car line now building that will put this tract within 15 minutes of Broadway. Another line, still shorter, is proposed.

The view from this tract is superb! Overlooks Wilshire Blvd. and the beautiful Cahuenga Valley. The mountains from Old Baldy to Point Dume are plainly seen from every lot, nothing can cut them off.

Building restrictions are such that only artistic and good homes can be erected.

Street work is now being done in our Westminster Terrace, and we hope to open the tract Sept. 16. Reservations can now be made at prices which are 10 to 33 1-3 per cent. lower than asked for adjacent property. $1050 and upward; usual terms or discount for cash. This is an opportunity for the investor or homeseeker.

THERE IS NO MORE CLOSE-IN LAND TO BE HAD AFTER THIS DISTRICT IS FILLED UP.

Call at our office for plat and complete description. We'll take you to see if you want to go.

LISTEN TO THIS.
LISTEN TO THIS.
LISTEN TO THIS.

The big money made in Los Angeles real estate has been made in business property. A comparatively few have been able to share in these big profits, owing to the fact that it has taken large sums to enter into such speculations.

THE TIME HAS ARRIVED.
THE TIME HAS ARRIVED.
THE TIME HAS ARRIVED.

You who watch the trend of affairs know that the most talked-of thoroughfare in Los Angeles today is Jefferson st., the great cross-town artery of a quarter of a million people.

SOMETHING IS DOING.
SOMETHING IS DOING.
SOMETHING IS DOING.

There certainly is, on this talked-of street, where prices are yet low indeed, and where the investor with moderate purse can yet avail himself of quick profits. Street to be paved, many buildings planned and improved rapid transit facilities a certainty.

YOU CAN GET IN
YOU CAN GET IN
YOU CAN GET IN

Yes, you can. You can buy strictly business lots on West Jefferson st., with all improvements complete, for $1050; you can get these for 1-4 cash, balance 6, 12 and 18 months. No other such chance in Los Angeles.

MAKE YOURSELF MONEY.
MAKE YOURSELF MONEY.
MAKE YOURSELF MONEY.

These are unrestricted lots in our Jefferson Street Park Tract, corner Jefferson and Arlington, and their number is limited. Buy one of these and be assured of a handsome profit. Remember, they are SOUTHWEST, where the city is growing.

THIS IS THE HOUR.
THIS IS THE HOUR.
THIS IS THE HOUR.

Delay not, but call at our office for full particulars. Let us take you out and show you some profits.

VERMONT AVE. BUSINESS PROPERTY.

If you are not convinced that Vermont ave. is THE BUSINESS street of the southwest, take down your map and study it; it is the longest street in the city, reaching from the mountains to the sea, with electric cars the whole distance; it will be paved with asphalt from Washington to University Station, which will be the business center of the Southwest. Do you know within the past year there has been 12 new stores built on Vermont and all are occupied? Also that plans are being made for several new brick store buildings, which will soon be constructed.

If you want to make money, get in now before the prices are advanced and the other fellow makes the profit. Come to our office and let us show you the best buys in the city for investment. We can sell you the best corner, 100x140, on Vermont near Adams, at $85 front foot; inside frontage, same district, as low as $55. We also have a large corner near Jefferson at $55 front foot. Why pay twice and three times as much on streets that have not the future of Vermont ave.? Get in before it is too late. Come out and let us talk to you.

Business & Industrial Real Estate.

905-6 Union Trust Bldg., 4th and Spring.

PLENTY OF 6 PER CENT. MONEY.

Los Angeles business property is better security today than ever before in the history of the real estate market.

We have completed arrangements with San Francisco financial interests which will enable us to handle all loans required on business property SOLD BY OR THROUGH US, at the moderate rate of SIX PER CENT NET. A first installment of $375,000 is available for immediate use.

These loans will be made on a liberal basis, to-wit: from one-half to two-thirds of the market value of the realty.

No commission will be charg[illegible] for negotiating these loans.

Real estate investors who desire to work the market on a limited margin, are invited to inspect our choice list of business and industrial real estate, all of which is situated in the very heart of the close-in district of Los Angeles. Long exclusive experience with business property enables us to select only the choicest properties which the market affords. Our clients for years have been making enormous profits on this class of property. It is the cleanest class of property to speculate in because every sale is a clean-up, and there are no deferred payments or installments to hang fire for years on purchase price.

Each of the properties listed below are under our exclusive agency, and management. On these properties we can guarantee loans of one-half to two-thirds of market value at 6 per cent. net, long time loans, that.

S.E. COR. HILL AND 16TH.

Southeast corner 16th and Hill sts., 130x102 feet. We will throw in with this corner, free of charge, $18,000 worth of substantial improvements, renting for $180 per month. Price $78,000; terms about one-third cash, balance three years loan at 6 per cent. net.

752-754 LOS ANGELES ST.

55x104 feet in same block, with and adjoining property interests identified with the Huntington railway terminals; 14-room improvements renting for $80 per month go with it. Los Angeles street is now a leading factor in speculative market. This property can be had for $45,000; terms about one-third cash, balance at 6 per cent. net for 3 years.

S. E. COR. FIGUEROA AND 4TH.

This is the corner that was badly wanted by the Harriman interests for the L. A. Pacific Ry., which has a right of way on the way to it now. It measures 120 feet on Figueroa and 165 on 4th. It is the biggest, grandest close-in corner anywhere to be had, $75,000. About one-third cash, balance at 6 per cent.

NINTH STREET.

N.W. Corner 9th and Green, 65x160 to alley. Opposite million-dollar Catholic Cathedral soon to be erected on the entire block of land east of this corner. Only one block from Union ave. $16,250. About one-third cash, balance at 6 per cent. net.

And many other properties ranging from $15,000 to $300,000 in value, all on the same liberal terms. Phone inquiries cheerfully answered.

FOR SALE—$6000 PER FOOT!!

SPRING ST.!! NEAR 4TH!!

Have you noticed how general is the impression that central business property is to be the feature of the real estate market this fall and winter?

Well, you need not be surprised, for, first place, Los Angeles can now justly claim a population of a quarter of a million and central business property has not yet been selling at prices which prevail in cities of that size. Furthermore, investors and speculators fell over one another in buying and selling and running up the prices of prospective business property and outskirt business property to quarter million city figures to the absolute neglect of the REAL CENTER. So now keep your eye on Main, Spring and Broadway, from 2nd to 5th streets, and get in early on the advance.

I am offering 60x159 to alley, 40 feet south of the Braly bldg., for $6000 per foot.

Its now ripe for a 10-story building and the very highest rents that Los Angeles will afford for 20 years to come. Its safe—its in the center—its surrounded on every side by improvements that guarantee the permanency of the location—it will bring you $10,000 per foot as soon as the city doubles again in population. It will pay you handsomely while you wait.

You can pay $160,000 down and carry the balance at 4 per cent.

GRANDEST CORNER IN THE NEW COMMISSION AND CITY MARKET DISTRICT.

SOUTHWEST CORNER OF THIRD AND CROCKER STREETS.

56x120 TO AN ALLEY.

THE PRICE IS $650 PER FRONT FOOT, WHICH IS AT LEAST $100 PER FRONT FOOT LESS THAN THE MOST CONSERVATIVE VALUATION THAT COULD BE PUT UPON THE PROPERTY, BASED UPON SURROUNDING VALUES.

ONE OF THE MOST RESPONSIBLE BUSINESS FIRMS IN THE CITY HAVE AGREED WITH ME THAT IF A FOUR-STORY AND BASEMENT BUILDING IS ERECTED AT ONCE THAT THEY WILL TAKE A FIVE OR TEN YEAR LEASE AND PAY A RENTAL OF 10 PER CENT. GROSS UPON THE VALUE OF THE LAND AND THE COST OF THE BUILDING.

FROM AN INVESTMENT STANDPOINT YOU DO NOT HAVE TO FIGURE PROSPECTIVE VALUE, BUT THE PROSPECTIVE VALUE IS THERE JUST THE SAME, AND I DO NOT HESITATE TO ASSERT THAT THIS CORNER WILL BE WORTH $1000 PER FOOT IN ONE YEAR FROM DATE.

VALUES IN THIS DISTRICT WHICH SUPPLIES THE CITY'S SUBSISTENCE ARE BOUND TO INCREASE IN A DIRECT RATIO WITH THE GROWTH OF THE CITY.

FOR SALE—OR EXCHANGE—ONE OF THE handsomest country homes and dairy ranch in Southern California, consisting of 104 acres, 12 miles from Los Angeles. It is cut in two by the S. P. Ry., with switch and platform station. It is half a mile from Santa Fe Ry., and one mile from electric line. There is a magnificent park, full of rare trees, 40 years old, beautiful shrubs, lawns, flowers, fountains, greenhouses, arbors, etc., ideal in every way. There is an old house, newly made over, of 14 rooms, with hot and cold water, gas for lighting, baths, etc. The water supply is from many inexhaustible wells, pumped by a 35 horse power electric motor, into a 700,000-gallon reservoir. 30 acres are now in fine stand of alfalfa; 38 acres more can be put in, and irrigated; and about 30 acres are in pasture. There are 71 cows, 2 bulls; 4 horses, wagons, buggy, surrey, large supply of tools, extensive barns and sheds, and many other things too numerous to mention. All this can be had for $50,000, on terms of $20,000 cash and balance mortgage at 6 per cent. net. Or I will accept as part exchange a first-class orange grove up to $15,000, located in the foothills near electric line. If you are looking for something good, this is your chance.

FOR SALE—

SAN PEDRO.

There is no point on the Pacific Coast that is attracting as much attention among investors and capitalists, as is San Pedro, the coming harbor of California. This port, which has been heretofore looked upon more as a gateway for smaller-tonnage vessels, is rapidly coming to the front, and is destined to be one of the greatest deep-water harbors of the Pacific Coast.
The work of the United States government in building a great breakwater for the protection of ocean-going ships, has attracted the eye of the investing world toward San Pedro, and since this work has been commenced San Pedro has embarked in the Oriental trade, with two large lines already running into this port and two great transcontinental lines of railroad planning to start a line of immense freight and passenger boats to handle foreign and coast trade.
No other coast city in America, no other coast city, perhaps, in the world has the future that this new port has.
In view of all these facts and conditions, it is not to be wondered that appropriations running into the millions have been made by the United States government for building and maintaining a harbor at this point.
When completed, the harbor will have thirteen miles of dockage, more than double the amount that San Francisco has today.

In order that you may know something of what is being done at the present time, even before these improvements are completed, we submit a few statements showing some lines of business that have been handled through San Pedro the past year, ending June 30 last.

Over 200,000 passengers arrived and departed via water.

400,000,000 FEET OF LUMBER HAS BEEN RECEIVED.

271,480,000 POLES, TIES, POSTS AND SHINGLES.

DURING THE YEAR EXPORTS HAVE INCREASED OVER 100 PER CENT.

During past twelve months oil shipments increased 700 per cent.

Two trainloads of lumber consigned to interior points leave the harbor every day.

Seventy-five tagloads of stone are used daily in connection with harbor improvements.

The pay roll of San Pedro amounts to $250,000 per month.

Forty-five vessel loads of lumber consigned to San Pedro from points north are due to arrive this week.

Business houses now under construction are to cost $250,000.

Residences contracted for and under construction are to cost $50,000.

Contracts for one residence to cost $20,000, and another to cost $10,000, have just been made.

A new high school building which cost $55,000 has just been completed.

A City Hall to cost $50,000 has been authorized by the City Council.

The city contains 25 miles of improved streets.

Two electric lines connecting Los Angeles with San Pedro enter the place.

The Pacific Electric R.R. is now building a local system covering ten miles of San Pedro streets.

Contracts have been let for an expenditure of $125,000 in city street improvements.

The growth of San Pedro is a healthy and substantial sign of progress. Population and commercial interests grow together, and the city is bound to reap the benefits.

POPULATION IN 1900......... 1,800
POPULATION IN 1905......... 5,000
POPULATION IN 1906......... 7,000
POPULATION IN 1910......... 25,000

Two great transcontinental lines of railroad at the present time enter San Pedro.
These great corporations expending millions in terminal improvements recognize the fact that the new port city has a most wonderful future.

San Pedro is the Pacific Coast port which lies nearest to the mines of the Rocky Mountain region, the wheat fields of Minnesota and the Dakotas, the cotton fields of the South, the corn fields of Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska and the great stock ranges of Kansas, Texas and the whole Southwest.
San Pedro is the logical port of exchange for South and Central Americas' shipping as well as the Republic of Mexico.
San Pedro is the first deep-water harbor west of the Panama Canal, and the millions of tons of freight and merchandise that will originate in the great manufacturing centers of New England and the East, consigned via water to the Pacific Coast States, Hawaii, the Philippines and the Orient, will enter this port for transfer or re-shipment.
All of these are backing San Pedro in her rapid growth, and millions of dollars will be spent within the next few years to perfect conditions in order that the traffic referred to can be handled.
These things will help to make San Pedro the most prominent port city on the Pacific Coast.
Nature has made San Pedro the geographical shipping center of these great industries. From Hudson Bay to Panama, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, by rail and by water, this vast territory contributing will make her prominence national.

San Pedro is an investment offering that should be carefully considered by far-seeing investors.
What you could have done a few years ago by buying land contiguous to Spring, Hill and Broadway in Los Angeles, you can do today in San Pedro.
The frontage that we offer on Pacific and Huntington avenues, which are the Spring and Broadway of the future port city, is an opportunity that seldom comes to anyone.

The outer and inner harbor, the Huntington Mole, the Miner Fill, and in fact all of these great improvements, are shown on our new map.

If you are looking for an investment, come in and see us. Here is one on which you can double your money in a few months.

CLUBS' MONTH APPROACHES.

They're Astir for Opening During October.

Building Plan Important to Friday Morning.

Ebell to Continue Studies of Government.

Mrs J. W. Hendrick president Ruskin Art.

Mrs F. K. Foster president of Friday Morning

Mrs J. T. Fitzgerald vice-president of Ebell

Mrs Margaret C Graham chairman of Friday Morning Book Committee

Mrs Berthold Baruch vice-president of Friday Morning

Mrs W. L. Jones general curator of Ebell

Some of the busy figures in local woman's clubdom the coming year.

The empty halls of clubdom are echoing once more to the tread of busy feet, for the committee woman is about. The call of the seashore and cañon is growing fainter as September grows, for 'tis a time-honored tradition that clubs open auspiciously in October. Programmes for the year's work in all the important clubs of the city are practically completed, in a general sense, though specifically speaking but one month's work is ever outlined at board session. The woman whose club is her school, and the one to whom all occult things of club study are as the back of her hand, and who attends merely for diversion, are alike looking forward expectantly to the opening day in clubdom. In the main the clubs will pursue the policies of past years, such policies as their constitutions and bylaws and the temper of their members bind them to. That means that the Friday Morning Club will continue to be "an inspiration club," as one of its members happily expressed it, that the Ebell and Wednesday Morning will still be distinguished as study clubs, while the Ruskin Art will continue to turn its undivided attention, without apologies, to the study of art "for art's sake." But as to the special aims and ambitions of each club—that is another story.

LARGEST AND RICHEST.

The Friday Morning Club, as to point of numbers and wealth, is the most influential woman's body in Southern California and plays a most important part in club life in the Southwest. The opening meeting of this club will be held on the first Friday in October and on that day will be revealed the results of the summer cogitations of the legislative and executive minds that furnish mental pabulum for little less than one thousand club women. From a business point of view the most important matter to come before the club this year is the plan for the proposed building. The old clubhouse was long ago outgrown and since the proposition to limit the membership was overwhelmingly defeated, it behooves the women to obtain newer and larger quarters as soon as possible. The lot on the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Figueroa streets, opposite the pretentious home of the Ebell Club, will be improved this winter and plans for the new home will be submitted before many weeks by Mrs. John R. Haynes and her committee of twenty-one shrewd business women. The club will be presided over by Mrs. Ernest K. Foster, who is serving her second term and Mrs. Berthold Baruch will serve again as vice-president. Mrs. E. R. Bradley, who was doorkeeper last year, is the recording secretary and Mrs. Ella H. Enderlein, who won distinction for herself while at the head of the programme committee, will fill the office of corresponding secretary. Mrs. N. K. Potter will continue to be the custodian of the club's money.

It will be of interest to many to learn that Mrs. Margaret C. Graham, authoress and founder of the book committee, will head the same committee this year. Miss Mary L. Jones will be associate chairman of this committee and these two names guarantee a thoughtful and efficient handling of literature in the club sanctum. There is an unusually strong executive board this year. Included on this board are Miss Jennie Collier, Mrs. Harriet Wadleigh, Mrs. E. R. Bradley, Mrs. N. K. Potter, Mrs. Haynes, Mrs. Enderlein and others who served last year.

A new thing in club circles is the advisory board, composed of past presidents and which has been inaugurated by the Friday Morning Club. A similar board will doubtless be appointed by other clubs as increasing membership and progress demands. On the Friday Morning Club's advisory board will be such prominent and indefatigable club workers as Mme. Caroline M. S. Severance, Mrs. Shelley Tolhurst, Mrs. Roy Jones, Mrs. J. F. Sartori and Mrs. J. A. Osgood.

Unfortunately the public is not permitted to delve too deeply into the Friday Morning Club's plans for intimate study this year, for the enjoyment of such confidences as Mrs. Foster and her committee women have to give is reserved for the first meeting of the year, which is open to club members only. On this occasion the annual address of the president will be followed by an elaborate presentation of the scheme for future work. There will be no chairman of the programme committee this winter, hence much glory is lost to some bright woman. In place of the usual chairman the board will act as a whole.

EBELL AND GOVERNMENT.

Mrs. Philip G. Hubert, president of the Ebell Club, has been at Squirrel Inn for some weeks and while she has been away little has been done in the way of programme making, though several announcements of importance can be made at this date. For one thing, the civic committee, which will be guided by Mrs. Augustus Hine as curator, will handle many topics previously dealt with by the popular home section, as well as other topics concerning government, Federal and municipal, as its name indicates. In these days of unrest, while campaigns are being launched and investigating committees are perspiring, this committee has an opportunity to enlighten much, as it probably will. Mrs. J. W. Van Cleve will support Mrs. Hine in the strenuous labors which this section has before it. Questions which affect most directly the home in relation to good government and social conditions will be chiefly considered.

Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald, vice-president of the Ebell, is a woman from whom much inspiration is looked for. Mrs. B. R. Baumgardt, second vice-president, has established a record for profitable work in the Ebell and Mrs. J. C. McCoy is accounted a very able third vice. Miss Helen Louise Kimball will continue as recording secretary, Mrs. Frank A. Kelly serving as corresponding secretary. Mrs. Lewis Clark Carlisle is treasurer of this large club and a woman with a weight of responsibility on her shoulders, is the general curator, Mrs. W. L. Jones, who is new to this line of work, but who is deemed highly efficient. Mrs. Will P. Baker will assist Mrs. Jones.

The opening meeting of the club will be held on the first Monday in October. This will be President's day, and the annual address of the chief officer will be followed by a musical programme and a reception for members only.

The current section of the Ebell will be conducted by Mrs. Florence C. Porter, who will be assisted by Mrs. J. C. Cowles. The sociological questions of the day will be handled by these two well-known women, while Mrs. Burt E. Howard and Mrs. R. W. Burnham will present affairs of political importance, both domestic and foreign. Current literature, art and music will be in the able hands of Mrs. W. S. Bartlett and Mrs. A. L. Brown.

Informal discussion from the floor will be an important part of each day's programme and whenever possible specialists in the lines of study and investigation which the women are pursuing will be obtained. It is the club's hope to be able to secure Hon. Frank P. Flint to address the members on the fourth Monday and give an outline of the important work of the last Congress and touch upon some of the vital measures to be considered in the coming session.

The department of conversation and books will be under the leadership of Mrs. Sumner P. Hunt and Mrs. Stephen S. Wilder. The Hospitality Committee will be headed by Mrs. Thomas Knight and Mrs. Nicholas N. Rice. Among books to be reviewed will be "Uncle William," by Jeanette Lee; "The Jungle," by Upton Sinclair, and other late publications.

Mrs. Katherine K. Forest is a practical woman to serve as curator of the music section. Mrs. James W. Holder will be her secretary and the section will concern itself with the study of folk lore and lullabies, legends and like topics relating to the early history of music. Special attention will be given to the classical composers, including Beethoven, Liszt, Shubert, Schumann and Chopin. Miss Helen Parcels will resume her lectures on the history of music, beginning with the rise of the opera and oratorio. In January she will begin a course of interpretative lectures on the symphonies which will be produced by the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra during the winter.

The department of science will conduct a round table for the discussion of modern scientific and ethical questions. Mrs. Eugene T. Pettigrew, well known in the Consumers' League, will be in charge here, with Mrs. J. B. Millard as assistant, and Mrs. Charles W. Saunders as secretary. Among the topics to be handled are: "Radium," "Modern Theories of Motion," "Evolution of Morality" and kindred subjects.

Mrs. O. O. Witherbee has been chosen curator of the art and travel section. Miss Isabel Hamilton will act as secretary here and Miss Alice Mitton will serve as leader. During October and November the students in this section will consider Venice, Mantau, Parma, Lugano, Bologna, "Artists of the North," "The Afterbloom of Italian Art" and poems and novels bearing upon the work. At the opening of the new year French cities and artists will be studied. Mrs. John Kahn, curator of the Shakespeare section, will have Mrs. Edward North as leader and Mrs. John S. Thayer as secretary. "Henry VIII," "Macbeth" and "The Taming of the Shrew" will be among the plays studied.

Mme. J. A. Donato, former leader of the French section, is traveling abroad and in her absence Gabriel Durnerin will instruct in French grammar and literature. Mrs. William Reed is curator of this section and Mrs. James B. Stearns is secretary.

There will be a parliamentary-law section with Mrs. J. A. Clark as curator and Mrs. J. A. Osgood as instructor.

STUDY OF ART.

The Ruskin Art Club will convene this year on the first Wednesday of October with Mrs. J. W. Hendrick, a former successful president, in the chair. Mrs. I. L. Hibbard will act as vice-president for Mrs. Hendrick and the first meeting will be opened with the president's address, which will be immediately followed by a talk from Mrs. W. H. Housh, the recent president, who will be followed by Mrs. R. B. Ashley. The work of the club for the year will be, in the main, the study of art by cities and Paris will be the first city taken under consideration. Mrs. Housh will touch upon the history and building of the city very slightly and will then pass on to the main subject in hand.

As every one knows, Los Angeles is looking to this pioneer and hard-working club to establish within the year the long-coveted permanent art gallery. After the stormy times of the closing months of the last season the subject was dropped while members flitted away for summer vacations in the mountains and at the seashore. But on the second Tuesday of next month this perplexing topic must be wrestled with once more. The permanent art gallery must be located and very soon, too, for the peace of mind of these ambitious clubwomen. Several sites have been submitted to the committee in charge, but if any opinions have been formed or a suggestion of a choice made it is not known outside of the private chamber wherein the committee meets.

As to the annual art exhibition, that will surely be held in the early fall, though some delay in the perfection of plans for this has been experienced through the difficulty of determining upon the best place. It is known, however, that Temple Auditorium offers a most advantageous location and an attractive place and there is everything in favor of this place for the exhibition provided it can be secured.

MRS. PITKIN TAKING HOLD.

The Wednesday Morning Club, the East Side's largest and best-known organization of women, will be presided over this year by Mrs. M. C. Pitkin, a woman hitherto inconspicuous in club life, but whose ambition and energy promises much of good. The board of directors of this club has been changed entirely as to personnel and it is likely that this fact will mark a corresponding change in the policy of the organization, though on all questions the members are as yet undecided. The club will continue to make the study of Shakespearean drama and music important among its topics and current events will also come in for their usual consideration.

CAMP SCHOOL.

Cadets of California Military Academy Will Study and Live Under Canvas at Santa Monica.

Tent life for the cadets is the plan of the California Military Academy, and when the school opens on September 19, the academy camp at Santa Monica will have the appearance of a regular military camp, divided into company streets, with a mess tent, school tents and other accesories of school and military life.

Study and recitation will be conducted in camp the same as in barracks, the recitation tents being equipped as schoolrooms. There will be target practice, mounted drill, marches, campaign exercises and signal drill, in addition to preparation for college. After the fall camp the academy will move into the Hotel Arcadia for winter quarters.

For a Reaction; even the Earthquake did not lower values at a time when excitement was at its highest. After a brief period of dullness, values began to strengthen until now there is a big up-turn in prices, especially in moderate price lots in the Southwest.

Monrovia

Watch the news columns of the daily papers for facts about Monrovia's doings. Big things are planned—watch Monrovia.

Everybody Prefers the Foothills and THAT Means MONROVIA

Monrovia isn't somebody's subdivision but a model city of homes comprising between 3500 and 4000 people.

Monrovia isn't owned by speculators but by the people who live on the premises.

Monrovia isn't growing because of any artificial booming but because nature made it the choicest residence spot in Southern California.

Monrovia is successful, wide-awake, progressive, clean.

Monrovia people stand for Monrovia, work for Monrovia, and put their own money in Monrovia property.

Monrovia is easily stepping ahead of other towns, gaining rapidly and there are those who expect to see it become a larger place than Pasadena.

Its percentage of growth is the largest of any of the important suburbs.

Monrovia is beautifully situated and is just the right distance from Los Angeles. Commutation rates are low, car service is quick and frequent and the ride is by far the prettiest out of the city.

Property is unquestionably very moderate, but prices are being readjusted rapidly. The time to buy is now.

There are thousands of miles of sea coast and valley lands, plenty for everybody. But foothill property, the choicest of all, is decidedly limited. It looks as though people were just waking up to these facts. Watch Monrovia.

The present activity of the real estate market in Long Beach offers an opportunity for quick turns. Investors who get in now are sure to make big money on their holdings. There is absolutely no chance to go wrong. Every lot, and every acre of ground within a 5-mile radius of the Great Harbor Project, is almost certain to double in value long before the Canal is completed. The time to buy Long Beach Realty is NOW—and the cream of Investment Properties today is the Inner Harbor Tract.

The foregoing statement is not in the least exaggerated. We mean every word of it.

Come Down—Today or Tomorrow—and Let Us Show You the Property. Forty-two Lots Sold During the Past Week.

The Present Outlook

Long Beach is enjoying a wave of prosperity—which, "if taken at its flood, will lead on to fortune." You know the rest. Why not get in now—while big things are doing? Put a few hundred dollars into INNER HARBOR LOTS—at $250 to $500 each, on terms of $50 down and $10 monthly—and watch your money grow. There are three things that point to an immediate and radical advance in prices on this property: The Great Canal, the Salt Lake Railroad, and the Huntington Electric line. The Inner Harbor Tract will be in the very midst of these activities.

Inner Harbor Tract Lots are 40x125 Feet

The Future Prospects

Long Beach has increased in population within half a dozen years from TWO thousand to TWENTY thousand! The probabilities are that even this phenomenal growth will be doubled in another five years or less; because Long Beach is building for permanency, upon a SOLID FOUNDATION. The business of Long Beach is held at home. The residents here trade at their home stores. And, besides, Long Beach is a year-round city—where life is joy at any and all seasons.

SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST CLOSES AFTER A MOST EXCITING RACE.

THE Times Scholarship of 1906 closed last night at midnight. From 8 o'clock in the morning till 10 o'clock in the evening the business office and scholarship rooms were besieged with contestants and their friends. Coupons came in by express, by mail, by handbag, boxes and bundles. "Our Maud"—the vivacious little Azusa miss, brought a dress suit case full. Mansie Kim, the Chinese contestant, sent hers by express. Blake Tantau, the Pasadena boy, brought a huge box tightly packed with the trim little slips. Mary Lallich, the Gardena girl, came, accompanied by her father, who has taken a deep interest in his daughter's work, and both were laden with coupons. One rapid counter put in the entire afternoon in counting the bales of coupons sent in for Mansie Kim and at the hour of going to press thousands more had come in for her, and several immense boxes stacked with thousands for Merle Prewitt have not been touched by the counters. Joanna Cameron's coupons filled an entire desk drawer and overflowed into a big box beside. Kate Atkinson, the Lordsburg lass, sent in a big box filled with hundreds of little twenty-five-coupon packets, each one tied with lavender cord. When the cover of that box came off the hurried counters paused to admire the positively artistic appearance which such prosaic things as printed coupons presented when done up in lavender. One of the pretty incidents of the day was the opening of a little package of the printed slips carefully tied with white satin baby ribbon. They were labeled for Merle Prewitt and a little note accompanying the offering stated that it was the gift of three little girls. Orestes Orfila was the recipient of a package tied up with pink satin ribbons, and the climax was reached when a single coupon, pasted on the back of a postal card, arrived for Merle Prewitt.

MAIL FROM EVERYWHERE.

Messengers were kept busy delivering special delivery letters yesterday. Fannie Wolff received one at an early hour containing a check for annual subscription to The Times to be sent to Wieluku, Moui, Honolulu.

Mansie Kim sent down one from Bakersfield containing money and subscriptions.

Jennie Bloom, the little Boston-street hustler, received a package of coupons from Africa, and Jennie declares they are not black.

At 8 o'clock the manager's mail table was heaped with the morning mail and as soon as any impression was made on the huge pile another great basket full was piled on. For the space of an hour and a half there was the steady slit, slit of the envelope opener and coupons, checks and money orders were rapidly sorted and turned over to the clerks. All day long this happened again and again. Thousands and thousands of letters and packages were received and at the hour of going to press there is a mass of mail matter that has not even been opened.

Paul Steintorf, the young Imperial Valley candidate arrived on a belated train last night and hastened at once to scholarship headquarters, getting in at 9 o'clock. It was 11 o'clock before the anxious contestants left the office.

GREAT HUMAN INTEREST.

No one has taken a deeper interest throughout the contest than the old people. Day after day aged men and women have come to headquarters to leave coupons and to inquire as to the progress and prospects of their favorites. Scores of letters similar to the two following have been received by the manager, indicating what a strong hold the educational interests of these young people have taken upon those who are facing the sunset glow of life. An old lady writes: "I am 71 years of age and am laid up with a broken shoulder, but I want to help Grace Allen and herewith send 78 coupons."

A Los Angeles woman writes: "I am intensely interested in the scholarship contest and have concluded to help Edna Wagner, though I have never met the young lady, but have taken a great interest in her work. I find the contest so fascinating I expect to take hold of it for some one next year in good earnest, if I am 67 years old. Never too old to do some good.

"MRS. S. J. HEWITT,
"Vermont avenue and Fifty-third street."

J. H. F. Jarchow, that gallant gentleman of the old school and friend of young people, has taken a deep interest in the fortunes of Mansie Kim, the Chinese candidate, and has turned in thousands of points in her favor during the contest. His wife came to headquarters yesterday morning with a pocket full of subscriptions and a bag full of money to help along the chances of Mansie. She cashed in almost $50 in subscriptions, which meant 4000 or more points for this bright young Chinese girl. They have a legion of friends throughout the length and breadth of the San Gabriel Valley, where they have lived for thirty years. Ask Frank Wiggins, he of the Chamber of Commerce. It was these same benevolent old people who offered to take twelve San Francisco refugee children on their ranch immediately after the earthquake. Long live the hospitable and generous Jarchows.

WHAT THEY WRITE.

Appreciative people from all over Southern California have written enthusiastically of the contest and the deep human interest it has excited. A well-known Los Angeles woman writes: "This contest is the best thing I have ever heard of, as a little hard work brings the first step in life—education."

Another writes: "The Times deserves a great deal of credit for giving these young people such an opportunity. May those who win scholarships work as hard during the school year as they have during the contest."

Another says: "I take great interest in the race of the children. It is more practical education than the year of schooling they obtain by their efforts. They learn to win graciously and lose gracefully."

VOTE OF THANKS.

The young folks, one and all, feel deeply grateful to every one who has contributed to their success. Hundreds of envelopes and packages have been received with no identifying signature, hence it would be impossible to personally thank the donors, and it will likewise be impossible for these busy, hustling boys and girls even to write notes of thanks to those who have sent their addresses along wtih the coupons, for schools are now opening and they go from the work of the contest into that of its rewards. Therefore, in the name of these more than forty young people, the scholarship manager, at their express request, herewith tenders a rousing vote of thanks, and cheers, three times three from forty lusty young throats, for the encouragement and help given them by the great, generous-hearted public. Long may they live—every individual of them.

The final score will be printed just as soon as it can be determined. A force of clerks are working all day and far into the night, counting coupons, and the bookkeeper is scoring up the subscription receipts as fast as possible.

NOW FOR THE JUBILEE.

Next Thursday, September 13, all the contestants will be the guests of The Times on the annual jubilee that always marks the close of the scholarship contest. Each contestant may bring one friend as a guest, and the start will be made from The Times office at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning. Special cars will be provided, there will be a band of music, flags and banners, horns and trumpets, and the contestants and their friends will turn themselves loose for a royal good time. After a trip around town the cars will head for Playa del Rey—the Playground of the King—where these royal sons and daughters of the great and golden West will proceed to have the time of their lives. The very waves will cease to roll when those Times cars, placarded with banners, swing round the curve and halt at the hotel, where a banquet will be served. Immediately after this the entire company will proceed to the auditorium, where the award of prizes and scholarships will be made. Then the boys and girls will be literally given the keys of the king's playground. The skating rink will be theirs, the surf will be theirs, the bath-houses will be theirs, the lagoon and its launches—in fact, the whole place and all its attractions will be at their disposal.

Contestants should plan to be at The Times office as near 9:30 as possible, in order that the start may be made promptly at 10 o'clock.

The final score of all the contestants will be announced, if possible, Wednesday morning, and at the latest in Thursday morning's Times.

TEACHERS SHIED HOODOO.

County Examination Yesterday Had no Number Thirteen in Its List of Would-be Instructors.

Superstitions surrounding the number thirteen have caused many queer happenings among simple and ignorant folk, but its latest conquest is the enlightened school teaching body of Los Angeles county.

The final session of the applicants for county certificates was held yesterday at the Normal School, and while the secretary's report gives the number of candidates at forty, there are really but thirty-nine.

Each is known by number, but thirteen is missing.

"I found that so many persons were opposed to being designated as thirteen," said County Superintendent Mark Keppel last night, "that I was compelled to go from one to another trying to persuade some one to take the number. At last it caused so much confusion and trouble that I was compelled to omit it altogether."

There was no objection to twenty-three.

The examinations concluded yesterday have been going on all the week. There are eight men and thirty-one women in the class. The examining officials do not know the name of any one of them, and the papers, which will be worked over tomorrow, are called by number only.

The board hopes to finish its work by Tuesday.

The subjects considered during the week were as follows:

September 3, grammar and composition; reading, methods of teaching.

September 4, spelling and word analysis, U. S. history, geography, school law.

September 5, arithmetic, civics, physiology.

September 6, penmanship, general history; book-keeping, drawing and manual training.

September 7, plane geometry; music, physics.

September 8, English and American literature; algebra.

FATHER SEEKS LOST CHILDREN.

Search Shows Pathetic Story of City's Destruction.

Fears Daughters Perished in San Francisco Fire.

Comes to Los Angeles from Mexico in Sad Quest.

One of the heart-gripping incidents in the aftermath of the San Francisco disaster came to light in this city, yesterday, in the eager attempts of Patrick W. O'Donnell to locate in the orphanages here, his two missing little girls—tots of 2½ and 3½ years. His search failed, and last night he hurried northward to continue the quest for his loved ones.

The story of O'Donnell is, indeed, a strange one, and in its details reaches out from the flower-spangled prairies of Nebraska down to the cactus plains of the State of Coahula, in Old Mexico, and thence onward to Los Angeles and still on to the city that sits in the midst of ruins that may have been the death-bed of those dearest to the searcher.

There is the sad, old story of a wife who left her home; a husband returning from a long journey to find not only his helpmeet gone but that the little jewels who made life worth living also had disappeared. There is the usual chapter of dull despair, and now has come the period of reawakened hope, and O'Donnell believes he will again be united with his beloved.

WEDDING AND HAPPINESS.

About four years ago there was a quiet wedding in one of the pretty prairie towns in Nebraska, and Patrick O'Donnell took his bride away to live in Omaha, where all was new to the girl who had spent most of her life in the country town.

They were happy, and in time there came a little daughter to lisp and prattle and watch papa as he went away to his work—the long and irregular runs on the Union Pacific freight trains. Then there came another little girl, and O'Donnell's happiness was complete. He idolized his children.

But there were incessant calls from the railway company. Good engineers were hard to get, and long hauls were imperative; it was a necessity that the big-hearted engineer must be away from his wife and little ones quite often, and frequently for several days at a time.

Just how it came about, O'Donnell does not say, and one cannot help but respect the man for his reticence; but one day when he came back from a long run O'Donnell found his little home deserted. His wife and two little girls had disappeared; no one knew where they had gone.

LEAVES THE BROKEN HOME.

O'Donnell could not stand it to remain in the same place where he had enjoyed such happiness, and he struck out southward, finally getting down into the State of Coahula, Mexico, where he obtained employment as an engineer on the Mexican Central Railroad.

The life of an American railroad man in many of the little Mexican towns is a dull one. O'Donnell had few Americans with which to associate, and he found time heavy on his hands. He is a great reader, and hearing of an American book store at Torreon he went to that town to lay in a supply of literature.

Casting about for the latest things, O'Donnell's eye fell upon a book showing scenes connected with the San Francisco earthquake and fire, and he bought the volume. The day he got back to his headquarters at Jamulco, he received a letter from a Nebraska friend, saying that it had been learned that O'Donnell's wife had been in San Francisco at the time of the fire.

One of the first views which caught the engineer's attention when he looked through the book of pictures was that of the Volunteers of America orphanage in Los Angeles, and a group of children sent down to this institution immediately after the fire.

COMES TO THIS CITY.

O'Donnel's heart stood still, and then gave a great leap, for in the group of little ones he fancied he had picked out the faces of his little Josephine and Martha. He at once quit his work and started for Los Angeles, arriving here day before yesterday.

He hurried to the orphanage, out on Grand avenue, but was met by bitter disappointment. He had been so sure that his little girls were there that the failure to find them almost drove the man to madness. The matron of the home said the O'Donnell children had never been in her care, or, at least, that none of that name had been received. She admitted, however, that several of the children had been sent back to the northern city.

Yesterday forenoon, simply to make a thorough search, but with little expectation of results, O'Donnell interviewed the officers of the other orphanages in this city, seeking some news of his children. He learned no word of encouragement, and so started for San Francisco last night.

O'Donnell declares that he believes the children he picked out in the picture are his own, and that they have been given assumed names. He fears their return to San Francisco will complicate his search for them, but declares he will never give up until he finds his daughters, or learns that they have perished in that fearful reign of death.

The locomotives, weighing over 150,000 pounds each, have been running over the mile track the past few days. The public will be admitted free today (Sunday) to see the locomotives try out.

The gates will open on Monday at 1 o'clock and until the collision takes place at 3 o'clock Donatelli's band will play.

Tomorrow the Locomotive Collision takes place at Agricultural Park.—[Adv.

WIDOW'S PRICE WAS HIGH.

Mrs. William Zeigler Received Over Two Million Dollars Not to Contest Husband's Will.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—An accounting filed with the surrogate yesterday by the executors of the estate of William Zeigler disclosed for the first time that $2,185,000 was paid by the executors to settle the action instituted by Zeigler' swidow to have the instrument declared invalid.

The action was brought by Mrs. Zeigler a few days after her husband's death, in May of last year. It was alleged that at the time of its execution Zeigler was not competent to make a will.

Zeigler had left practically the whole of his estate to his adopted son, William Zeigler, Jr., after providing that his widow should receive an income of $50,000 a year. The account shows that the estate has increased more than $1,000,000. It originally amounted to $12,382,929.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

HUSBAND SPURNS WIFE AND BABES.

HE AND HOUSEKEEPER ARE TAKEN INTO CUSTODY.

Carpenter Forces His Spouse and Children to Live in Shed While He Holds Carnival With Strange Woman Whom He Installed as Mistress of the Home.

Humane Officer Edward P. F. Dearborn yesterday brought a shameful case of neglect under the notice of the District Attorney, and on a warrant issued by Justice Young, William F. Jack was arrested for neglect and abandonment of his wife and children; and his housekeeper was arrested for threatening Mrs. Jack with a revolver.

Jack is a carpenter in a well-to-do way, and owns the home place at Burke Station on the Gardena branch of the Redondo electric line. Here he lived with his young wife and two children, aged 1 and 3 years, respectively. On July 11 he drove his wife away from the house with violent cursing, and since then the woman and her babies have been living as best they could on the charity of their neighbors.

About the middle of August a strange woman appeared in the Jack house, and ever since she has acted as if she were the wife, in attending to the household. On the night of September 4 Mrs. Jack thought that she would venture to return to her home. She is a fragile little woman of 23 years, and in poor health. Going to the house she claims that the woman who was usurping her place was lying drunk on the floor, but she was not so incapable that she did not know what she was doing. She seized a revolver belonging to Jack, and vowing that she would kill Mrs. Jack, the drove her and her children away from the house.

When the humane officer called at the Jack residence yesterday he found Mrs. Jack and the babies living in a shed on the premises, and with only a heap of old rags for them to sleep upon. The young mother refused to come up town for she was clothed in rags, and was ashamed to visit the city. Dearborn knocked at the door of the house and was admitted by the acting wife of Jack. She carefully locked the door again after he had entered, but refused to give him any satisfaction regarding herself. She would not give her name, conceded that she was not the wife of Jack, but became angry and indignant when asked if she were living with him as his wife. She was ready to tear the humane officer's eyes out for even insinuating she was not a good woman. As for the poor little woman and the babies in the shed outside, she had nothing to say about them.

The woman has been arrested under the name of Jane Doe, and the heartless husband in his proper name. Both will have to answer for the part they have played in turning the mother and children out into the world.

SKIPPED TOO SOON.

WARRANT FOR ROGERSON.

About two years ago F. H. Rogerson was arrested and held to answer in the Superior Court on the charge of forgery. As it appeared that the man had a wife and baby, and there was nothing previously against his character, the case seemed to call for judicial clemency and Rogerson was released on probation.

Judge Smith made the order in the usual way for two years, and some time this month the time of parole will expire. But Rogerson has again tripped over the law, this time by running away and abandoning his wife and child, who have been left destitute at the home on Maple avenue. If Rogerson had waited for another week or two he would have been clear of the old charge, and even if arrested the abandonment would stand as the solitary charge against him. As it is, however, the forgery charge has revived and his original plea of guilty makes him eligible for the State's prison if caught.

Yesterday Under Sheriff Yonkin obtained a bench warrant from Judge James for the arrest of the runaway, and when brought back a long term in prison awaits him.

VENICE LESSEE IS SUED.

C. Menotti, G. Frasinelli and A. Beginani compose a firm of Italians who leased the balcony of the Exposition building at Venice from P. Rossi, who had leased the building. They wanted to carry on a restaurant, and did so until September 3, upon which date they complain that Rossi closed the approaches to the balcony at 6 o'clock in the evening and has kept that early closing time ever since. Inasmuch as they aver that the bulk of their business is done between 6 and 10 o'clock, they have suffered loss, and yesterday began suit against Rossi to recover $1000 as damages.

BRYAN BELIEVES IN MISSIONS.

At Reception in Lincoln He Declares He Is Converted to Aid Foreign Christian.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 8.—Four hundred near neighbors and friends tendered Mr. and Mrs. Bryan a reception at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Normal, north of the city, Bryan's suburban home. Bryan made an address, treating in an interesting way the religions of the old world. He said he returned to the United States a firm advocate of foreign missions.

To the church at Normal Mrs. Bryan contributed two unique collection plates, purchased in the city of Jerusalem.

Bryan was a guest of the management of the Nebraska State Fair. Before the amphitheater he made a short talk, comparing agricultural methods of this and foreign countries.

JESUITS NAME XAVIER WERNZ.

Company of Jesus Chooses New General.

Pope Notified and Expresses His Satisfaction.

Mgr. Aversa Consecrated Archbishop of Sardi.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ROME, Sept. 8.—Francis Xavier Wernz, a German, today was elected general of the society by the congregation of the Company of Jesus, succeeding the late Father Martin, who died last May. Following the election a messenger immediately was dispatched to the Vatican to inform the Pope of the choice, which, to become effective, requires the Papal sanction.

Although the strictest secrecy was observed, it is learned that two ballots were taken before the final choice was made. The announcement that a new general of the order had been chosn was communicated to the outer world by the ringing of a bell which was the signal that the meeting was at an end.

POPE INFORMED.

Formal announcement of the election then was made to the rector of the college, and Father Alfred Maartens, procurator-general of the Jesuits, went to inform Pope Pius of the company's choice. The Pontiff expressed great satisfaction over the selection of Father Wernz.

"He is just the man fitted for the position," said the Pope, when he heard the message brought by Father Maartens. He charged Father Maartens to take Gen. Wernz the Apostolic benediction and also an affectionate letter of greeting, which he wrote to the new general.

Father Wernz's comment upon his election, according to a story which came forth from the council chamber, was:

"God, I am not worthy, but Thy will and that of St. Ignatius be done."

MINOR ELECTIONS LATER.

No time has been fixed for the election of assistants to the general and for other officials, including a secretary and monitor.

Father Francis ..avier Wernz was born at Rothwell, Wurtemberg, on December 2, 1842. At the age of 15 years he entered the society of which, today, he was chosen head. After a long course of preparatory work he took up the study of canon law at Dittan Hall, and in 1883 received an appointment as professor in the Gregorian University. He also has been rector of the university since 1894.

In 1897 Father Wernz began the publication of a series of books dealing with the most profound questions of canon law. Four volumes of this work already have been published. He is a consulting member of the congregation ecclesiastic, extraordinary affairs and index council.

It is predicted that the choice of Father Wernz as general of the Company of Jesus will result in the infusion of new life into the organization. He is recognized in church circles as a progressive man of present-day ideas and extremely energetic.

AVERSA PROMOTED.

Mgr. Aversa, apostolic delegate to Cuba, today was consecrated titular archbishop of Sardi at Castle Gondolfo by Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary of state, assisted by Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American College, and the American students.

The interest in today's function was heightened by the recently announced decision of the anti-clerical societies to make a demonstration today against Cardinal Merry del Val and the policy of the Vatican. The police interfered with the proposed arrangement to the extent of forcing the demonstrators to hold their meeting in private, and the ceremony at Castle Gondolfo was marked by no outward incident.

The Louisiana, designated as the "most modern battleship," which is undergoing her "shaking down" process, has been obliged to steam slowly because oil gets into the boilers and causes trouble. This condition of affairs has afflicted a number of other vessels, and alterations have been made in the machinery to obviate the difficulty.

IN THE WESTERN HILLS.

Time and again the real estate department of The Times has alluded to the extremely attractive residence portion of the city comprised in the hills, lying all the way between Ivanhoe and Sixth street, and west of Figueroa.

Attention is being more and more directed to the hills west and northwest of the city. The inquiry for property all through this vicinity is very much more active than it was a few years ago, and is becoming more and more so every day; and when one remembers that this locality can be reached in ten minutes from the business center of the city by the Belt Line road, it is amazing that it has been so long overlooked.

The above picture shows an eight-room cottage located in the center of three lots, each 54x150 feet, on the southeast corner of Lucas and Arnold streets, giving a frontage of 162 feet on Arnold street. The grounds are terraced and walled and are well elevated above the street and highly improved with shrubbery and flowers. Grand old trees, the growth of years, make the place look restful and inviting.

A private road leads from the street to the grounds; and although in the very heart of the city, but ten minutes from the business center, a privacy like that of a country villa is secured by the elevation above the street and its park-like surroundings.

From every room in the house the view from all points of the compass is of such beauty and variety as to present a charming panorama. To the west and northwest lie the attractions of Hollywood, Cahuenga Pass, Griffith Park and Elysian Park, and to the north and northeast may be seen the Mount Lowe Railway and the trail to Wilson's Peak, with the San Gabriel Range and San Antonio in full view.

During their residence in this place Mr. McFarland and wife have made it practically a new home, having added several new rooms to the main building and two in the rear for domestics, so that the place comprises ten rooms, with barn, laundry, storeroom, etc., all in very best condition. But the location is regarded by many as particularly adapted to a first-class modern structure, and the owners design selling and making their home with their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Bonsall, on West Adams street.

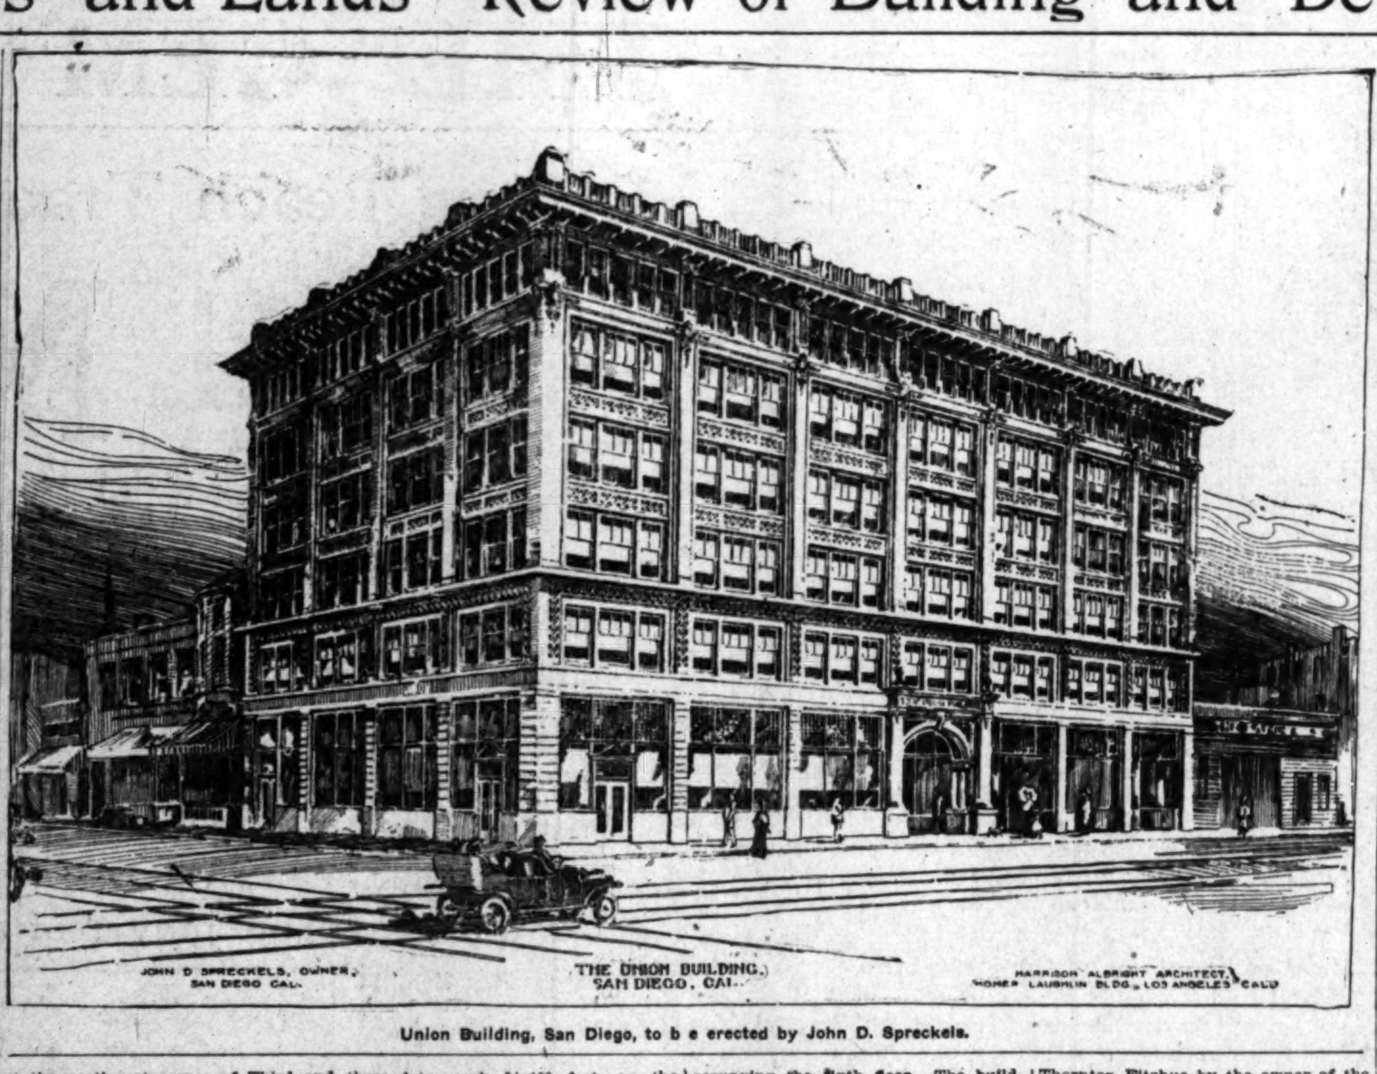
JOHN D. SPRECKELS BUILDING.



JOHN D SPRECKELS, OWNER, SAN DIEGO CAL.
THE UNION BUILDING, SAN DIEGO, CAL.
HARRISON ALBRIGHT ARCHITECT, HOMER LAUGHLIN BLDG., LOS ANGELES CALO

Union Building, San Diego, to b e erected by John D. Spreckels.

Work is about to begin on the John D. Spreckels building, which is to be erected at the corner of D and Third streets, San Diego. The structure will be one of the handsomest and most substantial in the Southwest, and San Diegans are justly proud of this fact. It will cost $165,000. The drawings and specifications have been prepared by Harrison Albright, a Los Angeles architect, and were forwarded to San Diego during the week just closed.

The building will occupy the site of the present Union building, and in addition thereto will cover forty-three feet to the south and forty-two feet to the west, which extra lands were recently acquired for this purpose. This makes the total dimensions 150 feet on D street and eighty-five feet on Third street.

The footings, columns, girders, beams and floors, as well as the roof and walls and external ornamentation will be of reinforced concrete. The building will be six stories high above the basement.

The basement will be arranged to contain the mechanical equipment of the building, as well as the mechanical plant of the two daily newspapers, the Union and the Tribune. The first floor will have a grand lobby and will also have eight stores, all opening on both the streets and the lobby. The second floor will be the headquarters for the various Spreckels companies, and the next three floors will contain in all eighty-one offices, averaging in size 14x19 feet, and all having outside windows. The sixth floor has been designed for and is leased to the Cuyamaca Club.

The building will be finished throughout with mahogany finish birch. Two electric passenger elevators will run from the basement to the sixth floor. There will be a roof garden over the entire building for the use of the club occupying the sixth floor. The building will be lighted throughout with electricity, and will contain a law library valued at $10,000 for the use of tenants.

Plans for New Jail.

Plans have been submitted to the City Trustees of Long Beach for the erection of a new jail. The estimated cost is $7000. Eleven cells are provided, with a woman's ward and quarters for the jailor.

Santa Monica Home Building.

A contract has been awarded by the Alta Santa Monica Company for the erection of a $3375 residence on Fourth street on the Palisades. A home to cost $4175 is being built in Brentwood Park for Mrs. Mary F. Smith.

A Hollywood Hotel.

L. P. Bishop will erect a twenty-five-room family hotel at the corner of Brokaw place and Prospect avenue, Hollywood. The contract has been awarded to A. W. Baird for $15,000, and work is to begin at once.

Builds Fourteen Bungalows.

Herbert L. Cornish has just completed fourteen bungalows in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific shops for rental property. The land on which the bungalows are located was a square piece and a park was made up through the center of it, which is laid out in grass and flowers. This was bought exclusively for rental property and brings in 20 per cent. on the money invested. It is a unique idea, and one [illegible] entirely new to Los Angeles.

Testing Cement.

F. O. Engstrom has contracted with Wade & Wade, East First-street assayers and chemists, to make a series of tests as to the values of various cements on the local markets for the purpose of determining the best material to be used in the ten-story International Bank building, to be erected at Spring and Temple streets. Wade & Wade yesterday completed tests on a 400-barrel lot of cement shipped from England, and have installed a plant especially for this purpose.

St. James Apartments.

As noted in The Times during the past week, another apartment house is to be built in fashionable St. James Park. The new building is to be known as the St. James Apartments, and will be a three-story mission style structure, divided into suites of from two to six rooms. The building is to be erected on plans prepared by Thornton Fitzhue by the owner of the property, W. W. Johnson, whose residence adjoins on the east. This will be the second apartment house in the St. James Park district. A few months ago a non-resident, Mr. Carlisle of Washington, erected apartments on the lot at the corner of Scarff and St. James Park, at which there arose a protest from property owners. The lot between these apartments and the Johnson residence was vacant, and in order to give a more agreeable aspect to the corner involved and shut off the rear view of the Washington man's apartment house, the owner of the vacant lot has had planned the St. James Apartments, which will combine architectural beauty with the latest things in apartment building. The investment will represent an outlay of about $50,000.

"CORN" MURPHY AND TILDEN.

In speaking of his work of introducing corn into Europe, Col. Murphy said:

"Samuel J. Tilden was really the first man to recognize the possibilities of corn as a food, and to him belongs the credit of the discovery. In 1886 I introduced the cereal in Europe, and from then till 1890 I carried on the work at my own expense, when Jeremiah R. Rusk, then Secretary of Agriculture, appointed me special commissioner for Iowa to Europe.

"A market was created for a foodstuff that we were burning up. The work at the present day should interest every Western States, for statistics show that the corn lands doubled in value after the work began.

"As a food it is nutritious and more digestible and cheaper than any other cereal. Our soldiers in the Civil War fought on it, and I feel confident that some day it will wholly replace rice in Japan and China."

"When I first took up the work the importations of American corn into Europe amounted to only 24,000,000 bushels a year, while last year the amount was 213,000,000 bushels."

Col. Murphy was only 18 years of age when he came around the Horn in the old ship South Carolina, the first vessel to arrive at San Francisco after the discovery of gold. On board that ship was a young woman, who later became Mrs. White, mother of ex-Senator Stephen M. White, and who is now a residence of Los Angeles. So far as Col. Murphy can learn, he and Mrs. White are the only surviving members of the passenger list.

FOUNDED TOWN OF AUBURN.

Col. Murphy bought his mining outfit here, and a short time later he and a few other men founded the town of Auburn, selecting Sam Holladay, now of San Francisco, their first alcalde. After three years in the mines, Col. Murphy left with a small fortune.

Col. Murphy, who was born in Stockport, England, in 1832, has had a long military career. He is the youngest surviving veteran of the Mexican War. He enlisted when he was only 15 years of age. He fought for the Union in the War of the Rebellion and was awarded the Congressional medal of honor for bravery shown during the famous battle of Bull Run. He was a prisoner in Libby prison, and at the close of the war was breveted a colonel.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

MONTH in and month out hammers have been falling in monotonous noncessation, saws have been droning, great girders have swung into place, tons of cement have climbed skyward—negroback and via the elevators—and so the huge Auditorium, fashioned much as a great castle of the olden time, has risen out of a vast square hole to look out on every side upon the busy city that lies below.

The Auditorium is the finest theater on the Pacific Coast, or at least, it promises to be such in its present near-finished state.

Part and parcel with the Auditorumn has risen its manager, Sparks M. Berry. When the Auditorium company first divorced itself from that staid yet wonderfully progressive religious organization known as Temple Church, Berry was the hired man who looked after Hazard's Pavilion, then used as quarters for worship or amusement. Mr. Berry saw that the janitor kept it clean for prayer-time, and watched the door when there was a concert or a good play.

Whenever he spoke about "my show" or "my house" other managers snickered. Berry had been brought up in the business right in Los Angeles, and it came hard to see him rising out of the little boy state.

However, Mr. Berry stayed with the Auditorium, and when Hazard's Pavilion came tumbling down in a great clatter of dirty old boards and rusty nails, he immediately set to work to secure future attractions.

Then arose the war over the Independents, exported to the tiresome stage, and not yet settled.

But be that as it may, Berry has abandoned the dramatic field temporarily, to become the local impersario of grand opera.

It is years since Los Angeles was favored with a grand opera season of any extended length.

Part of the qualities of managerial success are without doubt an advance appreciation of the public's future want. Berry believed he saw a coming demand for the greater music, and accordingly, his midsummer vacation found him both resting and working, in the heart of Mexico.

He got upon the Lombardi track, and went to hear the company at matinée and night performances until his ears had tested all their singers and had exhausted their repertoire.

He says he has a great company. All managers would say this, under certain conditions, but a manager would scarcely predict public worship for his crew at an opening of the season if there were not some merit. Once upon a time, Berry studied music; he is a better judge of it than some New York impresarios who deem themselves wiser than the old masters.

He throws especial emotions about Adaberto, his dramatic soprano. It is policy to deduct 45 per cent. from Mr. Berry's unadulterated enthusiasm. "Better than Nordica in her prime!" he whispered in a fevered tone the other day. If she is half as good, there is much to be thankful for.

He also avows a baritone who is the equal of Scotti, a second Calvé in Campofiori the contralto, and a sort of second Bonci in D'Ottavi, his big tenor. Abating Mr. Berry's legitimate business enlargements, some really good singing is yet to be anticipated.

Notwithstanding the absence of the Independents from the Coast this year, Mr. Berry is not worried. With cheerful energy he is covering every bit of his field in other directions, and hopes to make up the lack in other ways.

He has engaged grand opera for an indefinite period.

"—— Run'em as long as they'll stand it, and then up the Coast," he said.

He has options on a new operatic organization which will come to America in March, and is possibly hiding a dramatic surprise or two in his bookings for mid-winter.

He is planning a May festival for the spring, and hopes to bring out a big orchestra—perhaps with world-famous soloists—for a week of oratorio and dramatic work.

He has won over the Apollo Club, and has been fortunate enough to secure as a leader that excellent musician Henry Schoenfeld.

For the theatrical part, he is willing to wait. He has had patience and perseverance, and if he continues to have them, he will get the players after awhile.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Interest centers today in the Burbank's revival of "Trilby," with Mary Van Buren in the title-part.

The well-remembered original presentation, with Miss Van Buren as Trilby and Wilton Lackaye, as Svengali, was a performance which set a high note of artistic achievement.

Today's cast is excellently taken, and includes Harry Glazier as Svengali, Harry Mestayer as Little Billie, Henry Stockbridge as Zu Zu, Mace Greenleaf as Taffy, William Bernard as the Laird, John Burton as Rev. Bagot, and Mrs. Duffield as Mme. Vinard. These are almost ideally selected for the roles, as any one familiar with the company may see.

This will be Miss Van Buren's last week. She will be succeeded by Miss Laura Wall, who will make her first appearance in "Janice Meredith."

The three new leading people of the Belasco stock company will make their bow tomorrow night, in the Belasco's revival of its recent success, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Lewis S. Stone, the new leading man will succeed Bosworth, and will have the role of Brandon. Charles Balsar, the new heavy man, and Betty Jonson, ingenue will also be in the cast.

Miss Amelia Gardner will have the role of Mary Tudor, in which Miss Lawton won so much favor. It is equally adapted to Miss Gardner's capabilities.

SPARKS M. BERRY, manager of the big Auditorium, which, as the finest theater in the West, will soon be an important factor in the local dramatic field.

The Orpheum's new bill will be headed by Margaret Wycherly and her company, presenting the one-act play, "In Self Defence." Of the nine characters, six are played by Miss Wycherly, and she makes seven complete changes of costume. The parts are widely diverse.

Mlle. Therese Renz is a noted horsewoman, who will bring two beautiful white Arabian stallions to appear with her in tableaux. Mayme Remington will appear, with the "Black Buster Brownies." The Oliveire trio of musical virtuosi will be heard for the first time here.

Several of the best acts remain from last week's bill, notably May Norma with her American girl types, May Boley and the Polly girls, Arthur Deming, and Tarley, the facial mimic.

Some years ago Nat Goodwin had a play written caricaturing a political campaign, with himself as the central figure. The play was called "The Nominee," and will be produced at the Hotchkiss Theater for the week commencing Monday afternoon.

George Howard will essay Goodwin's role, Jack Medford, while Miss Dorset will be seen as the wife. Guy Hitner will play Leopold Bunyon, and E. J. Murphy will be seen as Col. Murray.

"The Nominee" is purely a light comedy, with many amusing situations.

"The Cattle King," a dramatic representation of cowboy life in New Mexico, will be the Ulrich stock company's offering for the week commencing with today's matinée.

There is a marriage on horseback, a wild poker game, a rescue from a prairie fire, and other thrilling incidents for the delectation of the melodrama-loving audience.

"The Inside Track" will be the offering of the Ethel Tucker stock company this afternoon.

It is a comedy drama in which several sensational effects are intermingled.

Elsewhere.

"The Judge and the Jury" has been coldly received by the New York critics.

Explosivists of the Alan Dale type called the verdict "murder"—the quotation is from Dale—while the consensus of opinion seems to be that Morosco's play is a good melodrama in the wrong place—just as melodrama from the Grand would be roasted to death if transferred to the Mason Operahouse here in Los Angeles.

Small mention was given the actors, some praise being accorded Ginn and Llewellyn, while matinée-idol William received only a scant line here and there.

Heinrich Conried has succeeded in monopolizing Puccini's "La Tosca" and "La Boheme," as far as America is concerned.

His move is, of course, to checkmate his opponent, Hammerstein, who will be a powerful and perhaps dangerous antagonist of the once unrivaled Metropolitan.

However, having secured the exclusive right on these two, he might be able to get it for the new "Madame Butterfly," which both he and Henry W. Savage are preparing to do in the early winter.

"Madame Butterfly"—Savage's — is scheduled for the Mason Operahouse. If Conried carried his monopolizing war into Italy, both literally and metaphorically, he may stop the English production, although such a procedure would savor of dog-in-the-manger tactics.

Will the Lambardi company, playing at the auditorium, have to pay royalty to Conried for the local use of "Tosca" and "Boheme?"

Wilton Lackaye's "Law and the Man," dramatized from Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," was first put into shape fully eight years ago. Many managers read it, all said they liked it, and none produced it. At length, at a banquet of the American Dramatists' Club, Lackaye said, responding to a question as to when he expected to get the drama on the stage: "Just as soon as I can find a manager who can pronounce the name of the original story."

Not long ago William A. Brady, Lackaye's manager in "The Pit," announced that he would put on "Les Miserables" for his star after the run of the brilliant Frank Norris novel. A friend said to Brady the other day:

"I see you're going to do Lackaye's piece. How about the title—can you pronounce it?"

"I don't try," answered Brady. "Whenever the subject comes up I always refer to it as 'that great play of Will's,' and he seems to know just what I mean.

George Edwardes, in London, is furious over the methods of the American "Theater Trust." In an interview in the London Chronicle, Edwardes says:

"The Americans offer my artists double and treble the salaries I am paying them. They give them an engagement which may be long or short, though it is generally short, because their places must be filled by others who have been enticed away from other companies. If this were fair competition I should not complain, but it is not honest fighting.

"The American theatrical trust wants to capture the English stage, and with the huge capital at its command it is able to throw about its dollars in reckless fashion. Last year its speculations in London involved it, I am informed on good authority, in a loss of $330,000.

"But you must not think I am downhearted. This money has benefited an actor whose fame has been made under my management, and I say good luck to him. I am determined, however, that the American trust shall not bill George Edwardes, and though I shall not fight them in the mean, underhand style that has hitherto characterized their efforts, I am going to prove a nasty opponent.

"They have awakened me, and you may see some fun before very long. Few people realize what would happen if the trust held complete hold of the London stage."

"Pocahontas, the Virginia Nonpareil," an English-American drama of the seventeenth century, has been written and copyrighted by George Frederic Viett of Norfolk, the well-known poet, editor and essayist, and will be presented in that city during the Jamestown Exposition, says the Washington Post. Prior to its presentation, probably at one of the local theaters, the drama will be taken for a road tour.

A local production by a local playwright, and dealing with scenes especially local, it is pointed out that it is particularly fitting that the play should have its premier in Norfolk, and it is further pointed out that "Pocahontas" is particularly appropriate for the Jamestown Exposition. The entire history of the Virginia colony, from 1607 to 1621, is set forth by the playwright in a masterly manner.

The playwright has attempted a very daring venture, that of introducing to the stage the character of William Shakespeare, who is seen in the first act just before the colonists embark from Blackwall, England, on the voyage which resulted in the establishment of the first English-speaking colony on American soil. Those competent to judge assert this feature a brilliant success.

Shakespeare has been invited to bid farewell to the little band of adventurers sailing from England. Those who have read the address of the Bard of Avon stamp it as transcendent, and its delivery by a good actor is calculated to hold any audience spellbound.

The quarrel between Radcliffe, one of the conspirators, and Capt. John Smith, in the first act, is said to be a masterpiece of construction. The trial of Kendall for treason, in the second act, and his sentence of death, is said by experts to be one the finest scenes to be seen on any stage, and it is declared to be far superior to the closing scene in the last act of "Nathan Hale," written by Clyde Fitch.

The saving of the life of Capt. Smith by Pocahontas, in the third act, is another thrilling piece of stage business, and the scene at the court of King James, in the next act, when Pocahontas is presented to His Majesty, would, it is said, do credit to the great Shakespeare himself.

Another beautiful and interesting scene is the crowning of Powhatan, the wily chief declining to kneel, and who dramatically declares that he "kneels to no man, not even to a king."

The play ends with the introduction of the English girls, who are made the wives of the colonists, and the playwright has arranged a magnificent ballet typifying scenes of the seventeenth and twentieth centuries.

Mr. Viett has three distinct features of his play, being the introduction of Shakespeare, the first trial by jury on American soil, and the first marriage of white persons on this continent, the last named being the ceremony whereby John Laydon and Anne Burrus are made one in the rudely-constructed church at Jamestown. There is considerable refined comedy interspersed throughout the play, relieving the intensely dramatic situations.

The scenery for the play will be specially painted, the artist visiting Jamestown to secure copies of the original scenes. The costumes, which will be gorgeous, will fit the period of the play, which is historically correct in every essential detail.

The book of the play will be sold during the exposition, being a souvenir that thousands will no doubt purchase. In addition to this, biograph pictures of the drama will be taken for exhibition.

It will require a cast of fifteen and a company anywhere from 40 to 150 for the group parts. An effort will be made to introduce real Indians for the group parts and for the war dances in the presentation of "Pocahontas," and for this purpose the Secretary of the Interior will be appealed to in order to secure the red men from a government reservation. It will cost between $10,000 and $20,000 to stage the production.

Of General Interest.

Cecilia Loftus will soon be seen in London in a new comedy role.

Eleanor Robson will appear in Israel Zangwill's "Nurse Marjorie" in October.

Robert T. Haines will be in the support of Grace George, in "The Richest Girl."

Ellis Jeffreys will be seen in "The Dear Unfair Sex" at the Liberty Theater, New York, September 10.

It is announced that Virginia Harned will take Mrs. Carter's roles under Mr. Belasco's management.

It develops that Clyde Fitch is the adapter of the Paris success, "Preplepratte," which Cyril Maude will produce in London for the first time in English.

Jeffreys Lewis will play Mme. Themerdier in "The Law and the Man," Wilton Lackaye's dramatization of "Les Miserables."

Odette Tyler has been engaged by the Shuberts for the leading role in "A Woman's Route," which will soon begin the season in Chicago.

It is announced that De Wolfe Hopper, following his coming season in "Happyland," will go in for straight farce instead of comic opera.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald DeKoven gave a cotillon dinner and supper at Newport, R. I., on August 24, in honor of their daughter, Ethel, who made her social début on this occasion.

The character of John Burkett Ryder, in "The Lion and the Mouse," has been converted into a British financier, and the revised play is to be produced in the English provinces.

Edna May will next year appear in the title role of "Nelly Neil," a musical piece, written by C. M. S. McLellan, and composed by Ivan Caryll. It will be produced in October.

When Ellen Terry makes her farewell tour of the United States she will appear as Lady Cecily Waynflete in Bernard Shaw's "Captain Brassbound's Conversion."

Capt. Robert Marshall, author of "The Second in Command," "The Duke of Killicrankie," and other successes, is completing a new comedy for Charles Frohman.

There will be a rival to "Dolly Dollars" in "Dolly Waters," which is Francis Wilson's new comic opera which Klaw & Erlanger intend to produce early in October. The lyrics and music are by Benjamin H. Burt.

Marie Dressler sailed for England on Friday last, on the Philadelphia, and will probably rejoin Joe Weber's company at the Grand Operahouse, Chicago, shortly after her arrival on this side.

Mme. Helena Modjeska, with her husband, Count Bozenta, started for New York on August 26. Mme. Modjeska has sold "Arden," her mountain home near Los Angeles, to the Townsend Dayman Company of Long Beach, Cal, to be used as a resort.

Julian Mitchell will join the Shuberts as general stage manager as soon as he completes the staging of "A Parisian Model," which goes on at the Broadway Theater in October, with Anna Held as the star.

Miss Julia Deane, who was the original Nance Olden in "In the Bishop's Carriage," and was also the star of "The Little Gray Lady" last season, is now playing the leading feminine role of Rachel Hardy in support of Edwin Arden in "Told in the Hills."

If the plans go through, Minnie Palmer will return to the United States this season to appear in vaudeville, in a sketch called "My Little Sweetheart," which is a one-act version of the play in which she piled up a big fortune several years ago. She was last seen in New York in the Proctor houses in an operetta.

Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, who have been presenting a repertoire of their former successful plays in St. Louis, have returned to New York to begin rehearsals in "The Daughters of Men," Charles Klein's latest play, which Henry B. Harris will present in Boston September 24.

Lily Langtry offended an audience at Folkstone, England, on August 22 by presenting a twenty-minute sketch instead of the long play that had been expected. A crowd followed her from the theater and hissed her vigorously. It was reported later in the week that she had suffered a loss of voice due to the nervous shock.

Orrin Johnson and Grace Filkins, who have been at different times this season reported engaged for several productions, are contracted by Henry B. Harris to appear in Charles Klein's latest play "The Daughters of Men," which will be produced in Boston September 24. Rehearsals for the new play were begun last Monday under the direction of Mr. Harris.

News of the Musical World.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Among the musical visitors here at present is Miss Blanche Ruby, former leading soprano of the French opera in Nantes, and until recently principal with Henry W. Savage's English grand opera company, with which organization she sang Gilda in "Rigoletto."

Miss Ruby's voice is a flexible colorotura soprano of excellent quality. In addition to her work in France, she was also principal for a season at the royal opera at The Hague.

Miss Ruby will probably spend the winter here, and may make Los Angeles her home.

Sessions Concerts.

A. W. Sessions will take up his regular vesper organ recitals at Christ Church in October, and has prepared many novelties for the opening season.

Among his soloists will be Mrs. Catherine Collette, Miss Maude Reese-Davies, Miss Fireada Koss, Miss Maude Elizabeth Richards, Mme. Menasco, Natorp Bluemenfeld, John Douglas Walker, William James Chick and Julius Bierlich.

Lyric Club.

This week the Women's Lyric Club, under the direction of J. B. Poulin, will begin its rehearsals. These will be held every Tuesday, from 2 to 4 o'clock in Symphony Hall. The membership has increased to over eighty voices, and good results are expected from next year's work.

Moore's Band.

Director Moore will offer some good music at Eastlake this afternoon, including Weber's "Invitation to the Waltz," the wedding march from Wessler's "Piper of Hamelin," a selection from "Maritana," and the minuet and gavotte from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci."

Music at Long Beach.

The Municipal Band of Long Beach, under the direction of Marco Vessella, will give two programmes at the seaside auditorium today. The afternoon list includes the overture to "Orpheus," the "Inflammatus" from the "Stabat Mater," a selection from "Il Trovatore," and Constantini's "Chorus of Italian Peasants."

In the evening the band will give Schumann's "Traumerei," Suppe's "Poet and Peasant" overture and the grand selection from "Carmen."

View of "Salome."

"Salomé," Richard Strauss's melodically splendid but morally rotten opera, has been productive of more dissenting opinions than any modern work of the musical stage since Wagner.

Karleton Hackett writes to the Chicago Evening Post:

"'Salomé,' by Richard Strauss. Overwhelming, repulsive; fascinating, disgusting; spiritual, bestial; noble, revolting. It is the art, does it mark the next step, or is it some horrible excrescence to be cut away, the nightmare of some diseased mind made visible on the stage? Who knows? This much at least is sure; for an hour and a half you are held as in a trance by a series of pictures so vivid, so compelling, and borne on by music of such irresistible force that you can no more move than the bird of fable gazing in the rattlesnake's eye.

Is it beautiful? One can scarcely say that; there is too much that is truly horrible. Then is it unbeautiful, something to be swept from the mind as evil and inhuman? Still less; for there are in it moments of the most exquisite beauty, of the noblest feeling to which music has ever given utterance. What is it, then?

"It is a new thing, the like of which till now no man has ever heard? It has set one part of Germany aflame: here in Leipzig, in the middle of the summer 'off season,' the entire house was sold out days in advance.

"The audience sat through its one act without a movement, without a sound, and when the curtain fell could hardly be persuaded to leave the theater, but called the artists again and yet again before the curtain. Yet the first authority here says that it is not music; it merely produces hysteria. In some places it has even been prohibited by the authorities as prejudicial to public morals.

"One of the oldest players of the orchestra, who has counted more than forty years of service with the opera, says that it grows more diabolical each time he plays it. Every one who hears must register his verdict pro or con. There is a power in it which will permit no man to sit cool and unmoved, and his expression will be extravagant; it is either the greatest achievement of opera, the apex of the pinnacle, or it is anathema.

"Here at least is one great law of art brought to final perfection; there is not one dull moment on the stage; there is not one word nor note not vital; there is nothing that could be 'cut' without losing the thread of the story. In one act, which lasts just one hour and thirty-five minutes, you cannot take your eyes off the stage without missing something essential; nor have you the slightest wish so to do. It seems, in fact, incredible when the curtain falls that so long a time can have elapsed since it rose; but your watch says it is so, and you can but believe.

"There is, too, a triumph of artistic balance achieved by the conductor, Hagel, for in an operahouse not half the size of our Auditorium, with an orchestra of a hundred and eight men—more than ever have played in our theater with the opera—giving this enormously rich score, there was never a time when the voices were lost in the whirlwind of the orchestral tone. Think of this and marvel.

"Even the voice of St. John the Baptist, singing underneath the stage, with all the brasses in the orchestra called for in the score, was not merely audible, it was convincing. If such be possible here with a small theater and an enlarged orchestra, why not with us in the large theater with a reduced orchestra?

"'Salomé' depends absolutely on Salomé. She is the pivot. If she lacks in temperament the part is unimaginable, yet she must walk on the extreme verge of the precipice, where one false step, one failure of her artistic sense to tell her where lies the limit of the stage, and the scene would be absolutely revolting or a farce.

"Leipzig was fortunate in having among the members of her operahouse just the woman, Leipzig born, raised and trained. She has done in this part the almost unbelievable, for she makes a moral and physical degenerate so sincere, so possible, that we cannot but be attracted to her and we almost forgive her for what she is. Almost; not quite. For the mind rebels against this form of art. We have had it in literature and on the dramatic stage, is it now in the operahouse we must grope in the foulest depths of the cloaca maxima of the human heart?

"If it be so, we must take our art and our world as we find them and make the best of it. So Frau Doenges has done the well-nigh undoable, and her performance marks the entrance of a new star in the musical firmament. She has kindly consented to talk with me about her work, which should be interesting. It is understood that Herr Conried is in treaty with her for a number of performances of 'Salomé' in America next season, so that these notes may be but a foretaste of the reality to come.

"The shock is all Salomé. From John the Baptist, granting that he should be brought on the stage, there is nothing but beauty of the utmost majesty; the music envelops him as with beams of celestial radiance; nothing in all music is more noble.

"'Salomé' is the latest work of Richard Strauss. Is art to be hysteria? Are we to leave the opera dazed, horrified and fascinated? Is it to be the beauty of the siren that lures us to the rocks and quicksands where all perish in universal destruction? Then Strauss is its prophet."

La Scala.

The Teatro della Scala, in Milan, better known as La Scala, which has played such a role in the musical history of Europe, is the largest in Italy after the San Carlo at Naples. On the destruction, by fire, of the Royal Ducal Theater, in 1776, the new theater was built by order and decree of the Empress Maria Theresa, and through the efforts of the box holders of the former theater.

The site chosen was that of an ancient church, "Santa Maria della Scala," the cost of 1,000,000 Italian lire being sustained by said box holders, representing the aristocracy of Milan. The architect was G. Piermarini. The inauguration took place August 3, 1778. In 1807 the theater was renovated, the painters Giovanni Perego, Gaetano Viciari Monticello, Pasquale Canna, Hayez and others distinguishing themselves in its decoration. On May 4, 1862, was inaugurated the new curtain, representing the origin of the theater, a superb masterpiece by Giuseppe Bertini and Raffello Casnedi, and in the season of 1883-84 electric light was installed in the theater.

The Teatro della Scala has five rows of boxes, 194 in all, besides the large royal box in the center and one gallery. The first three tiers of boxes are hereditary and private property of families who own them, and are fitted up according to individual taste, provided the general tone of the house, dull red and gold, is observed. Each box has a little anti-camera, or salon, before it, the electric bells communicate with a first-class restaurant close by, so that refreshments can be had.

In the "foyer," capable of seating six hundred people, in a monument dedicated to Malibran, the busts of Bellini and Ponchielli in bronze, the portraits of Maestro Faccio and the Duke Guido Visconti di Madrone, whose family have always been great patrons of La Scala, in fact are bound by will to bequeath a legacy thereto.

An important institution of La Scala is the ballet school founded in 1813, which too, has its traditions for excellence. The pupils entering about the age of twelve years must undergo a course of study of five years until they are presented as "ballerine di range" or solo dancers. Ballets after the opera often last an hour or an hour and a half, and are gorgeous in the extreme. The mounting and care bestowed on the stage setting of La Scala are well known and as yet unsurpassed; the orchestra can justly boast of being the most perfect in the world, but the real glory and traditions of La Scala lie in the singers that have sung on that stage and made it a temple of art.—[Musical America.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Gustave Dore.

How rare the audacious spirit that invokes
These shadowy grandeurs, and can bid appear
All horror's genii, awful and austere,
And paint infinity with a few strong strokes!
That steals where mortal suffering writhes and chokes,
Where sorrow has wept her last hot heavy tear,
And where, while moans of misery smite the ear,
Some great calamitous battle roars and smokes!
Now are we fain to applaud him,—and anon
To shrink from power of such uncanny spell;
We tire of death's chill touch and visage wan;
Of agony; of curruption's rank sick smell;
Of this strange soul that seems to have gazed upon
Terrific things in the red heart of hell!

A Maker of Monotypes.

The young Los Angeles artist Lillian Drain has made so many of these little one-impression pictures, and we have seen them with restful pleasure here and there so often in recent exhibitions, that we have come to associate her name with monotypes exactly as the mention of other artists brings to mind posters, or pastels, or etchings.

As a matter of fact, however, Miss Drain is working in many mediums, for she is endowed with a healthily vivid imagination and a fair share of intelligent curiosity, both of which impel her to explore the various avenues of artistic expression. In this way, by persistent search, she has found much that has interested her, and has clung to that which has seemed good to her.

The monotype, indeed, may appear to many but a mere by-path in art, not a broad avenue leading to Olympus—but these, I am fain to declare, have not lifted their eyes to the horizon line, and so have missed the widening vistas beyond. "Nuns fret not at their convent's narrow cell," neither does the true monotypist grow impatient of the few square inches at his disposal. He is too intent upon his business for discontent—and his whole soul is absorbed in the making of a microcosm which shall mirror all there is of beauty.

The monotype, then, may be as perfect a work of art as the frieze of the Parthenon, and may give an artistic pleasure as pure and fine as that evoked by the Last Judgment. This is not saying, of course, that the stupendous Last Judgment and a tiny monotype picturing a country road will affect us in the same way. One does not read "Paradise Lost" and a lyric by Robert Herrick with exactly the same emotion. Yet some of Herrick's verses are as beautiful, in their way, as Milton's epic.

Monotypes have the lyric quality of art, not the epic. They sing a little song to us, grave or gay, sad or sunny, according to the artist's mood, in harmonies of line and color. The best monotypes have all the elusive charm of a faultless collocation of words in a sonnet or a quatrain. We are compelled, by some haunting line, to return to them again and again, as we are compelled to open many times a volume by Herrick or Aldrich.

A poet needs, to write a poem, only a bottle of ink, a pen, and a sheet of paper. The painter needs, to make a monotype, only a pane of glass or a sheet of zinc, a tube of black paint, a humble clothes-wringer, and a sheet of paper. Yet such simple elements, when fired by feeling and imagination, may be fused into a miniature masterpiece of art—a perfect poem and a perfect picture.

Only three Los Angeles painters, so far as I know, have given much attention to the monotype. These are Lillian Drain, the subject of this appreciation; Carl Oscar Borg, whose work in this direction was mentioned some months ago; and the late William Koch, whose exquisite and refined bits in monotype were perhaps the highest note he ever reached in art. Mr. Koch has painted a few notable landscape pictures, large and ambitious canvases, but the bulky portfolio of small monotype impressions that he left with his son contains, I think, the work by which he will be longest and best remembered.

LILLIAN DRAIN.

The monotype makes for individuality with more unswerving fidelity than perhaps any other medium of artistic expression. Mr. Borg's prints do not remind you in the least of Mr. Koch's, and Miss Drain's are as different as may be from those of either. Hers are direct, simple, forcible, impressionistic to the last degree, yet gaining, perhaps, through this singleness of aim. They have not the refined elaboration of Mr. Koch's work, nor do they show the spirited action of Mr. Borg's. They are often sombre, sometimes merely sad, but they are almost never gay. Many of them, done in two or three colors, are very beautiful in tone, with the quality of some rare old Japanese print.

The composition in these small pictures by Miss Drain is always well considered. She makes use, more often than not, of the very simplest pictorial elements—a clump of trees on a rising hill, a wandering country road, a black pool of water—but with these she says much of out-door nature and even more of the mystery of the human heart. Her monotypes are a mood—sometimes; indeed, almost a passion.

Miss Drain, who loves this branch of art and is always experimenting in it, has tried a number of different papers, for tone and for texture, from Japanese rice-paper to common white blotting paper. She has used box covers and fly-leaves from old books and has found both useful in their place. The true monotypist, be it said, disdains no scrap of paper, however, humble its use or origin, if only it shows a proper affinity for paint.

Although Miss Drain has made over a hundred monotypes, it must be remembered that this is only a small part of her output as an artist. She paints in both oils and water colors, and with marked individuality and talent. Her brain is teeming with ideas, and she is even now working on several large canvases in oils, which, with time and opportunity, will soon reach their completion. These pictures, nude female figures posed outdoors, are at once finely imaginative and highly decorative. One, water sprites disporting themselves among great, golden-hearted pond lilies, is especially interesting.

Lillian Drain has lived among us since she was seven years old, leaving Los Angeles only for the two years that she spent in study at the Art Students' League of New York. Her instructors, while there, were Kenyon Cox, life class; Walter Appleton Clarke, illustration; and George Gray Barnard, modeling. She also studied for some time under Arthur Dow, at Ipswich, Mass. From which it will be seen that she has had most excellent training in her chosen work.

Art Losses in San Francisco.

"During the first days of the dreadful aftermath of San Francisco's holocaust," writes Howard Talbot in Brush and Pencil, "the report was current that every art treasure she possessed was destroyed. While this is not true, the loss is distressingly large. The first comforting word given out on this score told of the preservation of Millet's 'Man With the Hoe,' the property of Mrs. William H. Crocker. Its rescue was extraordinary. The Crockers were in New York, en route to Europe, their San Francisco home having been left in charge of a caretaker. Immediately after the earthquake, and when those who could read into the future misery saw the fire sweeping over the city, Bruce Porter went to the Crocker residence, but could not get in. As martial law was already in force, he could not break into the house without being regarded as a looter, the penalty for which was a shot from the guards. Later in the day, Wellington Gregg, Mr. Crocker's representative, arranged to get into the house and took the famous picture to a place of safety. Mr. Gregg also saved a Corot and a Rousseau—'In the Forest'—that hung in the Crocker mansion. A large number of fine paintings, but not such notable ones as the Corot and the Millet, were burned. 'The Man With the Hoe' is valued at $125,000.

"Every picture in the San Francisco collection of the late C. P. Huntington was burned. Some of the famous paintings were removed before Mr. Huntington's death to his New York house, but there remained at the San Francisco gallery a famous collection of portraits of the eighteenth century. There was among them a Gainsborough, a Reynolds and a Romney. There was a Corot in the collection, also a Diaz."

The students of the University of California cut all the valuable pictures at the Mark Hopkins out of their frame, and put them into the basement of the Flood mansion, across the street, which was thought to be fireproof. But the Flood house burned the next day, and all these pictures were lost. Among them were "Sheep Returning at Night," by Jacque; "Henry Nat Fontainebleau," by Marchetti; "On the Stour—East Kent," by Thomas Sidney Cooper, R. A.; "Landscape With Sheep," by Anton Mauve; "Storm Off the Coast," by De Hass; "Evening: Gypsies in the Pyrenees," by Adrien Moreau; a Rousseau, a Van Marcke, and a Corot. A canvas by David, too large to be taken out so hurriedly, was burned in the institute.

"Among the best-known pictures saved in the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art," Mr. Talbot adds, "were 'The Captives,' by Constant; 'Love and Spring,' by Aubert; 'First Earrings,' by Jacobides; 'Call to Prayer,' by Jerome; 'Marius at the Ruins of Carthage,' by Banderlynn; 'Escape of Smugglers,' by Hamilton; 'Summer Afternoon,' by Rix; 'Passing the Forts at New Orleans,' by De Haas; 'Corner of the Studio,' by Jules Pages; two animal pictures by Matilda Lotz; 'Discovery of San Francisco Bay,' by Arthur Matthews, and 'Still Life,' by Emil Carlson. Toby Rosenthal's 'Constance de Beverley,' belonging to the Irving M. Scott estate, was saved. 'The Loron Crier,' by Joseph Raphael, a Paris Salon picture last year, bought by Raphael Neil and presented to Golden Gate Park Memorial Museum, was taken to a place of safety. It had been on exhibition at the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art. Nearly all the Bull collection, which contains a Franke, a Dupre, a Rousseau and a Kowalsky, is safe. The Homer Winslow, the Segantini and the Diaz, in the Jacob Stern collection, one of the finest in San Francisco, were saved.

"Vickery, Atkins and Torrey lost practically all of their stock. They saved an Inness that had been received on consignment, four paintings by William Keith, just purchased by Patrick Calhoun; also some valuable jade. William Morris, another prominent dealer, lost a Rosa Bonheur, a Garland and a large number of valuable foreign paintings. Every dealer was burned out."

ART NOTES.

C. P. Neilson, who has been teaching and lecturing in the University of California during the summer, writes me that he will be back in Los Angeles within the week, when he will assume charge of his water color class in the Art Students' League. Mr. Neilson, it will be remembered, is one of the little band of artists that came to settle in Los Angeles directly after the earthquake.

Hernando Villa has made the cover design for the West Coast Magazine, the new monthly literary journal under the editorship of John S. McGroarty. This cover is one of Mr. Villa's best efforts, though he still errs, perhaps, in the direction of trying to say too much in his designs. Yet it is very well drawn, and the central female figure, which symbolizes the Spirit of California, has both grace and dignity. Mr. Villa, who is endowed with a fine decorative instinct, should make a steady aim at simplicity.

The Painters' Club held its usual monthly meeting on the evening of September 2, when plans for its first annual exhibition were made. This show will be held during the first two weeks of November, in the Blanchard gallery. Each member of the club will be allowed to hang five pictures. Hobart Bosworth and Randal W. Borough were enrolled as new members.

Emily Rutherford is showing a few artistic frames of her own carving at the Little Corner of Local Art, on East Avenue 41. Among the painters who have pictures there at present are Granville Redmond, Norman St. Clair and Joseph Greenbaum.

Teresa Cloud left for Paris last Wednesday, to be gone for about a year. She will study in the Julian School, though she has not yet decided under what master.

J. W. Nicoll has just started on a sketching trip to Montecito, to be gone for a month or six weeks.

Edgar Keller and his wife will leave for Laguna in about a week, and will camp out there for an indefinite period. Mr. Keller will sketch and Mrs. Keller will write. Mr. Keller intends to hold an exhibition of his work later in the season.

MILLIONAIRES BUILD OPERAHOUSE FOR THE NEW "FOUR HUNDRED."

Senator Clark and Charles M. Schwab, Resenting Snubs Received at Metropolitan, Put Vast Wealth Behind New Musical Enterprise.

A BATTLE of millions for the right to occupy the seats of the social elect at the opera is soon to be begun in New York. It promises to be the greatest social war ever waged in America.

In fact it has begun, for the first stages of the skirmish have been fought, and Senator W. A. Clark, of Montana, and Charles M. Schwab, the great steel magnate, have as a preliminary step built their own operahouse in order to run in opposition to the régime that has monopolized the most sought for places at the Metropolitan Operahouse.

This contest is going to array against the old Four Hundred the power of the newly rich who have invaded New York, inspired by the desire for complete social recognition, but who are still too near the source of their money to be admitted into the select circle of the old Knickerbocker families.

It is a war of millions, a war of singers, a war of impresarios and a war of women's wits.

Its outcome may change the entire complexion of social life in the metropolis, and if Oscar Hammerstein can draw to his new operahouse a sufficiently smart clientele, as now seems certain, to make a showing, the social promoters of the new enterprise will be in a position the next year to stampede the Metropolitan Opera Company's parterre box holders.

The beginning of the contest dates from the time that Senator Clark and Mr. Schwab and their wives came to New York. They had money enough to hold their own with anybody, not excepting the wealthiest of the millionaires' ring that controls affairs at the big temple of music, Forty-second and Broadway. They had everything but the entré, but this was the hardest of all to get, the list of the 400 had been compiled before they arrived.

FOUND NO ROOM.

The first ambition of the Clarks and Schwabs was to get a parterre box at the Metropolitan Operahouse, but there they found snugly entrenched J. Pierpont Morgan in the center, flanked by J. J. Astor, Perry Belmont, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Astor, Adrian Iselin and others of the old line society.

These figuratively looked through their lorgnettes at the applicants, and then sniffed.

"What, admit to the parterre boxes these newly arrived Clarks, Schwabs, and a dozen other millionaires from other cities and their families? Certainly not. For this would mean that they could take part in that calling from box to box between the acts which is the surest sign of social standing."

Instead of this, Senator Clark and his young wife were relegated to the tier above, whose occupants are prevented by the unwritten law of the house from mingling with the notables below. Schwab declined to take any box. It was the best or nothing with him. He was content to fight the same quiet battle that has so often won him success. His tactics were the same as he used in the celebrated contest with Henry C. Frick. He need not be hasty.

It was easy for the parterre boxholders of the Metropolitan to shut out these aspirants, for the venture only exists through the financial support of these heavy guns, and they can demand what they want.

Clark snubbed and Schwab shut out, writhed and resolved a vengeance.

The exposé of the insurance scandals helped their cause materially. They could see no reason why men besmirched in that story of theft should continue to hold high social place while they languished on the outside.

OSCAR HAS A SCHEME.

Along came the irrepressible Oscar Hammerstein, the man who handles roof gardens, theaters, has composed an opera in twenty-four hours, and performed a number of other spectacular feats that have made him the idol of bustling New York.

He had a scheme. Grand opera was his thought. He would give it at a popular price, and attract the patronage of many persons too poor to pay the Eiffel Tower prices of the older musical temple.

But right at the outset he struck an obstacle. The best singers would not come to an operahouse where popular prices prevailed, and where their prestige might suffer a bit in comparison with the song birds of the Conried establishment.

Then on calculation Oscar found out that the receipts from popular-priced opera might not be great enough to get the kind of singers he must have for New York. His plan looked destined to failure, but in this crisis, Clark and Schwab rose to the situation. They quickly saw the opportunity for which they had waited and revenge is sweet.

"Go ahead," they said in effect to Hammerstein. "Build your operahouse, have it on a lavish scale, quite as handsome as the Metropolitan. Hire the best singers in the world, especially those who have been shut out of the Metropolitan since Conried introduced business methods there. Give us an artistic success that will attract to you the best class of music lovers and society, and we'll bear the costs and back you to the limit."

Hammerstein has taken his backers at their word, and the new Manhattan Operahouse, now nearing completion, represents an outlay of $3,000,000.

The center parterre boxes of this magnificent temple of music will be occupied by the Clark and Schwab families, and as their combined wealth exceeds $150,000,000, there need be no fear of lack of brilliancy when they take their places on opening night.

Numerous other men of wealth, who have fretted under exclusion from society till they felt like ragged newsboys peering through the windows of a fashionable restaurant in which were dining those whose companions they most desired to be, have flocked to the standard of the new régime.

In this number are many men and women who have ability as well as wealth, for the Four Hundred has never been consistent in its preferences and has shut out many who had e qualification for entrance and welcomed some unfit for asso decent people.

ROUNDING UP SINGERS.

His wealthy patrons and secured, Hammerstein has ling for singers, and here he a wisdom that is going to very formidable rival for the ganization. From the ranks who have been big favorites country, but who have been the Metropolitan line-up since applied his new system, he has out the greatest stars, and added a number of famed singers have never been heard in the States.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

THE summer girl, with her coat of tan, is returning from her vacation tour with the customary string of masculine hearts, which will be readily forgotten in the whirl of winter festivities, and society is beginning to take on its customary activity. At present most of the social interest is centered in the Barlow fete, and all the lovely women and maids, who are to have a place in it are planning bewildering gowns. It is safe to say that when they are donned, there will be a stunning array of fascinating femininity.

There have been a number of interesting weddings and other functions the past week. On Monday Mrs. Fred ler of Hobart boulevard entertained with a children's party in honor of her little niece, Miss Adele Smith. There were few parties on that day, owing to the holiday.

Tuesday afternoon a pretty wedding was that of Miss Elsie Goodhue and k Gibbs, which took place in the of the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage officiating. Mrs. George Goldsmith gave a luncheon for a few women friends the same day. Willis M. Dixon of No. 1296 Arapahoe street gave a dinner on Tuesday evening in celebration of his birthday. Miss Elizabeth Turner and Thomas Inch were married in the evening at the home of the bride in Santa Ana.

A number of interesting weddings took place on Wednesday, among them that of Miss Edna Eckstrom and Ed ed Woodbury, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. of Dorchester avenue. Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church was the scene of an unique evening ceremony, uniting Miss Maude Smith and Alben. The same evening Miss Gay became the bride of George at a quiet ceremony at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gay, No. 2344 West Twenty- street. Mrs. W. B. Corwin of Hotel Alvarado entertained in the afternoon with a card party for Mrs. Wesley B. Scott of Kansas City, a bride, who has come here to make her home. Another enjoyable affair Wednesday was a cobweb party given by Miss de Longpré of Hollywood in honor of Miss Holbridge and Miss Pal- visiting woung women. Mrs. E. G. Hookstratten of No. 1808 Lenox avenue, with her son, Eddie, left last evening for Lawrence, Kan., where she goes to visit her mother, Mrs. A. E. Wells, and to spend two months in her old home.

Inch-Turner Nuptials.

At Santa Ana on Tuesday evening a brilliant little wedding ceremony united Thomas B. Inch of this city and Miss Elizabeth Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Turner of that place.

The home and gardens without were lit with Japanese lanterns, and within siewy blossoms and greenery were combined with graceful effect. The couple stood before an altar of greenery starred with white flowers, and here Rev. R. C. Douglas spoke the words uniting them. The bride was attired in a handsome gown of white silk messaline with trimmings of Valenciennes lace and her veil was caught with lilies of the valley and her shower bouquet was of the same.

Miss Elsie Harrison played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the couple approached the altar, and Miss Irene Balcolm sang "O Promise Me" during the ceremony.

About seventy-five guests witnessed the wedding, twenty-five going from Los Angeles on a private car. Mr. and Mrs. Inch have gone to Coronado on their honeymoon and on their return will be at home to their friends at No. 939 Valencia street.

Return from Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Robertson, who have been spending their honeymoon at Rose avenue, Ocean Park, have returned to the city and have taken apartments at Hotel Ingraham, where Mrs. Robertson will be at home to her friends on Fridays.

Take Walking Trip.

Mrs. Maude Davis Baker, Miss Viropue Baker, Miss Gertrude Hill, Miss Grace Fuller and Judge Davis of Sunset Beach, Mrs. Davis's father, left a few days ago for a walking trip through the Arroyo Seco.

Will Burlesque "Patience."

The negro minstrels at the Barlow Fete, which Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clifford Lott and their able corps of assistants have been so assiduously coaching for the last few weeks, are planning a huge joke, so they say, on the vaudeville and their crowning effort, so it is said, will be the burlesque of "Patience," which Tom Karl is to give with Mr. Dewey as a very efficient stage manager. It is said that Mr. Dewey is so familiar with the lines of "Patience," that should Mr. Karl fail, Mr. Dewey can easily step in and repeat them to a dot. The burlesque of this rather pedantic and aesthetic play, whose humor lies rather in its mock seriousness than anywhere else, will doubtless prove capital sport for the auditors.

Angelenos at Saratoga.

Mrs. Seymour Locke, with a party of Los Angeles people, is enjoying herself at Saratoga. Others in the party are Mrs. Wesley Clark and daughters and Mrs. Cecil and Mrs. Greenleaf.

Gives Gypsy Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Villinger of No. 266 Fremont avenue entertained the members of the Clover Leaf Club of which Mrs. Villinger is the president, with a jolly gypsy party on Thursday evening. The card tables were set in a space in the garden lit with Japanese lanterns and a gypsy tent and camp fire and red table cloths and iron kettles added much to the realistic effect. Scores were kept on pieces of crude brown paper. The first prizes were won by Mrs. H. C. Cable and Bert Villinger, and the consolations by Miss Marie Spreckles and Chester Riggs. Miss Laura McDonald entertained the guests with weird gypsy dances and Harry Ross sang popular songs, with piano accompaniment by Miss Rachel Fulsom. Dancing was enjoyed with the De Nubila Orchestra furnishing the music. Mrs. Vern Hastings assisted the hostess in entertaining.

For Mrs. Scott.

Mrs. Wesley B. Scott, a handsome young bride of Kansas City, was the honored guest on Wednesday afternoon at a prettily-appointed card party given by Mrs. W. B. Corwin of the Hotel Alvarado.

The rooms were most attractively decked with flowers and ferns. In the reception-room lavender chrysanthemums and asters were combined with potted palms and ferns, with dainty grace, and red carnations in another room, and pink roses in another carried out the floral effect. Score cards were adorned with hand-painted sketches of girls' heads. The first prize, a brass fern dish, was won by Mrs. Samuel Staats Shepard, and the second, a vase of Egyptian pottery, fell to Mrs. Smaltzer, while the third was won by Mrs. Avery, and was a pearl paper knife.

Those who enjoyed the afternoon were Mmes. Homer Laughlin, Jr., John C. Barrister, James T. Fitzgerald, J. C. Brown, John B. Cornwell, Ira W. Shirley, Elizabeth Nash Thompson, Donald M. Lee, Henry Obear, Lundy, William Ramsay, Lodie Avery, Samuel S. Shepard, George Morrow of this city, Mrs. Mary Smaltzer and Mrs. Schell, sister and mother of the bride, from Kansas City, and Mmes. Henry Newby, Luther Newby, D. M. Linnard, Herbert Holt, J. S. Glasscock and Orcelia Hines of Pasadena.

Mrs. Scott and her husband have come here to make their home and are at present staying at the Hotel Alvarado. She was formerly Miss Irene Schell of Kansas City, one of the popular belles there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. McCutcheon of No. 213 North Soto street entertained with a family dinner party in honor of Mrs. McCutcheon's brother, Max Chapman, who left for the University of Virginia. The table was decked with roses and ferns, and it was a merry party who gathered about the festal board. Guests were Hon. and Mrs. J. S. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Chapman, Mrs. Teale, Miss Smith, Miss Marjory Smith of San Francisco, Misses Mary and Anna Chapman, Miss Frances Coulter and Messrs. Max Chapman, F. S. Advance Styles in Fall Suits

One or Two of Every New Mode to Select From

Manufacturers may and do make up scores of styles in suits each season, but the public approval may center on only half a dozen which soon become the accepted modes. The consequence is that the majority of stores load up on these few accepted styles and the great number of a kind soon makes them common. Now we like to give the Los Angeles women a chance to select their own styles and for this reason will this week show at least twenty-five of the new styles and as there are only one or two of each you may be sure of having something exclusive without paying an extortionate price for the privilege.

ROUND TABLE—Where the Editorial Staff Gathers.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

American Money in Canada.

An Ottowa correspondent says that Americans are found to be largely interested in the numerous undertakings incorporated under the laws of the Dominion during the past year. The total authorized capital of the companies receiving Dominion letters patent only last year, exceeded $99,000,000, and increased capital was authorized to companies previously in existence to the amount of $9,000,000, making a total for the year of more than $108,000,000.

The aggregate capital authorized to these Dominion companies in the last five years, 1900 to 1906, both inclusive, was over $332,000,000. These are companies that have received Dominion incorporation only, and the list does not include the enormous number of concerns doing business under provincial charters only in Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, the Northwest, British Columbia, and the maritime provinces, the powers conferred by which are restricted to the provinces respectively in which letters patent are issued.

The Wine Industry.

Consular reports state that the world output of wines last year aggregated 4,000,000,000 gallons. Over 95 per cent. of this large production came from Europe. North and South America combined produced but 4 per cent. of the total. France alone produced 45 per cent. of it, and France, Italy and Spain 73 per cent.

It is an interesting fact disclosed by this report that France, in addition to being the largest exporter of wine in the world, is also the largest importer of it.

The wine crop of the United States last year was 34,000,000 gallons. That of France was 1,710,000,000 gallons, Italy comes second with $56,530,000 gallons, and Spain third, with 428,000,000 gallons.

Liquid Air.

Reduced cost of liquid-air production is indicated by an article in the London Times. Recent experiments in England of an invention by Mr. Knudsen, a Dane, furnished liquid air at one-sixth of the present market price, and give promise of an ultimate low price of a fraction over 2 cents per gallon. The result is secured by purely mechanical means, without an atom of added chemicals. Atmospheric air is first purified and then compressed by stages to 2500 pounds to the square inch. It is finally reduced to 125 pounds to the square inch, which then cools and liquefies the high-pressure air.

One gallon of liquid air equals approximately 124 cubic feet of oxygen gas, which retails at 4 cents per cubic foot. The new price is 1 cent. Liquid air has been successfully used in coal mines as an explosive, being quite safe where fire damp and other explosive gases exist. Liquid oxygen is also used for welding steel pipes, boiler shells and plates for shipbuilding instead of riveting.

That oxygen and nitrogen can be separated from liquid air and sold retail at $1.20 per gallon shows great commercial possibilities. The use of nitrogen for agricultural purposes opens yet another field. The maturing of liquors will be helped by liquid air, as also the preservation and purification of milk. As a motive power its use is considered to be quite practicable for small powers. The British government is already carrying out a number of experiments with a view to the utilization of liquid air for various purposes.

British Cotton Goods.

During the first six months of the present year 28,114,800 yards of cotton piece goods (valued at $2,110,000) were exported from the United Kingdom to South Africa, against 20,277,440 yards in the same period of 1905, and only 12,749,200 yards in that of 1904.

THE RAMBLER.

The Bee.

Thou art a miser and a thief, thou bee!
All day complaining that the radiant rose,
Whose petals soon must drop like drifted snows,
So small a treasure hath stored up for thee.
Her honeyed sweetness garnered, thou wilt flee
To find out where some dew-lipped rosebud grows;
An arch deceiver thou, too well she knows,
A ruthless vandal, gay and fancy free.
Thou wakest her from her slumbers sweet and deep,
And kissed the tremulous crimson of her mouth,
And filled her glowing heart with flatteries.
Ah, cruel bee! Could'st thou not let her sleep?
Could'st thou not let her dream of the wind from the south?
Why did'st thou pry her fairest mysteries?

A True Bird Story.

Lucretia, strolling in from the garden, found the Rambler intently examining the nib of his favorite fountain pen.

"I only used it to write a ten-word note with," was her quick and instinctive defense. "I'm sure I didn't hurt it."

"You didn't—that time," the Rambler assured her.

"Oh!" with immense relief. "Then why so grave and severe of aspect?"

"I'm thinking. It occurred to me that I had material for a good nature story in that back-yard episode of last week, but I'll be hanged if I know how to go about it."

"Don't be profane—or prophetic," said Lucretia, pretending to be shocked.

"It's true, though. Every Tom, Dick and Harry, not to mention the Janes and Susans, goes out and studies nature so assiduously nowadays that ignorant and untutored mortals like me must mind his P's and Q's when he makes mention of a beast or a bird or a posy. Oh, for the exact knowledge of a John Burroughs or the weird imagination of an Ernest Seton-Thompson!"

"Thompson-Seton," said Lucretia firmly.

"Thompson Seton-Ernest, more likely. The wind of destiny must have veered again by this time, in the rarefied atmosphere breathed by that inspired naturalist. Lucretia, what kind of birds were those that had that adventure with the snake?"

"I haven't the remotest idea. But what's in a name, anyway? They were pretty and round and chirpy. That's all we know, and all the public needs to know."

"Pretty and round and chirpy—humph! Very descriptive, I must say. Well, what kind of a snake was it?"

"A rattlesnake," said Lucretia boldly.

The Rambler frowned. "A rattlesnake? Nonsense!"

"Well, it was slimy and green and horrid enough to be a rattlesnake. Besides, weren't you just sighing for the imagination of a Thompson-Seton?"

"But one must draw the line somewhere," the Rambler protested.

"Not when it comes to snakes," said Lucretia. "The more grewsome you paint them, the better will your public like the picture; for every right-minded person hates a snake."

But the Rambler was not listening any longer. He had picked up his fountain pen with a firm hand.

Two small brown birds (he wrote) had decided to wed and set up a home in our apricot tree. We watched them, Lucretia and I, in the first happy days of their honeymoon, when their nest was being built, and we rejoiced with them when, in due season, there appeared three little blue eggs for them to gloat over and sit on.

We threw them the crumbs of bread and cake every morning, and we were soon established on a very friendly footing with them. Then, one day, the expected good news came. The father announced it jubilantly at daybreak. Triplets, he shouted, over and over again, had been hatched out during the night! I thing Lucretia and I were almost as pleased as the birds.

The babies grew apace, changing from grotesque ugliness to a fair and feathery promise of good looks. Their parents were pretty, and Lucretia and I had strong hopes for the children.

But the serpent soon entered this little Eden. One afternoon last week the parent birds hopped round our door in great excitement. They flew with wild cries toward the nest; they hurtled back again, whirling dizzily round our heads.

"Those precious babies are in danger!" gasped Lucretia, with a woman's swift intuition.

I seized a stick, though I knew not why, for I had no premonition of the real trouble, and hastened to our apricot tree. Lucretia followed breathlessly. There I found a snake, coiled round the nest and staring with glittering, hungry eyes at the frightened young birds.

I struck it one quick blow, and it writhed and wriggled till it was lost in the tangle of bushes at the foot of the tree. I tried to find it, but could not, till the old birds, keener of eye, pointed it out to me. Then I put an end forever to its career of crime.

The young birds, who had been hustled out of their nest in the scrimmage, could not of course, get back again. But they camped very comfortably on the ground for a few days, watched and cared for by their anxious parents and by Lucretia and me, who were equally solicitous for their safety. Then they flew away to set up other nests of their own, and to chirp to their children, by the light of the moon, this true and thrilling tale of their early youth.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

Mrs. Astor's Holiday.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor says she has just had one of the holidays of her life on the Island of Mull, off the west coast of Scotland. There she lived a wholly free life, fishing. Sometimes she was out on the sea all night, enjoying the novelty or helping to draw in the nets. She was accompanied by two women friends, and two old fishermen. They had several exciting adventures—once when the nets got tangled and nearly capsized the boat, another time when a sudden fog came on and they lost their bearings for some hours. Mrs. Astor, clad in a short serge skirt and a black and white plaid tam o'shanter, served out on the cabin floor of the old fishing boat dainty sandwiches and creams which she had packed in a picnic basket. It was a study in contrasts.

A Reigning Princess.

The Princess of Monaco is the first Hebrew woman to reign in any land in Europe. She was related to the great German poet Heine and is half American by birth. At the splendid old castle in the principality she entertains in brilliant style and is one of the most popular hostesses on the continent.

Manila Hemp Industry.

R. E. Lindsay, chief engineer of the Manila waterworks has come to this country to arrange for the construction of hemp stripping machines after a model of his own invention. The hemp industry is of vast importance to the Filipinos. The Spaniards recognized this and for years kept standing a reward of $50,000 for the invention of a machine which would expedite the tedious process of stripping. As the work is now done an industrious native can strip from fifteen to twenty pounds of Manila hemp a day. With Lindsay's machine two men will be able to strip 900 pounds a day.

Lady Tweeddale's Jewels.

Lady Tweeddale, the handsome wife of an octogenarian peer, has been cutting a great dash in London society, her magnificent jewels being the wonder of all who have seen them. Among her remarkable ornaments is a string five yards long of great single diamonds. This splendid gaud her ladyship twists around her neck and shoulders, where it reminds beholders of a rivulet of light and other beauteous things. She is also distinguished as a golfer and an excellent walker, and has a yet greater claim to distinction as one of the very few living women engine drivers, being credited with bridge.

A Great Banquet.

Lord Strathcona, as chancellor of the University of Aberdeen, has signified his intention of entertaining at dinner, on the occasion of the celebration of the quarter-centenary of the foundation on September 25, the whole of the guests, as well as the members of the university—graduates, alumni, and students—to the number in all, of about 2500. He will also bear the expense of erecting a special temporary building capable of accommodating so vast a dinner party. The celebrations will extend over several days, and during their progress King Edward will open the new university buildings.

MONEY AND ITS DOINGS.

The prosperity of the Union Pacific Railroad and its appenage, the Southern Pacific, for the fiscal year ended June 30, is certainly something astonishing. The surplus reserve, after paying the immense dividends, is said to amount to $25,219,000. This is 13 per cent. on the common stock outstanding, which is set down at $195,460,000. The gross transportation receipts of the two allied companies amount to $172,000,000 for the year.

During the first six months of 1906 the imports of commodities into the United Kingdom amounted to $121,000,000 more than in the corresponding six months of 1905. About half of this sum went for raw industrial materials. Raw cotton figured in the increase to the amount of $15,000,000. Food, drink and tobacco went for $27,000,000 of it. The exports from the United Kingdom for the same period showed an increase of nearly the same amount. Most of this was in manufactures, which accounts for about $97,000,000 of the increase.

It is guessed that the Union Pacific Railroad will make a strong bid for the control of the first absolutely transcontinental line stretching from ocean to ocean. The Harriman interests are said to be planning to control the New York Central. The Union Pacific people have $100,000,000 cash in hand, which is a formidable weapon in the stock market.

While New York bankers are figuring on furnishing from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 to move the great crops in the western agricultural States, Chicago is figuring on the problem of furnishing perhaps $25,000,000 to $40,000,000 more. The Chicago bankers think that the moving of the crops may require an advance of a total sum of $90,000,000.

President Harriman's improvements made upon the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific lines since they have came under his contral are said to net an annual saving to the company of millions of dollars. There has been set aside a sum of $12,000,000 reserve fund for further betterments along the lines.

The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company proposes to keep well up in the procession. The stockholders are asked to increase the capital stock of the company to $200,000,000, the new issue to be common stock. The present capital stock is $77,602,045 common, and $22,395,120 preferred. The proposed increase would a little more than double the capitalization of the company. The money thus raised is to be put into improvements and extenstons.

The Pensylvania Railroad Company, besides planning an expenditure of $90,000,000 to get a direct entrance into New York City, is spending $10,000,000 in improving its facilities at the depots in Pennsylvania. A great union depot is to be erected at Fifth avenue and Grant street.

The new fiscal year starts out with excellent indictaions of a good business year. While the exports of cotton for the first month of the fiscal year, July, dropped from $17,456,000 to $9,580,000, the other leading items of export show great gains.

From present appearances, the earnings of the steel trust for the current year will not be less than $150,000,000. This is $16,000,000 more than the best previous year on record.

The current fiscal year, as the promise is now, will exceed in the value of its exports $1,000,000,000.

It is said that the European countries will require about 530,000,000 bushels of wheat and 200,000,000 bushels of corn. The foreign countries will also take about 9,000,000 bales of our cotton. Last year we furnished 117,000,000 bushels of corn and 100,000,000 of wheat, including flour. The crops of the United States this year would permit us to furnish twice the amount of each of these cereals, and 7,200,000 bales of cotton could be spared for foreign markets. These three crops would give the country a credit abroad of $625,000,000.

The foreign trade of Canada is increasing very rapidly. For the past fiscal year, the total trade amounted to $550,000,000, an increase of $82,000,000 over the previous year. In this trade, imports figured for $290,342,408, an increase over the previous year of $28,490,973. The exports of domestic products amounted to $235,483,860, an increase over the previous year of $45,529,010. The increase has been steady and very great for the last ten years.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad naturally shares in the prosperity of Canada. The road showed an increase of $11,000,000 in gross earnings last year.

The plan to build an electric line railway from New York to Chicago via Pittsburgh, it is estimated, would involve a cost of $150,000,000.

As the facts become more definitely known, it begins to appear that the destruction of property by the earthquake in Valparaiso will be vastly less than the first reported figures. It was estimated in a wild way that the destruction of property would amount to $100,000,000. The Satesman's Year Book sets down the entire taxable property of all the cities in Chile at $250,000,000. It is not to be supposed that the desruction of property in one city would come to anything like $100,000,000. When the value of real estate is eliminated from the figures giving the entire taxable property there would be much less than $100,000,000, as the entire taxable value of all the improvements in the whole republic. The Wall Street Journal estimates the value of all the buildings in Chile at $50,000,000 and claims to include in this the "hut of the peasant and the palace of the prosperous merchant." If that estimate be right, the loss of property by the earthquake would be reduced to a very small sum.

The municipal authorities of Chicago propose to attempt to tax all bank deposits in the city. The deposits of money in the Chicago banks run to about $600,000,000. If this plan is carried out, it would give Chicago an addition to its tax receipts considerably more than all derived from other personal property in the county. The taxable personal property is said to be about $500,000,000.

The anthracite coal business of the United States for the year 1901 amounted in money to $112,501,020, and for last year to $141,879,000.

In the city of New York the State banks on the sixth of August carried a total individual deposit subject to check amounting to $209,722,805, an increase from May 16 of $9,500,000 nearly, and over a year ago of $36,500,000.

The total sales of the products of the General Electric Company for the current year are expected to reach $55,000,000, and of the Westinghouse Electric, $34,000,000.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Beards and Health.

"Old men should wear beards," said a local physician, "for when one becomes aged he should be spared the exertion of daily shaving. But I would like to issue a warning to all beard wearers. I would like to shout, 'Keep your beards dry!' in a voice loud enough to be heard around the world. Were these words heeded many cases of sore throat, cold and influenza would be avoided and many deaths would be put off. So many men with beards neglect when they wash their faces to wipe their beards dry. A beard a foot long demands a lot of toweling. It should be toweled after every wash a good five minutes. Otherwise it is damp. The owner goes about with this damp thing upon his delicate and sensitive throat. Then if he takes tonsilitis or influenza he blames the American climate. There are too many damp beards among us. Too many men, washing their faces three or four times a day, have their beards damp and clammy a good three hours daily."

Asbestos Becomes Porcelain.

The maid and the china closet may prove a less formidable combination after asbestos porcelain becomes popular. Asbestos porcelain is the name given by Garres to a substance originated by him which in every particular equals the properties of porcelain and in some particulars is credited with advantages. Asbestos fibers are thin, their diameter varying from 0.00016 to 0.0002 millimeters, so that an exceedingly fine powder can be obtained from them. This powder is mixed with water to form a paste, which is kneaded, again mixed with water, dried, kneaded once more, and finally forced into suitable molds. By heating the objects in a crucible to a temperature of 1700 deg. centigrade a product resembling ordinary porcelain as regards transparency is obtained. If this is heated for eighteen hours at a temperature of 1200 deg. a porous asbestos porcelain of pale yellowish or white color results, provided care is taken to wash the powder previously with sulphuric acid.

Futility of Drugs.

The use of patent powders for headache, sleeplessness, nervous exhaustion, and similar difficulties has enormously increased within the last few years, writes Dr. Luther Gulick, in the World's Work. Taken in small doses and at rare intervals these much advertised remedies do not seem to be injurious. But a person who gets into the way of using them soon gets out of the way of sticking to rare intervals. This is almost inevitable. As long as the powder will produce the result he wants, he is really forced to keep on using it, for the actual cause of the trouble has never been reached, and it keeps making more trouble for him and demanding attention. But after the drug has been used long enough for the system to become habituated to it, the effect grows less and less in proportion to the size of the dose. So the doses have to be increased.

There is no drug that can be taken into the system regularly without working harm. Every drug has a secondary effect, as well as a primary one. The immediate effect is all a man thinks of when he takes it; but the thinks of when he takes it; but the secondary effect follows just as inevitably. It is of an entirely different nature, and it is always bad. For example, the secondary effect of most of the coal-tar headache powders is to reduce the number of red corpuscles of the blood, whose business it is to carry oxygen to all parts of the body.

Coal Tar's Potentialities.

The discoveries of the potentialties of coal tar have allowed of the production of the beautiful alizarine and aniline colors of today, and it has made them far cheaper than the old pigments. It is characteristic that while an Englishman made the discovery on which a great part of modern chemical industry is based, none of his countrymen could be induced to take advantage of it. It was too theoretic for the self-styled practical man of business, who preferred his old method of the vat and the tub; and the prophet of caol tar, being without honor in his own country, had to find a refuge among Germans, who were not so blind to a new invention.

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

A Mathematical Wooing.

He Idered at her soulful eyes
And at her dreamy atti2de,
And wi3peated, heart-born sighs
B4 the shrine of Her he sued.

"I5 said anything to you
That love6scems, I do not care;
It7lyindeed, 'tis true,
To contemplate your face so fair.

"I pray you, then, to be b9,
As 10der as you there is none—
Say, then, sweet maid, you will be mine;
In other words, we will be 1."

She said she thought they 0 2 8,
But he cried: "No, for Cupid's s½t
Has pierced me. I'll at10u8
Unless you bring the healing draught."

She blushed and shyly gave consent
And while they marveled each on each,
She said: "I knew just what you meant;
I love your figur5ive speech."

Business Is Business.

With some amusement we observe the shabbily-dressed man reading the column of wedding announcements, and see that from time to time he puts down an address.

"You are interested in the coming weddings?" we ask.

"Yes, sir," he replies meekly.

"Ah," we observe, thinking that perhaps he is another instance of the ups and downs of wealth, "some of your former friends are to be united in matrimony?"

"No, sir. I run a second-hand shoe store, and I always add a lot to my stock by being around when the bridal couple drives away."

If Necessary.

There were six or seven of us—
That is, six or seven men,
For the ladies, after dinner,
Left us smoking in the den.
We were sitting, silent, happy,
In the brotherhood of smoke,
Till a guest with shifty optics,
Lifted up his voice and spoke.

"On the train last week," he told us,
Smiling at us all and each,
"I picked up a brand new story,
And I tell you, it's a peach."
(Now it happened that we knew him—
Knew his stories and his songs
Were the sort that must be handled
With a good long pair of tongs.)

"It was this way," he said, softly—
"Wait a moment. Need we fear
If we leave the den door opened
That the womenfolks will hear?"
Then the host said: "Just a minute.
As to this yarn you would spin,
If no other plan will stop you,
I can call the ladies in."

PROMINENT PERSONS.

A London paper says that some day the Premier of Great Britain will be Winston Churchill, and that, at the same time, Winston Churchill will be President of the United States.

William Beckwith of Hadlyme, Ct., who was such a tiny baby that his parents could place him in a sugar bowl and put the cover on, now weighs 305 pounds and is the fattest man of the lower Connecticut River Valley.

Thomas Estrada Palma, Jr., son of the President of Cuba and a student in the College of Applied Science at Syracuse University, has joined the army of the island republic. He is 22 years of age. His sister has become an army nurse.

An American who lately met Thomas Hardy at some London afternoon says it is impossible to realize that he wrote his books—he looks so unlike them. Her enthusiasm oozed out when he gave a cold, finny shake and seemed so bored it was a kindness to let him go on to the next admiring victim.

Daniel O'Connell of Linden, Mich., is 102 years old, but he works on his farm regularly. He thinks nothing of taking a walk of four or five miles and does not consider it worth while to hitch up a horse to go two miles and back. His eyesight is remarkably good and his eyes have the brightness of those of a young man.

Mrs. Mercer Pell, a charming young American woman, has been engaged to take charge of a big hotel in Harrowgate, Eng. Mrs. Pell is a member of a prominent Knickerbocker family in New York and has been presented at court, but owing to straitened circumstances has accepted the position offered her by Sir Christopher Furness, proprietor of the Harrowgate Hotel.

Charles A. Walsh, over twelve years Iowa's member of the Democratic National Committee, has sent his resignation to Chairman Taggart. He declares the Democratic party is controlled by the trusts and corporations, and adds: "While I have heretofore always been known as a partisan Democrat, and will always be a staunch supporter of Democratic principles, as I understand them, it has been steadily borne in upon me for a long time, as I came closer and closer to a knowledge of the inner workings of the party system, that, from the standpoint of true Democracy, there can be nothing worse or more injurious to the country than the 'yellow dog' party feeling that impels good men to support a ticket of unfit nominees merely because they bear the party label."

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

J. A. Tormey, Superintendent of Schools, at Seattle, says the new spelling cannot be taught in the public schools until the spelling books are changed.

Jacob Stadtfeldt, for over fifty years an employé of the San Francisco mint, resigned his position during the street car strike because of the hardship incident to reaching the scene of his daily labors. He is 74 years of age.

John Van der Bosch of Seattle will soon receive a shipment of Dutch bulbs from the government with which he is to experiment, and ascertain the adaptability of the climate for bulb raising. Mr. Van der Bosch engaged in Dutch bulb raising for years in Holland and is thoroughly acquainted with the business.

C. G. Tosswell has arrived in Seattle as the representative of the largest hop warehouse in London, and will make arrangements to purchase and ship hops direct from Oregon. Until recently the firm has purchased from New York merchants. Thousands of bales of Oregon hops have been annually handled by the London firm.

Three months ago the eight-year-old son of William Speirs of Calistoga was carried off by a Mrs. Rockett on a couple of weeks' trip to Trinity county. Nothing more was heard from either the woman or the boy till about a week ago, when they were located in Plumas county. The father had traveled hundreds of miles in pursuit of his boy. This woman is not believed to be in her right mind.

Enoch Bagsaw, about the best football player at the University of Washington, was recently badly injured while working in a mine in Alaska. He received a broken arm, a badly strained back and possibly internal injuries. If he does not make satisfactory recovery the University team will lose a man whose place will be hard to fill.

HUMOR OF THE WORLD.

FROM GERMANY.

Lady (to waiter, hired for the evening:) While the music is going on, do not come into the room, do you understand?

Walter: Very good, ma'am but how did you know I was musical?—[Fliegende Blatter.

Maid: A gentleman to speak to you miss.

Mistress: My cousin, the professor, I suppose?

Maid: Oh, no; it isn't clever enough for him; I think he has come to ask for your hand.—[Fliegende Blatter.

When I arrived at Karlsbad, I went to consult Dr. Turner about my rheumatism.

"Twenty glasses of the 'Muhlbrunnen' he prescribed.

Then I told him about my nerves.

"Twen Muhlbrunnen," he said, as before. As I was going out, I found I had left my umbrella behind me. I, therefore, retraced my steps, and on entering, Dr. Turner loked up and said: "Is there anything more wrong with you?"

"My um——" I began.

"Twenty Muhlbrunnen," said he.—[Simplicissimus.

Mistress: But, Kathi, that clock goes for a week; you must wind it up more than that.

Maid: Yes, ma'am, but you know, I am leaving tomorrow, and I won't do the new cook's work.—[Meggendorfer Blatter.

"Daisy, when your husband hears of your former sweethearts, won't he want to shoot them with his revolver?"

"Quite impossible; why, he'd want a mitrailleuse at least!" [Lustige Blatter.

First Bookseller: What do you think of my son-in-law, Baron Pumpsky? A very elegant appearance, hasn't he?

Second Bookseller: Yes; quite an edition de luxe in stiff covers.—[Meggendorfer Blatter.

"You have had quite enough beer now, Karl."

"Quite right, my dear. Walter, bring me the wine list."—[Fliegende Blatter.

First Lieutenant: I congratulate you, old chap; your fiancé is charming.

Second Lieutenant: Rather; I have already begun a course of pistol practice.—[Meggendorfer Blatter.

Tourist (who has stayed at the hotel with his family for the night, to Boots in the morning:) I suppose 70 cents is too little for five people?

Boots: Yes; I didn't clean five heads, but ten feet.—[Meggendorfer Blatter.

"Ah! Maud! What a lovely creature! And such delicate hands! Why a fly could feel her pulse!"—[Lustige Blatter.

FROM ENGLAND.

A contemporary asks for the real meaning of decadence. There is none better than the Cockney one. Decadence is a species of 'art disease.—[London Tribune.

A single eyeglass is a thing in its nature altogether monstrous and devilish. The man who can put a glittering decoration in one eye and not in the other is blaspheming the balance and decency of the human form. He is capable of wearing a trouser on one leg, or his moustache on one side of his face.—[G. K. Chesterton, in Illustrated London News.

Teh growth of slang is as undeniable as it is deplorable. A correspondent draws our attention to a case in point On the name-plate of a shop in a leading thoroughfare he has found the inscription "Smith and Kidd." We agree that "Smith and Son," though old-fashioned, is far more dignified.—[Punch.

The War Department has asked Capt. Herman O. Koehler, master of the sword at West Point, to investigate the German manual of fencing, with a view toward its adoption in the United States army. For some time letters have reached the Secretary of War from officers and enlisted men declaring that in their opinion the German manual is greatly superior to that used in the American army. These indorsements, coming from so many different sources, have led the department to call for an investigation.

Weekly Lessons in Esperanto.

By James Main Dixon, M.A., F.R.S.E.

University of Southern California.

With this installment I close the series of weekly lessons in Esperanto. Those who have followed them throughout ought now to be able to read Esperanto matter with some facility.

All Esperantists are agreed that the language as constructed by Dr. Zamenhof must be accepted and used just as he lays down the laws and regulations, without variations or individual caprices. If changes are to be made, they will be made deliberately by a general council, representative of the adherents of the system. I have not advocated nor introduced any changes, although in certain cases I might vote for such.

An American journal of Esperanto is now projected and will be published at Boston, if sufficient subscribers are forthcoming. The editor-in-chief will be John Fogg Twombly of Brookline, Mass., secretary of the American Esperanto Association. An Esperanto Association has just been formed in Los Angeles, with Mr. J. M. Kean, No. 729 West Third street, as president.

In closing these lessons for the present, I desire to impress on my readers the necessity of spending serious hours in grasping the fundamentals of this wonderful international language, which seems to unite the valuable essential elements in the other languages we are familiar with. The exertion is worth while as a mere intellectual gymnastic. For those who have no time to study Latin, many of the advantages from the point of view of culture, mental gymnastics and the power of communicating freely with persons of other nationalities can now be obtained more easily by the study of Esperanto. The best book to get, for those who are not mere beginners, is Fruictier's "Esperanta Sintakso."

The following excellent story, showing the spread of Esperanto, comes direct from Paris. The editor of L'Esperantiste received it in the form of a letter, headed Méfiez-vous—"Be on your guard."

"Tre estimata sinjoro Redaktoro, ĉu vi parolas Esperante, kiam vi volas, ke oni vin ne komprenu? Nu, malĝuu! Jen estas historieto, kiu eble amuzos la legontojn de l'Esperantiste: Dimanĉe, mi revenis de Amiens kun mia frato kaj, ĉar ni parolis pri intimaj aferoj, ni uzis la lingvon Esperanto, certegaj ke neniu el la aliaj vojaĝantoj (maljuna sinjoro, komerca vojaĝisto kaj simpla artileria soldato) ne komprenas nian parolon. Vi povas pensi, kiom ni ekmiris aŭdante la soldaton, kiu kviete faris cigaredon, dirantan malicete en Esperanto: 'ĉu vi bonvolas, sinjoro, prunti al mi vian alumetujon, mi forgesis la mian.' Kaj li aldonis ridante:

"Nenion timu! mi aŭdis, ke vi parolas Esperante, sed mi ne aŭskultis." Ni multe ridis pri tiu ĉi aventuro. Feliĉe, ni ne estis mokintaj la soldaton en Esperanto. Kaj nun, mi ripetas: Malĝuu! Sed tio ankaŭ montras, ke nia amata lingvo estas viva, tre viva." M. O.

I have before me, as I write, the Esperanto paper prepared by Mr. D. H. Lambert, B. A. Oxon, for the examination of senior commercial certificates, under the direction of the London Chamber of Commerce, and used for this purpose on May 30 of the current year. The opening paragraph for translation into English is of immediate interest to Californians:

I. Translate into English:

(a) Kiel oni scias, Kalifornio apartenas al la lokoj tre riĉaj kiel per mineraloj, tiel ankaŭ per produktaĵoj de la regno kreskaja. La kreskaĵoj tie ofte distingas sin per tiaj grandegaj mezuroj, ke ni, eŭropanoj, tute ne povus ĝin kredi. Tuj ĉe la eniro en la montojn, en la loko Kalaveraso, sur la alteco de 1400 metroj super la nivelo de la maro, troviĝas angulo de arbaro, en kiu kolektiĝas tuta familio da grandeguloj el la speco de la tiel nomataj "mamontaj arboj." Grizaj, maljunaj, ornamentaj per nudaj brancoj nur sur la pintoj, ili staras jam le na unuan miljaron kaj estas ĉirkaŭkreskitaj de densa musko. Flamaj floroj nestiĝas en la fendoj de iliaj radikoj kaj sur la sulkita ŝelo. La freŝa muska suprajo de la tero estas tre mola sub ili. Iliaj folietoj estas tre malgrandaj, kaj ilia korpo—la ligno—estas malmola, de ruĝeta koloro, sed tre rapide nigriĝas de la tempo. La plej granda el la Kalaverasa familio de tiuj ĉi arboj, sub la nomo "Maljuna arbo," jam pli ne ekzistas. Antaŭ 40 aŭ 60 jaroj la eŭropaj enmigrintoj—kolonionoj ekvolis faligi tiun ĉi arbon.

Two other paragraphs follow, with a third paragraph in English to be translated into Esperanto. The following are the grammatical questions:

1. How is the passive voice formed in Esperanto?
2. Is the adverbial form much used in Esperanto? Give five different instances of its use.
3. Name the occasions, with examples, in which the accusative (or objective) case is used.
4. Translate (a) I am the man whose son you saw. (b) He walked ten miles from Paris to Versailles. (c) How many bottles of wine have you bought? (d) By my watch it is ten minutes past 9.

The following are lessons after the psychological method of Prof. Howard Swan and contributed by him for translation:

LA HORLOĜO.

La mastrino streĉas la horloĝon:

La mastrino eniras la ĉambron, kaj haltas surprizata.

La horloĝo estas haltinta. Ĝi ne iras plu.

La mastrino forlevas la vitrokovrilon (aŭ malfermas la vitropordon.) de la horloĝo. Ŝi altprenas la klavon de la horloĝo, kaj ĝin enmetas en la truon de la ciferplato.

Ŝi turnas la klavon kelkajn fojojn. Tiamaniere ŝi elstreĉas la risorton.

Dum la turnado la risorto sonetas—krik, krik!—Poste ŝi elstreĉas la tinciliajon.

Tiam ŝi ekirigas la horloĝon per puŝi la pendolon je ŝia fingro.

La pendolo balancas tien kaj poste, de dekstro al maldekstro, de maldekstro al dekstro.

La horloĝo tintetas—ĝi faras tik-tak. La radoj turniĝas; ili igas movi la montrilojn de la horloĝo.

La horloĝo ekiras. La horloĝo estas malhaltinta. La horloĝo iras.

Sed la horloĝo ne estas korekta; ĝi estas malrekta.

Tial la signorino ekrigardas ŝian poŝhorloĝon, aŭ alian horloĝon.

Aŭ ŝi demandas de kelkiu—sia edzo por ekzemplo—kiom da horoj estas? Kio estas la korekta tempo? Ĉu vi povas diri al mi la ĝustan tempon?

Kaj poste ŝi rektigas la horloĝon, turnante la pli grandan montrilon kelkajn fojojn ĝis al la korekta tempo.

Tiam ŝi remetas la vitrokovrilon (aŭ fermas la vitropordon.)

La tempo forfluĝas. La horloĝo montras la horojn—la naŭan, la naŭan kaj kvarono, la naŭan kaj duono, la dekan.

Kiam la horloĝo iras tro rapide aŭ tro malrapide, ŝi regulas ĝin per turni la ŝraŭbon.

Se la horloĝo estas malregula, kaj bezonas riparon, ŝi sendas ĝin ĉe la horloĝiston por esti riparota.

KONVERSACIO DEK-TRIA.

Vidu ĉiujn la agojn tutklare en via spirito. Tio ĉi estas la sola necesa kondicio por lerni la lingvon.

(antaŭ la deklamado)

Ekparolu, se vi bonvolas, sentime; ne ŝanceliĝu! Ne balbutu!

Nu rapidu, la tempo forfluĝas; la horo forpasas; ekmalfruas.

Ni ĉiuj vin atendas. Rigardu miajn gestojn.

Vi ĝin trovos tre utila. Ĝi estos tre utila por vi.

La gesto helpos al vi por trovi la vorton.

Ĝi helpos al vi rememorigi ĝin.

(post la deklamado)

Tio estas perfekta, tutperfekta; absolute korekta.

Jes, bonege, mi gratulas vin.

Tio sonas tute kiel de lerta Esperantisto.

Vi ne balbutis. Vi ne ŝanceliĝis.

Vi parolis libere, sen la signo de ŝanceliĝo.

Vi parolas Esperanton je mira facileco.

Vi surprizas min de via facileco.

KONVERSACIO DEK-KVARA.

Ĉu vi volas labori diligente hodiaŭ?

Ĉu vi estas preta por fari energian laboron?

Jes, kiam ajn vi volas; ĉiam.

Tutbone, mi do tuj komencos.

(antaŭ le dekmado.)

Estas via vico, S-ro A. Kion vi atendas?

Mi forgesis la agon; tial mi atendas ke vi donu al mi la geston.

Volu doni al mi la geston. Certe, ĝe-ure.

Jen estas. Nun estas nenio por haltigi vin de paroli. Ĉu estas io?

Ne, nun, estas nenio por haltigi min. Mi rememorigas ĝin perfekte.

(post la deklamado)

Sufiĉe. Tio estas sufiĉa. Dank' al
Tio estas tute sufiĉa, dank al vi.

Via akcento estas ankaŭ tre bona.

Fresh Literature—What Authors are Saying

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

FICTION.

Marie Corelli.

THE TREASURE OF HEAVEN. By Marie Corelli. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. (Price $1.50. For sale by C. C. Parker, Los Angeles.)

After writing this book, Miss Corelli will surely have a worse opinion than ever of the critics, for, unfortunately, they are certain to say few very flattering things about it. The only things to commend in it are some of its humanitarian ideas and its general humanitarian spirit. These are admirable, even though one may not agree with Miss Corelli in many of her theories.

As to the book from the strictly literary viewpoint, it is sadly melodramatic — indeed, it is melodrama pure and simple, with the exaggerated pathos, impossible climax and crudely-pointed moral of melodrama; and those who like to weep at third-rate matinées would be delighted with it on the stage. It reads as if Miss Corelli had written it in a hurry, a fit of temper or a season of ill health; for it is certainly far below the standard of her best work.

The story is that of a multi-millionaire of 70, whose marriage has proved a failure, and whose two sons have gone to the bad and are dead. He, David Helmsley, is alone in the world, except for the presumed affection of a ward, a beautiful girl to whom he was attracted to inher childhood and whom he has petted and spoiled ever since. But he scarcely believes in her love for him, for it has dawned upon him, of late, that she has grown out of her innocent childhood into a woman very different from the kind he hoped and expected; and it is evident that she now loves him less for himself than for the favors he lavishes upon her. He has grown cynical and world-weary; and the book opens with a conversation between himself and his old friend and solicitor, in which he reviews his past life, wishing that he might have found, somewhere on earth, that greatest treasure—love; a thing in which he still believes, although he has searched for it in vain. This conversation, as well as many that follow it, is stiltedly sentimental and unnatural. Helmsley recalls with tender regret the old Virginia plantation where he was born, and where he knew the only real love he has experienced in life; and these reminiscences permit Miss Corelli to express, through his lips, an anything but complimentary opinion of the United States, as a place of "incalculable greed, vice, cunning and general rascality."

Distrustful, now, even of the love of his ward, Lucy Sorrel, David Helmsley determines to put her to the test. At a coming-of-age party which he gives for Lucy, he is cut to the heart by the deliberate manner in which she devotes herself to flattering him, and is still more hurt by a conversation overheard between her mother and herself, in which he finds himself picked out as a husband for Lucy, who is trying to entrap him because of his wealth. He leads her to a room away from the crowd, and there probes her heart. He learns that she does not believe in love, but in "having a good time in life," and finally, as he finds her deliberately leading him on, he gravely inquires whether she would marry him in case he should ask her. She is triumphant; but even as she is rejoicing over her victory, he turns from her wearily, telling her that he has no intention of doing her the wrong of taking her to wife, that he believes in no such material barter; but that, if she had stood his test of her character, he would have made her his heir. She is, of course, furiously angry and disappointed.

Now thoroughly disillusioned, David Helmsley leaves all his business affairs in the hands of his trusted solicitor and sets out to travel alone for unknown parts. As a matter of fact, he suddenly drops from sight, leaving no trace; discards his identity and reappears as an aged tramp struggling along an English highway.

Here he meets with an aged herb-gatherer who shows him kindness out of pure humanity, pitying his age and helplessness, guessing that he has probably been turned out of his last place because of this. He leads him to a humble inn, where the landlady, a businesslike but tender-hearted old maid, again treats him with special kindness and attention, and a crowd of poor men, staying at the inn over night, take up a humble little collection for him, after he has fallen asleep, and leave it in his pocket. The leader in taking this collection is Tom O' the Gleam, a gypsy whose pathetic and romantic story Helmsley hears. Tom is said to be of good birth, and to have joined the gipsies after a quarrel with his family. He loved a gypsy girl, who died shortly after the birth of their child, since then his only treasure. A little further along the way, stopping at an inn, Helmsley is witness of a tragic scene of which Tom O' the Gleam is the leading part. Some automobile speeders are staying at the inn, and Tom, entering, ascertains who it is that was chauffeur, and then kills this man with a knife, nearly severing the head from the body in a scene of insane fury. It appears the man—a noble lord—has run over and killed his child, never pausing even to ascertain what harm he has done. The terrific mad pace at which Tom has followed the slayers of his boy, keeping them in sight until their machine broke down near the inn, has been too much for him, and he dies shortly after giving himself up to the authorities, doing a prolonged death scene all over the stage, tearing his melodramatic passion to tatters in a manner to disgust any but the sickliest taste for the abnormal.

Helmsley, continuing his journey, is rescued from death in a storm by a little dog that he has found and taken under his protection. The dog calls attention to him as he lies senseless in the road, and a tender-hearted young woman conveys him to her cottage, where she nurses him back to health. This woman, Mary Deane, thirty-four and unmarried, lives alone, and is as glad as he to have found some one to love. He reminds her of her own father, and she pretends to the neighbors that he is an old friend of that father who has come to live with her. She insists on keeping him with her even after he is practically recovered, allowing him to earn a little to help pay for his board, but cheerfully and gladly assuming the main burden of his support. A poor but ambitious and gifted author is one of Mary's visitors; in course of time Helmsley uncovers here a romance and hears the man, Angus Reay, compare her tender and true heart with the cold heartlessness of the girl to whom he was earlier betrothed, Lucy Sorrel, who threw him over because she said she was going to marry the multi-millionaire, David Helmsley. When matters come to an understanding between these two, Helmsley—"Old David," as he is called—offers again to go away, but they beg him to remain and make his home with them. While they are waiting for money enough to marry on, Helmsley steals off and makes his will, then returns and presently dies in another prolonged agony of melodramatic farewell.

And now comes the melodramatic climax. Mary Deane is summoned to London and learns that she is hier to a great fortune; is overwhelmed, distressed, does not wish to be rich, begs and prays not to be rich, weeps at the sad news, finally accepts the fortune for the sake of the man she loves, in order that she may help him to success, and at once makes her will in his favor for fear something might happen to her and he thereby lose the money. Returning home, she finds her lover as much overwhelmed as was she at the change in her fortunes. He felt himself unworthy enough of her before, but he considers that now he will be a drag on her, and he is too proud for that. Broken-hearted that the money should have come between them, Mary Deane writes a farewell letter to her lover, and then goes out into the night and storm to drown herself in the crashing billows. Angus receives the letter, rushes out in frenzy in time to interrupt a long final melodramatic soliloquy—

"'I wish I did not love him so dearly. I wish the world were not so beautiful. I wish I could stay—but I must go—I must go.' Here there was a little sobbing cry—'You are so deep and cruel, you sea! You have drowned so many brave men. You will not be long in drowning poor me, will you? I don't want to struggle with you. Cover me up quickly—and let me forget—oh, no, no! Dear God, don't let me forget Angus!—I want to remember him always!'

"She swayed towards the brink—one second more—and then, with a swift, strong clasp and passionate cry Angus caught her in his arms. 'Mary! Mary! my love! my wife! Anything but that, Mary! Anything but that!'"

Could anything be worse than this! The reader wonders how it is possible that an author who has been writing for the number of years that Marie Corelli has had for drill in technique could still be so palpably ignorant of this last, so obviously blind to the crudeness of such work as "The Treasure of Heaven" is from beginning to end.

The Girl Detective.

The woman detective has not yet figured to any large extent in novels of mystery; and this initial appearance of Frances Baird should prove therefore a considerable success. The story is clumsy in parts, especially in the earlier theories adopted by the girl detective and her co-laborer, Kemp, to account for the crime about which the story is woven; even the merest novice in detective work would hardly be so imbecile as not to observe the large and obvious gaps in the fanciful theories they weave; but this is the prime weakness of most detective stories, the initial misleading of the reader being the most difficult feat to accomplish; and, take the book as a whole, the mystery is very creditably handled and interest in its gradual unfolding sustained. Perhaps, indeed, a second legitimate criticism on the story as a whole would be that the mystery is a little too well and too long sustained; for in the end, so many new and unexpected features of the case are brought out that logical probability is far overpassed.

Murder and robbery are the themes of the plot—but not the two combined. The theft of a wonderful set of diamonds, a wedding gift which Miss Baird and her confederate, Kemp, are set to watch during the presence of the wedding guests, first disappears, and a few moments later a member of the family, present at the discovery of the theft, is murdered. This furnishes the unique beginning of the story. Two unhappy lovers are entangled in the web of the mystery, and the shadow of the double crime hangs for a long time over both; a further romance is furnished by the love of the young detective herself for the hero of the tale. This is somewhat daring feature of the plot—the introduction of the calmly acknowledged though unrequited love of a woman for a man, without even the death of the young woman to reconcile a conventional public to so shocking an irregularity of spontaneous emotion. Taken as a whole, the book is entertaining reading, good for the diversion of too overwearied brains.

Opie Read.

BY THE ETERNAL. By Opie Read. Laird & Lee, Chicago. (Price $1.50.)

A favorite expression of Gen. Andrew Jackson has been taken by Opie Read as the title of his novel turning on the life of that leader of men; and, according to the announcements of the publishers, Mr. Read has had access to many personal records and unpublished manuscripts connected with Gen. Jackson's family, in writing the book. The story is put into the mouth of Staggs, a youthful protégé of Old Hickory, and about this young hero Mr. Read has woven an interesting romance of love, with a second pair of lovers amusing the audience with their semi-humorous adventures. Mr. Read certainly has succeeded in bringing out some little known sides of Andrew Jackson's character, in exhibiting some of his weakness—and at the some time in making of him a strong figure, a man. Most of us would prefer to hear about a character of this kind through authentic history rather than through a tale of fancy woven about a core of fact; yet, as a romance, the book is fair work, very readable, and will undoubtedly serve in some measure to increase popular interest in the great Democrat.

CHRISTIAN ETHICS.

An Inquiry.

THE CHURCH AND THE SOCIAL PROBLEM. By Samuel Plantz, president of Lawrence University. Jennings & Graham, Cincinnati. (Price $1.25.)

Here is a much-needed, an able ethical inquiry into the attitude, responsibilities and methods of the church with regard to modern social problems. Those who do not agree with Dr. Plantz will assuredly at least recognize the earnestness and sincerity of the book, and these two qualities are of all the most valuable for the final attainment of truth, whatever the temporary differences of opinion that may arise. Dr. Plantz has evidently studied social theories, more especially the socialistic theory, which he combats throughout the book, with a thoroughness represented by few writers on the theological side of the question; and his conclusions are deeply interesting.

The general tone of the book is most hopeful, although the author recognizes the symptoms of great unrest and constant conflict in present conditions; he terms the period one of "social reconstruction." As a particularly encouraging sign of the times he notes that the social problem as considered today "is regarded not simply as an economic question, but also as an ethical one. . . . and the effect is to make social science not simply a theory how a State cannot attain the largest material possessions, but how it can produce the noblest type of men, give all its citizens a fair chance in the competitions of life. It has come to be felt that the glory of a nation is not simply in its wealth and commercial prosperity, but in the growing intelligence, happiness and moral worth of all the people. A nation may be rich and it may be a curse in the face of civilization; for it may have that wealth in the hands of a few, and wring it out of the life and strength of an oppressed people. The civilization that can produce the greatest intelligence and virtue among all classes is clearly the highest; and therefore the primary question of society must always be, how can conditions be developed which will give the largest number of men the best chance for support and self-improvement."

Dr. Plantz sees in the indifference of the laborers of the nation to the church one of the problems of the age. This indifference arises, he believes, from the spread of ideas which have broken down the authority of the Bible and the church; and the intrusion of class feeling into the church and the predominance of the well-to-do among the congregations; this class character antagonizes the laboring man.

The modern drift towards socialism Dr. Plantz regards as an especial poblem of the church, and this tendency he terms distinctly anti-Christian, since it lays all emphasis upon the power of environment, while Christianity lays emphasis upon the human will. The teachings of Christ were individualistic, beginning all reform with the regeneration of the will, working from within outward, from the spiitual to the material: while socialism is materialistic, makes happiness in the present life its ideal, forgets the individual in consideration of the whole.

A cure for the present split between the church and the laboring classes Dr. Plantz finds in the growing practical reform and philanthropic efforts of all sects; this practical activity must be increased; and class feeling must be banished from congregations as such. "All men are equal before God, and they should be in his sanctuaries. The poor should find here a sympathizing brother. Love should break down the barriers of kid-gloved aristocracy. Life should go out and touch life." Again, the church must adapt itself to the present age in its methods, religion must be practical, and sermons must come down into the common life of men and "hit them where they live."

The church can furthermore greatly improve the condition of the laboring classes by teaching the laborer the dignity of labor, teaching him to respect himself, teaching him to improve himself mentally and physically as well as morally; and "the church can also do something in the emergency that is on us by stoutly maintaining the right of men to work, free from the dictation of labor organizations and labor leaders."

The pith of all this Dr. Plantz finds again in the law of love, not as a theory but as a living fact in the lives of church members toward their fellow-men.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

"The Jungle" continues its rapid journey toward the 100,000 mark.

The Century Company will publish this fall the "Addresses of John Hay," gathering into permanent form over a score of the late statesman's formal discussions of public men and matters, written and delivered during his later and riper years.

The new Thumbnails this year will be Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country," Emerson's "Friendship" and "Character," and the Proverbs of Solomon. The cover designs are again the work of Blanche McManus Mansfield.

Gen. A. W. Greeley, Arctic explorer, for many years chief signal officer of the United States Army, and at present in charge of the Pacific division, with headquarters at San Francisco, has prepared a "Handbook of Polar Discoveries" which Little, Brown & Company, Boston, will issue this fall. This book will contain an authoritative resumé of Polar explorations from the earliest voyages to the present time, it being based on his earlier "Handbook of Arctic Discoveries." The material has been brought up to date and a summary has been added of the brilliant achievements of adventurers in the frozen North within the ten years that have elapsed since it was published.

The new two-volume edition of W. B. Yeats to be issued this fall by the Macmillan Company will, it is promised, contain the entire works in verse of the Irish poet. The first volume will be devoted to lyrics and miscellaneous poems, while the second volume will contain those remarkable dramas in verse, "The Countess Cathleen," "The Land of Heart's Desire," "The King's Threshold," "On Baile's Strand," and "The Shadowy Waters."

Helen Nicolay's "The Boy's Life of Lincoln," largely based upon the standard life of Lincoln written by John G. Nicolay and John Hay, will be among the important issues for young people this fall. Capt. Harold Hammond's "Further Fortunes of Pinkey Perkins" and Ralph Henry Barbour's "The Crimson Sweater," are also to appear in book form this fall.

The C. N. Caspar Company, No. 431 East Water street, of Milwaukee, publishes a particularly good album of the San Francisco disaster, fifty-five remarkably clear photogravures, at the price of 50 cents.

George Kennan's "Siberia and the Exile System," which first appeared serially in the Century Magazine twenty years ago and has had a continuous scale in book form ever since, is having an extraordinary success just now in Russia. Three translations of it have appeared in St. Petersburg during the present year, and a fourth is under way, in which biographical and bibliographical data are to be included. In addition to all these translations the book is running as a serial in "Vsoobschaya Bibliotek." Mr. Kennan's work has played and will yet play a part in the liberation of Russia.

The death of Ibsen has served to direct renewed attention to one of the most remarkable critical works ever produced: George Brandes' study of the Norwegian poet and dramatist. The plan and scope of this work are unique. It is in three parts, written at intervals of sixteen to eighteen years, and covering practically the whole of Ibsen's career. The earlier sections, like the last, have been allowed to stand as they were written, and thus represent the critic's judgment of his subject "from phase to phase," as William Archer puts it. Undoubtedly this utterance of one of the foremost contemporary critics, the recognized champion and spokesman of the dramatist, is the most important of all books about Ibsen. The English translation, published by the Macmillan Company, is united in a single volume with Brandes' acute study of another great Norwegian author, Björnson.

Mark Twain has written the following characteristic letter to Upton Sinclair concerning "The Jungle."

DUBLIN (N. H.) June 22, 1906.

Dear Mr. Sinclair: In dictating the morning's chapter in my autobiography one day last week, I uttered a paragraph, which indicates that I realize the magnitude and effectiveness of the earthquake which "The Jungle" has set going under the Canned Polecat Trust of Chicago. Also it is noticeable that at last Europe is getting uneasy about the condition of our commercial morals, and is even beginning to wonder if we really have any. The Sun's London correspondent mentions a few of our American events of the past twelvemonth, such as the limitless rottenness of our great insurance companies, whose theft has been carried on by our most distinguished commercial men as a profession; the exposures of conscienceless graft—colossal graft—in great municipalities like Philadelphia, St. Louis and other large cities; the recent exposure of millionfold graft in the great Pennsylvania Railroad system; with minor uncoverings of commercial swindles, from one end of the United States to the other; and finally today's lucid exposure by Upton Sinclair, of the most titanic and death-dealing swindle of them all—the Beef Trust—an exposure which has moved the President to demand of a reluctant Congress, a law which shall protect America and Europe from the undertaker.

Sincerely yours,

S. L. CLEMENS.

"Dear Autocrat of quaint old Chester town,
We love thy gentle ways, thy homely speech;
Thy goodness us to high things doth beseech;
Unmindful of thy sacerdotal gown,
Thou saw'st thy people's frailties with mild frown;
Unto their hidden motives thou didst reach;
They learned indeed what one true life can teach
When from calm heights of age it looketh down.
"How happy they, who knew thee face to face!
Thou didst not care for class or creed or dress;
The heart o'erflowed with simple humanness,
And salt of humor was thy final grace.
No character in Fiction's realm we see:
A Man thou wert—would there were more like thee!"

NEW MAGAZINES.

"Preparing the Desert for the Farmer," on government reclamation work, by F. H. Newell, and "Making a Farm That Pays," by L. H. Bailey, are leading articles in the current Outlook. "Model Kitchens," by Katharine C. Budd, ought to be of quite as much interest, in this age where we are prehistoric in comparison with methods in other fields of labor. Music lovers will find an excellent article on "Three Great Orchestral Leaders, Felix Weingartner, Karl Muck, Wassili and Safonoff."

"Audrey Craven," May Sinclair's very good recently-published novel, is running as a serial in Ainslee's Magazine.

The Pacific Monthly for September is almost entirely devoted to the subject of western land reclamation, and there is a long series of authoritative articles on reclamation in different States, the symposium being led by Morris H. Bien, supervising engineer in charge of land and legal matters of the reclamation service, and by F. H. Newell, chief engineer of the service. The other articles are also by leaders in the work of reclamation; and this series is followed by an article in direct line with it—"Foreign Immigration and the Arid States," by Charles Wood Eberlein; and by an interview with Senator Elmer J. Burkett of Nebraska on "Diversification of Crops." The leader of the issue is an article by Francis G. Newlands on "National Irrigation as a Social Problem." All the articles are profusely illustrated. No Californian can afford to miss reading this discussion of some of the most vital problems of the West. William Winter, the poet and dramatic critic—as much literary man as critic—contributes an article to the magazine on quite a different topic—a review of the winter's dramatic season, under the title "The New York Stage, Its Power and Influence."

Artists will find a splendidly illustrated article on the work of Franz von Lenmach as leader in the September Munsey's Magazine.

A new serial by John Fox, Jr., author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," opens the September number of Scribner's Magazine. It is entitled "A Knight of the Cumberland." The heroine of the story is a northern girl, but all the action takes place in the Gap and in the mountains. The story will run through three numbers.

Ernest Thompson Seton has made for the number a wonderfully complete study of the habits of the white-tailed deer, generally known as the Virginia deer. He estimates that there are now 500,000 white-tailed deer north of the Rio Grande, of which one-fifth are in the State of Maine. It is just thirty years since Bell exhibited at the Centennial a crude instrument over which the Emperor of Brazil spoke from one end of the large building to the other. John Vaughn, in a paper of great interest, describes the marvelous growth of the telephone and shows its relation to the complex commercial development of the time.

Two short stories in the September Outing are particulary worth reading, "The Silver Fox" by Lawrence Mott and "The Orientalizing of Budge," by W. A. Fraser. In "A Day With a Devonshire Farmer," by Arthur Goodrich, author of "The Balance of Power," one learns something of country life on the other side of the water. "Some Lakeside Waders of the Northwest," by Herbert K. Job, describes with ample illustrations by the author the homes and habits of some Wilson's phalaropes arocets willets and other lake and pond birds.

Nearly all of us probably have heard a little about the wonderful woman expert of the Dead Letter Office at Washington but an article in the Housekeeper for September describes with some detail her work and gives illustrations of it. So important is she considered that she has been twice sent to Europe by the department in order that her health might be restored. "The Woman at the Loom" finely illustrated reviews several new adaptations of the old art of weaving as represented in new rugs and other articles produced in this country—the weaving industries of Berea College, Ky.; of Orangeberg, S. C., started by Mrs. Robert H. Jennings of Rome, Ga.; of Russellville, Tenn.; of Center Lowell, Me., under direction of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Volk of New York, etc. These are, for the most part, hand-loom industries carried on in the home by women, and have been taken up by some of the women's clubs as means of assisting women in development of home art and profitable home labor.

About five tons of artificial silk are now manufactured daily in Europe, and the demand far exceeds the supply. This is one of the many modern products of cellulose, that wonderful substance of which the microscopic cells of plants are made, and which composes about one-third of all the vegetable and animal matter in the world. Robert Kennedy Duncan, now professor of industrial chemistry in the University of Kansas, writing of "The Wonders of Cellulose" in Harper's Magazine for September, points out its possibilities for the manufacturer. For instance, he writes: "A pine tree is worth $10 a ton; cut and stripped it is worth $15; boiled into pulp, it is worth $40; bleached, it is worth $55; which, turned into viscose and spun into silk, is worth $5500." Prof. Duncan argues for a closer working relation between the technical departments of the universities and the manufacturer who stands ignorantly at the door of great industrial developments which can only arrive by the aid of modern chemistry.

He was a very silver-gilded youth; on his face a look of anxiety as he entered a hairdresser's shop in Bond street. Earnestly he put the question to an assistant:

"You supply Miss Birdie Beano of the Gaiety Theater with powder, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is it quite harmless?"

"Absolutely. It is invaluable for the complexion." Yet he was not satisfied.

"But is it digestible?" he inquired.

"Digestible, sir?"

"Yes. Is it digestible, if taken internally?" The assistant opened wide eyes of astonishment.

"But Biss Birdie Beano doesn't take it internally!" he exclaimed.

"No, no, no, of course, she doesn't. But I have to."—[Pall Mall Gazette.

CALIFORNIA NATAL DAY.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

California is fifty-six years old today, having been admitted to the Union as the eighteenth admitted State on September 9, 1850. Practically, California is just of the same age as is the Republican party, under whose auspices her great present has been attained and her wider future will be developed.

Great things have happened in and to the nation since the day of California's birth, through all of which she has moved with even tread along the path of progress and success. Minor drawbacks she has had at various times, but they but served to nerve her sons to greater effort and accomplishment.

On this day of rejoicing it is profitable to briefly review California's record of history achievement and resources. "Las Sergus de Espladian," a Spanish romance, was published in 1510, in which the author speaks of "the great island of California, where a great abundance of gold and precious stones is found." The name "California" struck the fancy of the companions and officers of Cortez, who applied it to the newly-discovered country, probably on account of its association with a region fabulously rich in gold, the early Spanish discoverers in America always expecting to find an El Dorado in every new region they entered.

At first the name "California" was applied to the coast and a narrow strip inland, north of Mexico, gradually it was extended over what is now called the "Great Basin," and with no well-defined limits to the north. Today the name means only the State of California, and the peninsula is known as Lower California. Spanish Americans still know the whole region as Upper and Lower California, and the two were once called "Las Californias"—the Californias. The coast of Lower California was first discovered in 1534, by one of Cortez's expeditions, while himself discovered and navigated the Gulf of California. The mouth of the Colorado River was discovered in 1540, by a fleet sent out by Mendoza for geographical exploration. In 1542 the coast of California proper was explored by Cabrillo, as far north as Cape Mendocino in latitude 44 degs. In 1578 Sir Francis Drake entered the Pacific and coasted along the shores of the American continent to a point as far north as 48 degs. Whether he discovered the bar and harbor of San Francisco is still a matter of dispute. In 1602 the bays of San Diego and Monterey were discovered by Visciano, but 150 years passed before they were visited again and settlements began on the coast of Upper California—the California of today.

It was in 1769 that the order of Franciscans, moving out from Lower California, founded the first of their twenty-one missions, in Upper California, the last one being founded in 1820. They lost ground from year to year, and were finally broken up altogether in 1840. The converts were simply the slaves of the "good fathers," who accumulated much material wealth without in the slightest degree intellectually advancing the natives. The condition of things found in the Philippines when American occupation began on August 12, 1898, tells much the same story. The "good fathers" of California selected for their mission sites the very garden spots of the country.

The aboriginal inhabitants of California have virtually disappeared, though as late as 1823 they numbered more than 100,000. While the missions of California were flourishing the connection of the country with Spain through Mexico, was a very loose one. Gradually a trade of some importance sprang up between the Atlantic and Pacific sides of the continent. For many years Boston had a monopoly of the business, which consisted mainly of exchanging groceries (and New Bedford rum,) and cotton goods; for furs and hides. The voyage usually lasted two years or more, and the profits were large.

A few Americans and Englishmen wandered into California between 1810 and 1830, of all these early pioneers (only about 500 in 1830,) John A. Sutter is the best known, because the first effective discovery of gold by Americans was made by men in his employ, and also on account of his generous hospitality to the first comers into California, notably Fremont and his party.

In 1842 Commodore Jones of the American navy captured the fort of Monterey, hoisted the Stars and Stripes, and took possession of the country for the United States; but the next day he hauled down his colors and apologized for his mistake. About this time the attention of the United States government began to be strongly attracted towards California, where it was universally believed that both the French and English governments were figuring to seize the country. Very shortly, the United States government, having decided to go to war against Mexico, and fully aware of the importance to the United States of territory on the Pacific, resolved to take possession of California, with a view to retaining it as a part settlement of the war, which they fully expected to win, and did win. Under Washington orders, Gen. Fremont took such possession of Monterey on July 7, 1846. There was some fighting after with native Californians, but in less than a year the country was entirely pacified. Fremont is justly regarded here as the real conqueror of California.

In March, 1848, a treaty was ratified between the United States and Mexico, by which the whole of Upper California was ceded to the United States, just at the moment when the discovery of gold on the American River was attracting attention. When the ratification news came, it found San Francisco empty, the whole population being in the mountains, digging for gold.

A furious conflict began in Congress in 1846, continuing through two sessions, on the question of slavery or no slavery in California. In fact, as late as March 4, 1849, nothing had been settled as to the government of the new territory except to extend the Federal laws over it and make San Francisco a port of entry. At last the Californians banded themselves together, and in September, 1849, a constitution was framed forbidding slavery (all honor to those "forty-niners,") and in other respects resembling the constitutions of the free American States. Had slavery been permitted the "California of today," with its progress, its education, its equal rights, its American Americanism, would not be in evidence.

On the 7th of September, 1850, a bill finally passed Congress, which was signed by President Fillmore on the 9th of September, and California was a State of the United States, without slavery. That is the birthday of American California, the fifty-sixth anniversary of which we observe today, and shall celebrate tomorrow.

Our State has an area of 153,600 square miles, with a Pacific Coast line of 1097 miles, extending through nine and one-half degrees of latitude. The State's average breadth is 200 miles. This gives us a territory of 98,340,000 acres, besides 4760 square miles of lakes, islands, bays, navigable rivers, salt marsh and tide lands, making the total area 158,360 square miles, or 101,350,400 acres. California is second among the States in size, comprising 4.4 per cent. of the entire area of continental United States, and is larger than the combined States of Connecticut, Delaware, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island, Ohio and Vermont. It is traversed by two great mountain ranges, the Sierra Nevada, or "Snowy Mountains," to the eastern, and the Coast Range in the western part of the State. These two ranges join north and south and become one chain, the San Bernardino Range. The highest peak is Mount Whitney, 14,898 feet high, the highest point of land in the United States, and within only seventy miles of Death Valley, the lowest, 400 feet below the sea, and a waterless, barren desert.

Of Southern California, it is hardly necessary to write—its beauty, its climate, its flowers, its fruits, its wealth of minerals hardly yet touched, its sanatorium cities, Los Angeles, Monterey, San Diego, San Bernardino and Santa Barbara, its wealth of education, its prosperous banks, its busy factories, and its enterprising body of American Americans, speak for themselves, and are "household words" throughout the world.

Nor is it necessary in this birthday remembrance to address statistics of the marvelous growth of California's interests, commercial, industrial, financial, educational, social, moral and religious. California has been a typical American State from the day it was born.

From less than 100,000 population then, California now has nearly 2,000,000 people, but it is a people of virility, vigor and vigilance; virility to endure, vigor to achieve, and vigilance to guard its rights and the place it holds in the great f States of the American Union.

Cuba is too valu to be made If the Cubans fact there are all the world is speedy development so matchless an area of territory awaiting the application of labor tempted by money. Cuba has a tillable area almost if not quite equal to that of Java—Cuba has a scattered population of perhaps 1,750,000, Java supports a swarm of nearly 30,000,000. Cuba is inevitably destined to become the agricultural Golconda of the earth, and from her exhaustless soil there will be taken riches beyond the present wildest of estimates. Nor is this all. Havana, Matanzas and other beautiful cities are destined to become places of winter residence for tens of thousands of our citizens who can afford to escape from the discomforts and dangers of our northern climate. In every avenue which makes for civilization and advancement there is awaiting for Cuba so great a development that no statement can fairly be deemed an exaggeration. The Cuban Rip Vanwinkle will be more dazed when he awakes than was the sleeper on the slopes of the Catskills.

Such is the first reason why the future spells peace for Cuba. The second reason is associated with the one just given and may be briefly stated. The development of Cuba will be the result of the investment of American money in undertakings, which will be executed by the application of American genius, skill and labor. Native Cubans and Spaniards will share in this work, and citizens of Canada, England and other countries will flock to this center of activity, but American enterprise will bear the brunt of the task and will reap the bulk of the rewards. There has been invested in Cuba within the last five years from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000, and the amount of this year's installment on the purchase price of Cuba will not fall far short of $50,000,000. There are a lot of eloquent arguments in that amount of money which proclaim against the continuation of a system of government which is likely to erupt at any moment. Massed capital, selfish and calculating as it is, has one redeeming feature—it wishes peace, because peace means profits, while war menaces them.

The time is not far distant when a large part of the productive land of Cuba will be owned by American citizens. It need not be assumed that our investors will obtain these lands by sharp practice or through the ignorance of the present holders concerning their value. There does not exist a sharper bargainer than the Cuban, be he merchant or land owner. Both are immeasurably better off than before the American flag floated above the roofs of Havana. Undeveloped lands then had no market price. Tracts which five years ago could have been purchased for less than a dollar an acre now command from ten to one hundred dollars, and these figures will be multiplied before the end of this decade.

In most of the great enterprises now under way the original Cuban owners are allied with the American purchasers. This is true of sugar plantations, orange groves, railroads, mines, hotels and the numberless enterprises, which are springing into being. Cubans who never dreamed that the jungles which stood in their name would be of appreciable value suddenly find themselves men of wealth and affairs. Farm laborers who once were glad to accept forty or fifty cents a day now receive more than double this amount, and their standard of living has been so improved that they find it difficult to realize what has taken place. Five years ago an overland journey from Havana to Santiago took weeks, now it is a railroad trip of less than a day. In these few short years American enterprise has opened a vast wilderness to the possibility of development. Is it reasonable to suppose that this development will long be checked because disappointed politicians have incited a small proportion of the natives to armed revolt?

Let us consider the third factor in this Cuban situation. Thus far I have called attention to the stupendous natural wealth of the island; also have pointed out that far-sighted American investors have risked millions in purchases and have predicted that the movement will not cease until out citizens hold the title deeds to a large share of the productive assets of Cuba. Our investors were impelled to take this step by reason of their belief that the Platt Amendment meant what it said. They considered an investment in Cuba as safe as one on Manhattan Island, and unless I am mistaken they will not long be disappointed.

The United States kept faith and gave full effect to its promises when it turned over to the people of Cuba, the administration of the affairs of the newly created republic. It withdrew its troops and its ships. Before doing this we gave them a splendid example of what can be done by an efficient government. When Havana was wrested from Spain, it was one of the foulest cities in the world, the dreaded breeding place of yellow fever. During the period of American intervention it became one of the most healthful of cities. Yellow fever was stamped out, and our scientists discovered the cause and the remedy for this disease. Havana was beautified by splendid boulevards and steps were taken which will soon make her the winter capital of the New World. The Cuban government came into existence without a national debt of any amount, with ample money in its treasury, with the best wishes of all the world and with the pledged support of its powerful ally, the United States.

What is the matter with Cuba? Why was the present revolt not only possible but inevitable? Are the Cubans capable of self-government? These are important questions, and they must be answered.

There are three things the matter with Cuba. In the first place her people are not immune from that predilection of all Latin-American countries which makes them prefer an appeal to arms rather than recourse to the peaceful arbitration of the ballot box. In the second place too many of the male inhabitants of Cuba of voting age desire to hold political or military positions, and there are not and never will be enough paid positions to go around. In the third place there are several thousand men on the island who have been engaged in wars since they were boys, and who do not know how to do anything else and who do not care to learn. That is what is the matter with Cuba. It is not as serious as it sounds, but it is serious enough to make it reasonably certain that Cuba is not fitted to administer what our conservative financiers and statesmen would call a "safe and sane national government."

Ever since Columbus discovered Cuba it has been a battlefield. For one hundred and fifty years prior to the Spanish-American war the native Cubans and the negroes were at almost constant warfare against the Spanish authorities. Time and again, until the record is tiresome, the island was devasted. Sugar cane fields and mills were burned, tobacco plantations laid waste and the land marked with ruin from Capes Maisi to San Antonio. Yet such was the natural productivity of the soil that fortunes were made in the intervals of peace, and billions of wealth poured into Spain from the land it misgoverned. Our war with Spain waged to the purpose that the long era of oppression, bloodshed and lawlessness should forever end. In order that we might be acquitted of any national ambition for new territory we freely permitted Cuba to attempt the task and to assume the responsibilities of self-government. If we made a mistake it is not too late to rectify it.

There is the best reason in the world why the patriotic Cuban should desire to hold office and to enjoy the sensation of being a responsible factor in administering the affairs of an independent government. It is the first time in all history that he has had a chance. During all the long years that Spain ruled Cuba it rigidly decreed that only Spaniards born in Spain should hold any office, civil, military or ecclesiastical. Even the sons of pure-blooded Spainiards who were so unfortunate as to be born in Cuba were forever debarred from holding official position in the land of their birth. The old saying ran: "A Spainiard can do anything in Cuba save raise a Spanish son." And now that the Cubans are sovereign citizens of an independent republic they are eager to quench their century-long thirst.

It is probably true that there was sharp practice and open fraud in the last national election in Cuba. There is good reason to believe that President Palma of the Moderates is not the choice of the majority of the qualified voters of the new republic, but it is equally certain that an armed revolt would have followed the election of any Liberal candidate who might have been named. The race issue is a vital one in Cuba, and the unsatisfied ambitions of the negro leaders is that the bottom of much of the present difficulty. There are scores of complications and jealousies which enter into this problem, but they all tend to confirm the one conclusion, and that is that the character of the Cuban population is such as to render the continued experiment of national self-government too hazardous to be tolerated by the United States. This is not the language of diplomacy, but it expresses a truth which will be recognized sooner or later.

Let us take a specific instance and measure the effect of this and of possible future insurrections as it applies to citizens of the United States. Six years ago Sir William Van Horne became convinced that with the permanent establishment of peace there was a great future for railroads in Cuba. He submitted his plans to American and Canadian capitalists, and they pledged millions for a railroad to connect Havana with Santiago. The road was built and is now in successful operation. Thousands of American citizens have made investments within reach of the new road, and most of them have made Cuba their place of residence. The most feeble of armed revolts is sufficient to cripple the railroad and to throttle the activities of all those who are dependent on it. The capture of Santa Clara by revolutionists would mean the same thing to Havana as if all the country west of the Ohio River were cut off from communication from New York City.

In the new towns of Celballos and Silveira, respectively to the north and south of the ancient city of Ciego de Anvila, are two typical American settlements. In Cebellos there have been invested millions of dollars by capitalists of New York, Boston, Cincinnati and other centers. Here are to be found great modern hotels, electric light and power plants, a mammoth refrigerator and other accessories of modern civilization new to Cuba. This section is already famous and is destined to become the most famous orange and grape fruit district in the world. Thousands of acres are now planted to fruit trees. Akron, Ohio, is represented by more than two hundred citizens who have settled in Ceballos. In Cilveira the enterprise of American capitalists has created a sugar plantation, comprising forty square miles of cane in a single tract. These great enterprises are giving employment to not less than 5000 Cuban workmen, who receive good wages and who are contented and happy.

In the town of Chaparra, on the north coast near Puerto del Padre, American have spent millions in the erection of the largest and perhaps the most successful sugar mills in the world. In the scores of towns where Americans influence predominates there has been a complete absence of the spirit of revolt or unrest.

Five years ago the sites of these towns was an impenetrable jungle. The question arises whether or not the United States will tolerate a Cuban form of government which is so little respected that a few political malcontents will dare incite brigands and professional guerrillas to espouse their cause and to wage war on the landed property of American citizens who have had faith in the efficacy of the Platt Amendment and whose enterprise has made possible the new and prosperous Cuba.

Since it is certain that revolts will menace or interrupt the efficiency of any Cuban administration, and since it is equally certain that the United States will not tolerate a repetition of the present one, no matter what its outcome, it is conclusive that the experiment of Cuban national independence is in its final stages. It is too early to forecast the method by which the United States will assume direct responsibility for the maintenance of order. A way may be found by which actual annexation may be avoided for the time being, but it must come sooner or later. The present uprising against the Palma administration will not check the influx of American settlers and American money; on the contrary, it will stimulate it. The spirit which impells our pioneers to seek wealth wherever it is to be found will not halt because of the presence in Cuba of a small element which does not yet know how to adapt itself to new conditions and which does not yet realize that is has been decreed that lawlessness shall cease.

The population of Cuba will double within the next ten years, and it will double because of American immigration. This is not a rash prediction, and even its partial fulfillment will insure actual annexation. The problem becomes simpler when it is taken into consideration that a large minority, if not an actual majority, of the present population of Cuba would today vote as a State for annexation if given a chance. All classes, save the politicians and professional soldiers, are trending toward this settlement of an otherwise insoluble problem.

There is no question that the Cubans have evinced marked aptitude in the administration of local and provincial affairs. There is every reason to believe that were Cuba a State or Territory of the United States the will of its freely elected officials and legislators would be respected and obeyed. There is not and will not be any necessity for a carpetbag regimé no matter what steps be taken by the United States to keep the pledges it made when its representatives signed the Treaty of Paris. If the dissatisfied and half-lawless factions on the island know that the armed authority of the United States will be exerted the moment they resort to force we shall have no more such tales from Cuba as those of recent date. If, on the contrary, the principle is established that the Cuban national or State administration must war with successive rebellions without help from the United States until its very existence is threatened, then actual encouragement is given to all malcontents who find their ambitions denied by the ballot boxes.

The whole situation resolves itself to this: The United States must either insure peace in Cuba or wipe its hands of the whole affair. The Platt Amendment does not mean that Uncle Sam is to act as a police officer whose sole duty it is to interfere with prizefights when the participants become too aggressive or to favor one battered fighter when his opponent is getting the better of it. Cuba agreed to behave herself. She is not doing so, and there is not the slightest reason to believe that any political faction of her people can maintain a stable and effective government. There is only one solution, and the sooner it is applied the better it will be for the people of both countries.

WHY MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN WOULD MARRY YOUNG MEN.

BY ONE OF THEM.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

WHEN a man says he loves, then rides away, we say, lightly, "Oh, well, 'Jove laughs at lovers' vows,' they say." When a woman says she loves, then "finds she was mistaken," we say: "Oh, inconstancy, thy name is woman!" forgetting that Jove may laugh quite as derisively at Juliet's vows as at Romeo's.

While both poetry and romance abound in sentiments indicative of woman's fickleness, they may usually be traced to the lips of a disappointed lover, with, perhaps, no foundation for his belief that she loves him other than his own ardent wish.

"It would break my heart to know you don't love me," sighed the fond lover.

She was tender-hearted—all lovable women are tender-hearted. She liked him. She didn't love anybody—so she made him an ambiguous answer—flashed a soft glance from eyes whose light he found bewitching, and a smile from rosy lips, and he found in these "trifles light as air, confirmation strong as proof of Holy Writ" of what he wanted to believe.

If the poor girl had said nothing, nor glanced nor smiled, he would still have said: "Oh, she is so shy—I can tell by that that she loves me."

I remember once—to dip into personal reminiscences—a man said to me: "I know you love me."

"Good gracious," I said, with real consternation. 'How did you find that out? How do you know?"

"I could tell by the way you did—the way you looked and acted when I came around," he said, and he said it very earnestly.

I had never seen the gentleman, save in the presence of others, and really did not like him a little bit. He was very homely and quite conceited—and made me nervous. But this serves to show how little foundation is necessary to a conviction that a man is loved when he wants to be.

Logically, these convictions are built on false premises, this way:

Annie said in January that she loved James (but it was a fib.) James found out in August that she didn't love him. Therefore Annie is fickle. James says she is, swears it by every arrow in Cupid's quiver. People begin to quote James's sayings, and Annie goes down to posterity a false-hearted jade who was untrue to her devoted lover, when all she had done was to usurp James's prerogative of fibbing a little.

On such fallacies usually rests the assertion of woman's fickleness. It is a fair sample of facts concerning lovers. No wonder that Jove laughs. It is enough to tickle anybody.

Life's experiences teach us that woman sacrifices and suffers more for love, that she lives lonely, forsaken, impoverished oftener to cherish the memory of an unforgotten love, that she risks far more, cares far more for the sake of her love than man does.

Let a girl who has been jilted kill herself: "Poor girl, her heart must have been broken," is the social verdict.

Let a man who has been jilted kill himself: "Why, he must have been crazy," is the undisputed comment.

"Love is of man's life a part—'tis woman's whole existence," is an accepted truth, amply indorsed by its repetition. Compare it with this:

"Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love," which is, I believe, from the Bible.

Woman's heart-history is a record of love and its contingencies. Other interests may touch her, but not so nearly.

While she may exist without love, no normal woman ever knows the full measure of earthly happiness that she is capable of enjoying without the sunshine of love's mutual interest and approval.

It is in the—possibly unconscious—realization of this fact that the cause of these marriages lies.

There is nothing in the full count of womanhood that so surely proves her fealty to love as that a woman, who has found it expedient to let the years go by barren and unblessed of the associations and experiences her heart craved, turns from pleasures that pall upon her, from ambitions that fail to satisfy, from dear-bought distinctions that prove of little interest since the first novelty passed away, to again seek the path down which the inexperienced woman's footsteps involuntarily tend at the behest of natural instinct, as the direction in which lies the fullest fruition of her being.

Some of these women have had wealth (but one can be wealthy and yet be so lonely,) and distinctions and possessions of the various kinds lauded by mankind, and yet feel that love's companionship is necessary to their complete enjoyment. But why does she not seek it in a man of suitable age? you ask.

Every woman with pride enough to pin her Sunday hat on straight is confident she possesses some superlative charm. And if an unkind critic sees the wrinkles around her eyes, some satellite of friend is as ready to mention their bright luster. If the critic says she is getting fat in her old age, the friend applies the antidote to the sting by saying:

"The new little plumpness is so very becoming to you, dear." She listens to the friend.

Whatever these women lack, it is not pride of appearance. Tirelessly she massages and diets and takes physical culture, and all the arts and skill at her command are used to improve her personal appearance—and, incidentally, to repair the ravages of time, and she keeps it up, and the woman of 45, 50, 55 years has by no means lost her hold on self-interest.

She wins the success that always waits upon tireless and intelligent effort, so that while to the initiated behind the scenes she may be a skillfully patched-up old lady, to herself—easy to convince, like the lover—she is a blooming woman, in whom the polish, suavity of manner, social tact and other charms that are only had in perfection by years of contact with the world, far outweigh any little scars time has inflicted.

There comes a time in the lives of most women, and evidently of men, too, when, like the surprising return of strength just before death, the impulses of the youthful heart reassert themselves.

Under this influence she brightens up, her voice takes on a more vivacious tone, her laugh is so ready as to be almost spontaneous, her eyes actually brighten a little—she really feels "quite gaily."

It is under this influence that men who have proudly gone through all the years of young and mature manhood arrow-proof, lay aside their chain armor and with fatuous eagerness set themselves up for targets for Cupid's arrows.

An infallible indication of this state is the gratified grin with which they welcome an allusion to a possible "sweetheart."

It is when men and women are acting under these almost forgotten and misfit impulses that people say:

"Look at that frisky old thing." We have all heard it, and some of us on the shady side have trembled prophetically.

Hope buds and blooms anew. The wine of life still flows full in her veins, though the tide may not bound so high.

Who can wonder that among the long-dormant impulses, long hushed to unwilling slumber, the strongest of them all in her nature should become a dominating force, and that under its influence she turns to marriage as offering most promise of the happiness she craves.

Among her possible suitors, each of ninety-nine of every hundred men older than she, is burdened with the harvest of the wild oats he has been sowing, as shown in a breath tainted by an endless succession of beers, in blood-shot or bleared eyes, corrugated necks, congested veins running riot over a purple expanse of countenance, equatorial dimensions that a reasonable coat is as inadequate to cover as the garment of Sinbad the Sailor was to cover the Old Man of the Sea, perched upon his shoulders.

The craving for social position or financial ease that would serve to overcome the physical repulsion such a marriage would suggest is lacking in her case.

Her contact with the world has made all the keener the perception of the middle-aged woman in regard to the personality of the elderly men about her.

Of those of middle—her own age—the great majority of eligibles are on the same quest as herself, unless for prosaic and practical reasons he would marry to secure a "settled housekeeper."

He has spent a long and arduous apprenticeship to the duties of life. Now he can take his ease and devote himself to pleasure long denied.

He wants the companionship of some bright young girl in whom enthusiasm is at high tide.

Life grows leaden; some one to lighten it. Life's fires are waning; some one to rekindle them.

The bubbling laughter, the light-hearted joyousness will help to bring back his own youth.

It is the exception and not the rule for middle-aged men to seek wives of the same age.

Perhaps she has studied Dana Gibson's "Time for Reflection," with a thrill of sympathy for the fettered young life that so early feels and regrets the galling chain that binds her.

Besides, she craves youthful joys—one who will hand in hand with her seek them. Not a fireside companion with whom to drone away the tiresome, the dreaded years.

It has been more than suggested that most of these marriages of middle-aged women and young men are the result of the hounds before the hare. This need not be true.

The most ardent, the most devoted and outspoken suitors an attractive woman of that age has—a woman who is at all popular with men—are young, perhaps even less than half her age.

In the eyes of her older suitors she reads a calm and masterly approval of herself. In the eyes of her young lover the "I am your devoted slave, my queen" kind of a look that is sweet to the soul of the woman who hopes to rehabilitate herself in the kingdom of love and youth.

She knows that however short-lived his adoration may be, it is very earnest and sincere while it lasts, and, with a consciousness that can best be expressed in the old saw, "Half a loaf is better than no bread at all," she snatches eagerly at such joys as are within her grasp, shutting out all marring thoughts.

Of course, it is queer; but we are all on the quest for such happiness as life may be made to yield to us, and if the methods of such women are alien to our ideas of the best patch to tread—if to us it seems to lead to an ignus fatuus—it is but due to the longing of a heart starved for happiness.

And when you read of the marriage of the two months' widow of David Harum, aged 72, with young Pendennis of half her years, remember that the only interest she had in common with David during long years was the name they both bore, and send her a thought of sympathy, assured that whatever his motive, hers was purely happiness, which you and I seek by more reasonable ways—we think. However short-lived her happiness may be, it cannot end more quickly than many a wiser way has.

She is growing old. By a thousand signs she is made to realize it, and dreads like death itself a certain day that must come before long. She knows it as well as you and I. It is her Nemesis. When he will change from lover to critic will stop his self-congratulations, stop counting the advantages he won by his marriage, and will note wrinkles around her eyes instead of their brightness, that she is "getting fat in her old age," instead of becoming plumpness—it is the evil day with these old brides, and they put it off as long as possible, and cling to their ghost of happiness as long as possible, by a slavery that accedes to every unreasonable demand—willing to pay the price of a broken heart when it all ends. THE OPEN SHOP—Masterful Diplomacy Defeats San Francisco Strikers

CURRENT COMMENT.

PRESIDENT PATRICK CALHOUN, of the United Railroads, San Francisco, must be classed as one of the most successful strike breakers in the country. His management of the railroad side of the carmen's strike was a masterpiece of strategic diplomacy. Realizing the fact that diplomacy is of little avail unless it is backed up by the ability to fight, Mr. Calhoun made ample preparations to fight, if it became necessary, in order to maintain the principle for which he contended—the principle that in a labor dispute only the parties directly in interest (employers and employés) should have a voice. Mr. Calhoun stated from the beginning that he was willing to submit to arbitration the questions which had been raised, but that he would in no case recognize, as parties in interest, men not in his employ. He insisted unwaveringly, from first to last, that the strikers should return to work before he would discuss terms with them or their representatives. "The men who have quit work," he declared, "are no longer our employés, and they have nothing to do with our business. Let them go back to work, and we will consent to arbitrate."

The simple justice and common sense of this attitude gained for President Calhoun, the sympathy of the public. W. D. Mahon, president of the carmen's national organization, when he became aware of the facts of the situation, ordered the strikers to go back to work, pending arbitration. Thus was the stand taken by President Calhoun completely indorsed in the councils of the strikers' national organization. The victory won by Calhoun was complete. "Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just."

The enviable reputation of Los Angeles, as a city where industrial freedom exists, was made more secure within the past week by the pitiable failure of the strike which union jawsmiths attempted to bring about in the building trades. The big bluff, which they put up was promptly called, and the trouble-breeders, when the show-down came, were found to be holding hands that were not even "ace-high." These cheap agitators had freely boasted that they would "throttle Los Angeles," would "make it like San Francisco," and would do other dire things to the city that dared to defy them. Forewarned (by The Times,) employers were forearmed. They "took the bull by the horns" without hesitation, and after they had "downed" him they found that it was a small and impotent jackass masquerading in the hide, and simulating the dreadful fierceness of El Toro. Instead of "throttling Los Angeles," the would-be throttlers were throttled. The great "strike" was a miserable fizzle, but it served one good purpose at least, for it gave the employers of Los Angeles a new and impressive illustration of the value of standing together and meeting organization with organization. This lesson is too valuable to be soon forgotten.

Discussing the subjects of unions and agreements, the Providence (R. I.) Journal declares that the repudiation of contracts by unions is bringing discredit upon organized labor. In illustration, the writer cites the action of the Musicians' Union in Providence, which at a recent firemen's muster, ordered several bands to withdraw from participation in the function, because a band, which did not take orders from the walking delegates had been engaged by one of the fire companies. The bands ordered to withdraw unhesitatingly obeyed the order, with one exception, violating their agreements. "The public does not care," observes the Journal, pertinently, "whether or not members of a band have union cards. The streets are not reserved for the exclusive use of men who have more regard for the nod of an agitator than for the terms of a contract; and thus the one band which declined to break faith stands well in the estimation of the people."

Predicting that musicians who do not regard an agreement as binding will find a diminishing demand for their services, the Journal adds that "if the bands do not desire engagements they need not accept them. But when they agree to furnish music for a parade it is their duty to observe their obligations in letter and spirit. A reputation for reliability is a valuable asset; and unions which live up to their contracts will command respect and will find others willing to do business with them. A conspicuous example was noted recently in New Haven. A body of men in the freight yards went out on strike without cause and in the direct violation of their agreement with the railway company. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen at once notified the company of its respect for the contract and obtained men to take the places of the strikers. This was the honorable course to follow; and today the public is commending the trainmen, who are much stronger than before. The moral effect of their action is stronger than the winning of half a dozen strikes; and no unions, whether composed of bricklayers, cornetists, drummers, teamsters, trombone players or blacksmiths, can afford to ignore this conspicuous precedent."

A recent dispatch from St. John, N. B., states that there is a movement among a section of Canadian trades-union men to build up a strong labor organization in that country, independent of the American Federation of Labor, and that the movement "has reached a stage where it is expected definite action will be taken. A "National Trades Congress" is to be held in St. John sometime this month "for the purpose of arranging a definite programme for an active campaign, leading to the complete freedom of Canadian labor unions from the control of the American Federation of Labor." Gompers and his crowd appear to be no more popular in Canada than they are in the United States. They would like to exercise absolute, arbitrary control over the entire Western Hemisphere, but there are a few obstacles in the way of the consummation of this desire.

Employers of labor everywhere, if they know what is expedient and for their own good, will make a firm stand for the principle of the open shop. In proportion as the unions can succeed in establishing the closed shop, industrial liberty will decline and the power of union tyranny will increase. The closed shop would close the door of opportunity to every working man not belonging to a trades union, thus compelling every wage-earner to join a union or starve. Such a state of affairs would place despotic power in the hands of a few labor bosses. It is unnecessary to say that they would abuse it. If the United States is indeed a free country, every man under the flag has an inalienable right to join a union or not to join a union, as he sees fit, and to work for whom he pleases, upon what terms he pleases. The closed shop idea is utterly repugnant to the fundamental principles of freedom and equal rights; and therefore it is un-American.

BROKEN CONTRACT.

Electrical Workers Try to Tie Up Construction Work in Portland.

The Portland Journal of August 29 contains the following:

Portland people who are breathlessly awaiting the installation of the plant of the Home Telephone Company, with its "girl-less" switchboard and its promise of better service, may have to hold their breath until spring. Labor troubles threaten to tie up the work and postpone the launching of the new system for months.

Because local union No. 125, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the Home Telephone Company had a little misunderstanding some time ago the 30 union linemen and cable splicers employed at stringing the new wires walked out. The cause of the trouble was a raise of wages from $4 to $4.50 for the cable splicers, ordered by the union, but not acceded to by the company. Since the strike the company has been plugging along as best it could. The strikers declare that the company is wholly unable to get linemen and cable splicers, though it is offering $3.50 for non-union linemen and $5 for cable splicers, 50 cents in each case above the union scale. The men on strike say that all the help the company has been able to get has been a half-dozen common laborers, who are unable to do the work properly and who have to have their tools purchased for them.

If these stories are true the advent of a new system may be postponed for more than six months, as it is very difficult to get linemen and cable splicers during the winter months, union or non-union. There is a good deal of such work now being done on the Coast and when the first cold snap comes the outdoor electrical workers usually make a hike for California or some other warmer clime. The local union officials say that all the strikers are employed or about to be employed at the regular scale on unionized jobs.

Local union No. 125, I. B. E. W., issued a statement from the meeting-rooms last night setting forth its side of the controversy and calling upon all union sympathizers to refrain from patronizing the Home Telephone company until such time as it may make peace with the union.

Robert Tucker, president of the Empire Electric Company, a telephone construction company of Toledo, Ohio, which has the contract from the Home Telephone Company of this city for the installation of the automatic telephone system and which will turn the same over to the Home Telephone Company in full operation, said in regard to the contention of the electrical workers that he did not think a discussion would avail much, but the question in a nutshell was simply this:

"The Empire Electric Company in October, 1905, entered into a written contract with the electrical workers, which was then, and they now say, is satisfactory. The duration of this contract was two years from October, 1905, and it provides a scale of wages, terms and conditions of employment. We were proceeding under this contract, the electrical workers having almost completed the construction under it, when a short time ago a representative of the electrical workers from San Francisco informed us that although the contract with us was satisfactory, they demanded a contract from the Home Telephone company.

"Mr. Sumner of the Home Telephone Company, upon his return to Portland, stated to the representative from San Francisco that the Home Telephone Company would not be employing labor until the plant was completed and turned over by the construction company; that the Home Telephone Company, when it is ready for business will have a local board of directors, who will no doubt take up the matter contended for in due season.

"At no time in the controversy was there a question of wages or conditions of employment discussed. The electrical workers submitted a form of contract, but Mr. Sumner was not disposed to consider any kind of a contract until the board was properly organized and the company in operation. The construction company has a contract and has lived up to it, but in the face of this contract the electrical workers refused to continue to work and our company is obliged to seek elsewhere for labor.

"The work is progressing nicely. From 50 to 75 applications for telephones are coming in every day and we expect to give service in certain portions of the city within a very few weeks and fully 10,000 telephones will be in full operation by January 1.

"The Empire Electric Company's employés were and are thoroughly satisfied with their wages and employment and in view of the fact that a great many of them were new men in Portland, only three of them were eligible to vote as to whether or not the strike should be declared. Two of these voted against the strike.

"In so far as a contract is concerned, our attitude is well defined and we have only asked that the electrical workers live up to their contract."

ALD. HERLIHY'S BIG MISTAKE.

EXPELLED FROM THE UNION FOR A STRANGE REASON.

Introduced Resolution in Chicago Council Asking for Law to Make Assaults Upon Women and Girls Punishable by Death—Praised by Anti-Crime Crusaders.

Alderman Daniel Herlihy of the Twenty-eighth Ward was a member in good standing of the Steam Engineers' Union until last night, says the Chicago Tribune of July 27th.

Now he is an outcast from the labor organization, and for a strange reason. He was expelled from the union because a few weeks ago he introduced into the City Council a resolution calling upon the State Legislature to make assaults upon women and girls punishable by death.

The union, through the medium of a series of sharp resolutions, "deplored the outrages upon women and children," but declared that insane asylums and hospitals are the proper places for the weak-minded persons who commit such assaults.

The meeting was held in the union's hall on La Salle street.

When Alderman Herlihy, at one of the last Council meetings before summer adjournment, introduced the resolution seeking capital punishment, he did not dream it would lead to his expulsion from his union. His action followed the many brutal attacks on women reported throughout the spring.

Herlihy was praised by some of his colleagues in the Council and by many of the anti-crime crusaders in town.

Nothing was done with the resolution except to refer it to the State Legislation Committee where it now reposes. Herlihy was awarded by newspaper pictures and by a general flood of discussion pro and con.

His expulsion last night was unexpected. The resolution providing for it was introduced by Arthur McCracken, secretary of the union, and was adopted unanimously, after a spirited discussion in which the offending alderman was berated roundly as a traitor to the trades-union movement.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The labor movement, from its birth, has stood for the highest ideals of humanity, and

"Whereas. One of the foremost ideals of mankind is to soften and humanize the human race until liberty, equality, and fraternity are woven into the warp and woof of our daily lives, and

"Whereas, A member of this organization, recently elected to the city council from the Twenty-eighth Ward of this city, has either ignorantly or defiantly of the whole spirit of the trades-union movement, introduced into the City Council resolutions requesting the extension of capital punishment, and

"Whereas, The forces working for the uplifting of humanity, the world over, are unanimously arrayed against this form of brutality; and

"Whereas, The working people themselves (except in rare instances) are the only victims of capital punishment, and

"Whereas, That while we deplore the outrages on women and children, which were given as an excuse for the introduction of said resolutions in the City Council, still we insist that insane asylums and hospitals are the proper and only places for the weak-minded creatures who commit them—any other position will be a reflection on the innate virtue of the human race.

"Resolved, That local union No. 3, International Union of Steam Engineers, do now purge itself of any and all responsibility of said resolutions by expelling Daniel Herlihy from membership in this organization.

"Resolved, That we call upon the civilized and humane citizens of the Twenty-eighth Ward to repudiate the inhuman and cowardly sentiments of their representative in the Chicago City Council.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the Chicago Federation of Labor and that body be requested to endorse the same."

McCracken spoke at length in support of his resolution, winning "hearty applause" from the assembled engineers.

"Herlihy has proved false to the principles of trade-unionism," he said. "By his introduction of the resolution he showed that he no longer was in touch with labor. He has taken a stand that union men cannot approve.

"Now I want to know what right he has to sit in the City Council, pretending to be a representative of labor. He is a deserter, and should be branded as such. It should be made known through the city that the union men do not regard him as one of their number, that they have washed their hands of him and his kind."

As a further suggestion, McCracken wants Herlihy humbled before the Federation of Labor.

"Let us bring the matter up before the central body," he said. "Let us show Herlihy up in his true light. Let us get the approval of the federation that the Alderman may be a warning to others who desert the principles of unionism and still try to sail under its colors."

The argument was one sided, though lively, and the resolutions were adopted with a rush.

LABOR CRISIS HITS ENGLAND.

Serious Situation Becoming More Serious.

Exactions of Laborites Grown to Be Intolerable.

Taxpayers' Burdens—Lesson for United States.

A London correspondent of the Boston Transcript under date of Aug. 21st, discusses at length the labor situation in England. He touches upon subjects which are of great present interest in the United States, and the letter is worthy of reproducing entire. It follows:

In America, by all accounts that come to London, the labor unions under Mr. Gompers's lead are seeking to enter the congressional campaign as an organized and independent body, prepared to nominate their own candidates where there is a chance of electing them, or insistent that a nominee of a regular party shall bind himself to its principles and polices as the price of its support. Therein, say the English newspapers, prompted by their correspondents in New York and in Washington, lie the beginnings of a Labor party in the United States, more or less similar in aims and action to that already existing in Great Britian and represented by a numerous and influential group in the present House of Commons. They quote a "manifesto" of the new party as saying: "All observers agree that the campaign of our fellow-workmen of Great Britian has had a wholesome effect upon the Government, as well as the interests of its wage-earners and the people generally of that country. In the last British election, fifty-four trade unionists were elected to Parliament. If the British workmen with their limited franchise accomplished so much, what may we in the United States not do with universal suffrage?" Englishmen smile as they read or write these things, for Mr. Gompers could hardly have chosen a more inopportune time to point his manifesto with the example of the Labor party in England. Last January, when it won its fifty-four seats in the Commons and bound many more Liberal members to it hand and foot as to certain measures, Mr. Gompers's comparison would have been more in place. Meanwhile public opinion in England has moved rapidly as to the Labor party, until in every quarter there are signs of rising resistance to it. "All observers,"' it is now nearly safe to say, unless they are trade unionists "agree" to rather the contrary to Mr. Gompers's "manifesto."

LABOR LEADERS ABLE BUT DANGEROUS.

Place and power in Parliament—and power that the Labor party was determined to exercise resolutely and unsparingly—has set it in a clearer light. It has played, so to say, upon a wider stage and to a larger and more attentive audience. In the past it has been mainly a thing of districts, of the separate constituencies and of the industrial cities and counties in which the trades unions happened to be strong. Now, by a series of coincidences, as well as by its opposition in Parliament, it has become a matter of national concern. It required an American, who chanced to talk with a few Labor members in an hour or two that he spent in the lobbies and the gallery of the House of Commons, to say that they were men of mean capacity, that they were only envious of the other classes in the community, and that to make them rich was the easiest way to change their politics. No Englishman, so far as my experience goes, whether he knows the Labor party and the trade unions intimately or not, ever speaks of their leaders or their representatives in Parliament in that way. The average of genuine capacity among them for parliamentary business, in which they are comparative novices, is certainly as considerable as that on the Liberal or the Tory benches. The average member of Parliament, whatever his party, be he peer or commoner, is no miracle of wisdom, in telligence, industry or fitness for large affairs, any more than is the average American congressman or the average French deputy. There is very considerable ability among the leaders of the Labor party, and out of them, though the breach between him and it is swiftly widening, came originally one of the most capable, influential and respected of the present ministers—John Burns. It is the very capacity of the Labor leaders to accomplish their ends that helps to make their party a rising peril. Again, no Englishman, whose opinion is worth the taking, doubts the honesty, the sincerity, the incorruptibility of the Labor members or of the trade union leaders outside Parliament. The record of English strikes since the rise of the Trade Unions is long and grim, but it is free from the briberies and intrigues between masters and men of the building trades in New York or the teamsters in Chicago. It is the earnestness of the Labor party in England and its unflinching and persistent action that have fostered the resistance to it. At no small individual sacrifice and by a weekly contribution of their fellow-unionists do many of the fifty-four sit in an unsalaried Parliament. One such member came up to London in the faith that he could limit his personal expenses to $7.50 a week. Reluctantly he found that he must ask his union for a little less than $20. And every member of the House, which is very honest and democratic on its personal side, respects his economy and the sense of duty behind it.

VICIOUS CLASS LEGISLATION.

Rather, the genuine peril of the Labor party lies in the intense narrowness of its convictions and its intense resolution to act upon them. It is honestly, but utterly, selfish in the one, and as honestly and as utterly tyrannical in the other. It world have the millennium ready made, almost while you wait, but it would confine it exclusively to the class that it represents. It is curiously unable to conceive, much less to respect, any labor that is not manual. It has no notion whatever of the work that the control of the great estate, especially in England, or of a great fortune brings. To judge by the speeches of its leaders, the tone of its newspapers, its course in practical action, it has no sense of the community as a whole. For foreign affairs it has neither interest nor aptitude. It is indifferent or suspicious toward the colonies, unless it can find precedent from some of them, as it does from Australia or New Zealand, for some measure that it advocates. It would obtain this, that, or the other for the class for which it stands, regardless of the rights of any other class, of the cost of its desires or of the fiscal burdens that they lay upon the rest of the community. For example, by the common agreement of moderate men, it is long since any Parliament has adopted such a piece of purely class legislation as that which will soon free the trade unions from any liability, except under criminal law, for the damage of their agents to persons or to property. To all intents and purposes, it sets the unions outside and above the civil law. They have demanded it ever since the Taff Vale decision of the courts, which made them and the large sums in their treasuries liable for civil damages. The Liberals promised such a law to them, in the vague generalities of smooth-spoken Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in the days when they were cultivating any group that had votes from anti-vivisectors and woman suffragists upward. Most of these fanatics it has been easy to puff away now that the Liberal party is in power again. But the Labor party has forced the fulfilment of the pledge to the last letter of the last syllable. In vain the good Sir Henry has shuffled and evaded and twisted and turned, in vain the ministers with wills and tenacity, like Mr. Asquith, Mr. Haldane and Mr. Burns, have resisted. In the end the Labor party has won the law that the Unions desire, and many Liberals and most Tories alike count it the blunder and blot of the session.

There are other measures, mainly of costly reforms or of pecuniary benefit to workingmen in the narrower sense upon which the Labor party is nearly as insistent. It would very honestly see the time of Parliament spent chiefly upon the legislation that affects the class it represents. It is frankly impatient of other parliamentary business. It will abate no jot of its demands. Already it has turned resentful toward John Burns, once high among its leaders, because he is cautious and prudent in the expenditure of the public money in doles to the unemployed, who are oftenest the unemployable. If ministers hesitated over these demands, if the rank and file of the Liberal party grow restive, the trade unionists have their whip ready to crack. The other day there a was a bye-election in the industrial constituency that includes some of the mines and foundries of Cumberland, on the northwest coast. The Liberals carried the seat last January. There was every reason to expect that they would retain it—until a Labor candidate took the field, split the Liberal vote, and insured a Tory victory. Winston Churchill is only an under-secretary, without a place in the cabinet, but he spoke for some of the ministers especially for the heirs of Lord Roseberry, when he publicly denounced such a policy of rule or ruin. Sooner or later Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman will be translated to the smug security of the House of Lords. Presumably Mr. Asquith of the strong will, the clear mind, the hard hand, will succeed him as the leader of the Commons. He is not easy to threaten or to cajole.

AN INEVITABLE REACTION.

A far graver and more persistent cause is kindling resistent to the Labor party, to the social reforms that it demands, and even to those that most Liberals and some Tories advocate almost as earnestly. Very often vigorous changes of public opinion and revolutions, themselves spring at bottom from financial burdens. Long ago Taine traced the French Revolution to the unendurable taxation the old régime laid upon the people. Men that know Russia, the little way that men of the Occident may know it, agree that the land-hunger and the poverty of the peasants is the fundamental cause of the present turbulence there. "No taxation without representation" was the motto of our own Revolution. To liken small things to great, it is the financial burden, heavy and increasing, that social reforms have laid upon the English taxpayer that bids fair to stay them and even to bring substantial reaction from those already established. England has gone far by American standards in what some would call socialistic legislation. Municipal street cars, municipal systems of lighting, municipal housing of the poor, municipal improvements and "trading" of many sorts in English cities are a fimiliar story in America. Every advocate of municipal ownership in America brings home his rose-colored tales of them. Along with all these municipal undertakings, the standard of municipal charities has risen fast. The inmates of more than one British workhouse are fed, clothed and housed better than some of those that pay taxes to maintain them. An investigation into one of them is one of the most heavily taxed boroughs of London that the Labor party has ruled for years made, this summer, a record of extravagance that has gone the length and breadth of the kingdom. There are grants to the unemployed from the general Government. There are doles of one sort and another out of the public treasuries until a Royal Commission of expert men is now sitting charged formally with a revision of the poor laws, but really to discover measures to check what common conversation calls "the manufacture of paupers." Finally nearly every measure of social reform that any Parliament, Liberal or Tory, has carried in the last twenty years has in one way or another, in one degree or another, increased the weight of taxation.

It is of that burden that we hear little in America. The student of municipal "trading" writes truly of the efficiency of British Street cars, lighting plants and all the rest. He tells as truly of the honesty with which these enterprises are conducted. The philanthropist speaks warmly of the extent and the liberality of British systems of poor relief. The altrist applauds every measure of social reform, and sees old-age pensions and other costly benefits flowing in a near future from the cornucopia of a benevolent treasury. All these things except the prophecy, are true enough. On one side they are to the good name of England and in some respects an example to us. To hear the other side, the inquirer must know, not city councillors displaying their city to the admiring stranger, not ardent philanthropists, not those who set social reforms that benefit one class in the community above the cost it lays upon others. The inquirer must go into the houses and the life of the taxpayers that meet the expenses of all these things. The chief beneficiaries, the class that the Labor party represents, make a very small indirest contribution to these taxes in a fraction of the rents or the prices that they pay. The very rich may well bear the increasing charge that steadily rising taxation lays upon them. Not upon them, but upon the middle class, from the well-to-do professional man who works with his brain harder and longer than the laborer, down to the small tradesman struggling to keep his independence, that the real burden falls. To the General Government, especially through the income tax of twenty-four cents for every five dollars above a small exempt sum, he makes his contribution. To the county and the city or the borough he pays his local taxes. Seven years ago taxation in England stood at a little more than $6 per head. Four years ago it had risen nearly to $7. There are no statistics for later years, but there is every reason to believe that the amount of taxation has continued to rise, though the African War and the expenditures due to it are long past. Deduct the many millions of "heads" that pay nothing or next to nothing, and it is easy to estimate the weight that bows the others.

A CRUSHING WEIGHT.

Now England is a very rich country. It has come to think in millions where public expenditures are concerned. It endures taxation with reasonable cheerfulness, especially in time of national stress. But the class that is paying, that has paid, and that must continue to pay the cost of municipal enterprises, municipal charities, government reliefs, doles and experiments, of social reform in general by legislation, is beginning to turn restless. Pledges of economy one votes for the Liberals in the general election. Expenditures will be the chief issue in the approaching election of the London County Coun-

MORPHINE, CODEINE AND OTHER DRUGS MAY BE SEPARATED DIRECTLY FROM THE PLANT.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

SEVERAL months ago a number of newspapers published an article stating that the Department of Agriculture was making experiments with a view to manufacturing opium here instead of importing the drug from abroad. The publication of such an article brought down thousands of letters of protest to the Secretary of Agriculture from various [illegible] societies. Inquiry, however, at the department revealed a different state of affairs than as heralded in the [illegible], as the argument is made [illegible] that had the writer of the original newspaper story carefully examined the ground and digested the work of the department, no such erroneous statement would have been made.

"We are not attempting to manufacture opium at the Department," said B. T. Galloway, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry. "Neither are we trying to grow poppies at home with a view to introducing opium-growing at home, but on the other hand our investigations, if successful, will materially reduce the amount of opium imported.

"Our investigations with the poppy plant, under the direction of Dr. R. H. True, physiologist in charge of drug plant investigations, are more in line with the separation of morphine, codeine, etc., directly from the plant itself. These alkaloids are the legitimate stock in trade of the physician and pharmacist.

"In the first place opium, it must be understood, is obtained only by hand work—an occupation which it would not pay an American to undertake. Each morning the attendant goes through the field and gives each poppy seed bulb a slight scratching with a sharp knife which causes the juice to bleed. In the evening this juice which has exuded through the incision is dry and the gatherer can scrape it off with a blunt instrument. Thus a tiny pellet is obtained from each pod. These pellets are gathered together in a pound or two lump and after subsequent treatment make the commercial opium.

"When crude opium formerly sold at [illegible] a pound such hand work could be made profitable and did so in a number of instances in America, but not now when it is selling at 2.50 a pound, as one would get little returns for the labor involved.

"Up to the present time morphine, codeine and the other alkaloids are extracted from the imported crude opium. Our investigations with the poppy plant are more in line with the separation of these directly from the plant, either when it is in the green state or when dry, even though the dry pod be two or three years old. To do this it is necessary to understand the construction of the poppy plant. It is traversed by an elaborate system of tubes carrying a white, milky fluid which oozes out whenever these tubes are cut or otherwise opened. The seed capsule when it reaches its full size contains a very liberal supply of this juice. These capsules we submit to a certain treatment in order to dissolve the ingredients of which the juice is composed. For this purpose we use either water or alcohol. We then employ various chemical reagents to extract the morphine, or other alkaloids contained therein.

"Small experiments," continued Dr. Galloway, "have indicated the practicability of obtaining a high grade of crude morphine in fair quantity from the dried capsules of poppies grown in different parts of the country, but much further experimentation will still be necessary before the success or failure of the plan is demonstrated.

"We have met with a number of setbacks recently in our poppy growing. Our experiment field in California was entirely ruined last winter by floods, while the preceding season a hot wind scorched the plants just when they were in a promising stage. In South Carolina this year the crop suffered from the excessive rains which have visited the East this summer.

"The Asiatic poppy, with which we are experimenting, must not be confused with the garden poppy. The seed capsule of our variety is sometimes three inches in diameter, while the four petals of the flower, if flattened out, measure, at times, twelve inches from tip to tip. Then too the blossom quickly fades. In most cases the petals fall off the same day that the flower comes into bloom. The Asiatic poppy is grown in various parts of Europe and the Orient, and has made a good growth in the United States. In so cold a climate as Vermont and in the warm sections of the South it has shown its ability to maintain a vigorous existence. In July and August the plants, which attain a height of four or five feet, bloom freely and produce in about four or five weeks a good crop of the large capsules characteristic of this species and its varieties.

"What these experiments might mean to the United States, should they prove to be successful, as we have every reason to believe they will, is shown by the fact that our importations in crude opium, in the alkaloids derived from opium and in poppy seed and the oil expressed from the latter, during the year 1905, were to the value of over a million and a quarter dollars, while opium prepared for smoking purposes had a value a little less. The bulk of the first mentioned amount would remain at home if we were to grow poppies and manufacture our crude morphine, etc., in the United States. Of course we could not keep people from gathering the green pods and chewing them to obtain the opium, but it should be remembered that it would take a great amount of these capsules to produce any satisfactory quantity of the drug in this way."

TO CONSERVE WATER SUPPLY.

A SUGGESTION OF THE USE OF DEBRIS DAMS.

Slow Flow of Water Through the Gravel Beds—A Possible Solution of the Question of Conserving, or Even Increasing Our Water Supply for the Future.

Following is contributed to The Times by A. E. Chapman of Redlands:

"In taking a trip up one of the narrow California cañons one can not but observe the enormous erosion that is taking place during the rainy seasons, and especially after the frequent summer rains that often assume the dimensions of a waterspout. Perhaps the latter have a more scouring or eroding effect than the winter rains, on account of the lack of protection that is naturally given by the immense snow fields, and the fact that the winter rains, while the aggregate volume is great, the precipitation is so gentle that comparatively there is little erosion in the higher altitudes.

"Before the wholesale destruction of the timber in the mountains, this erosion did not take place to any such great extent, though of course even then immense quantities of débris swept out of the mountains after every heavy rainfall.

"There is no need in this article to bring out the usual points in favor of the preservation of our forest area, except to call attention to the great importance that accumulations of débris had in the matter of conserving the water supply by the storage furnished by immense gravel beds which allowed the water to percolate out gradually averaging the flow and to a certain extent lessening the destructiveness of the annual foods that sweep down the mountain streams. This was naturally brought about by the accumulations of fallen timber, roots, etc., which in their turn held boulders, gravel, sand and silt, checking the top flow by the area of the underflow and this again aiding in the accumulation of débris until a mean was reached proportionate to the heaviness of the timber growth. The writer is of the opinion that this natural result from a heavy growth of timber has a greater effect in conserving and regulating the water flow than any other feature to be considered in favor of forest growth as of paramount importance to the irrigationist.

"Many causes aided nature in the accumulation of débris, fallen trees, limbs, etc.; snow slides, wind storms and landslides all added their quota to the accumulations in the narrow cañons of our lofty mountains.

"Nor can it be said that this effect was merely local, as would be the case were the débris held back as water is behind a dam. Rather the débris would assume practically the grade of the cañon, except where the fall was very precipitous.

"This will explain the anomaly of why heavy growths of brush on the mountain sides do not conserve the water in anything like a proportionate ratio to a growth of heavy timber; although undergrowth possibly furnishes a better protection to the soil underneath than a heavier growth of trees.

"The flow of water through gravel beds is known to be very slow, in some places, as in the San Fernando Cañon, tests showing the travel to be no more than a mile a year, thus providing a water flow that is scarcely affected by years of drouth, at the same time reducing the flow in seasons of flood by taking the excess and holding it in suspension in the beds of gravel.

"The importance of these immense deposits of gravel, in favorable locations, is well known in the irrigation problem, the only point we wish to consider is the practicability of adding to and conserving our water supply by means that are within our reach, the expense of which would not be prohibitive or beyond our means.

"This brings us to the point of the débris dam. By this we mean the dam that is commonly used by the hydraulic miner in the northern section of the State for the purpose of impounding the débris with the object of preventing the filling up of navigable streams and the causing of overflows by the blocking of the channel. That they have but a minimum effect in this regard, for reasons that it is not material to enumerate in this connection, does not lessen their importance as a means of providing an artificial substitute for previous natural conditions in restraining débris and insuring a better and more regular water supply. It is generally conceded that our present water supply is only going from bad to worse, and that the scouring that is taking place will ultimately result in it being limited to the melting snows and the storage capacity of our reservoirs. Hence the importance of this subject.

"The ordinary débris dam, of which numerous illustrations have from time to time been published in the mining journals, is possible of being constructed very cheaply, yet owing to the interlocking nature of the filling that takes place behind it, becomes a very substantial dam, practically indestructable, and can be added to from year to year as the conditions require or is desirable. It is usually built of logs or poles, the small end of the tree being placed up stream so as to be first buried in débris, thus locking it in position. These are usually nested in the cañon, all laying one way, no means being taken to tie them together, and usually are lain with a slight slope on the lower end to break the overflow and prevent cutting by the waterfall. Where timber is scarce these could be built in a modified crib shape, yet it would be necessary to have a sufficient number of trees of full length extending up stream to insure holding. Not having the advantage of a hydraulic stream it would be necessary to use a layer of heavy boulders to hold these until the natural flow of débris had filled in behind and over them.

Favorable locations could be selected for these débris dams. Nor is it essential or perhaps desirable to secure great height; rather it would be more practicable and cheaper to make as large number of these débris dams as the conditions would justify, of a moderate height, with the intention of adding to them or interspersing more dams between them from year to year.

Where roads run up these cañons it would be necessary to build a road over or around the dam, changing the road from time to time above the same, as the conditions called for, with possibly less annual expense than where the cañon is allowed to cut out at will.

"Power companies would certainly coöperate in a matter so vitally affecting their interests and in most cases could be expected to take the initiative.

"This field offers a possible practical solution of the question of conserving our water supply for the future; or if carried out in a thorough manner to go even farther and increase the water supply in years of drouth speaking conservatively, 25, 50, or 100 per cent."

LEVIATHANS OF THE DEEP.

WONDERFUL STRIDES MADE IN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

The Lusitania Breaks the Record of Trans-Atlantic Steamships. Comparisons With the Great Eastern—Accommodates 2350 Passengers—Nine Decks—A Floating City.

Probably in no branch of mechanical development have more wonderful strides been made during the past twenty-five years than in the size and speed of ocean steamships. Twenty-five years ago, nine days was considered a fairly good passage across the Atlantic, and anything below eight days was a record breaker. A few weeks ago a steamship was launched that promises to make the passage between Liverpool and New York in four days and a half.

The Lusitania and her companion ship the Mauritania, of the Cunard line, will entirely break the record of trans-Atlantic steamships in all respects. Yet, it is an interesting fact that the Lusitania is the first vessel to be constructed that excels in all respects a ship launched in England more than forty years ago. It took that time to produce a vessel bigger than the Great Eastern, a monster that was slid into the Thames in the 60's, after months of ineffectual attempts to launch her. Before the Lusitania was launched, the German vessel Kaiser Wilhelm II. was the largest steamship afloat. She was fifteen feet six inches longer than the Great Eastern, four feet deeper, had 10 per cent. more gross tonnage, nearly four times the horsepower and nearly double the speed, but she lacked in width, being ten feet narrower than the Great Eastern. The Lusitania, however, will be six feet wider than that vessel, and in all other respects vastly greater, especially in horsepower, which will be more than five times as great.

The Great Eastern was a failure from the start—a regular hoodoo. She was broken up in the Mersey, for scrap-iron, a few years ago. She was a paddle and screw ship combined, and frightfully expensive to operate. At length, a suitable task for her was found, when she laid an Atlantic cable, and another, when she carried to Asia, with the greatest of ease several regiments of soldiers and their equipments.

It is difficult to fully comprehend the immense size and capacity of a vessel that is 785 feet long. This is equivalent to the width of nearly sixteen ordinary city lots, of fifty feet frontage. Just step that off, and see what it means. A man who walks three times around the vessel has covered nearly a mile. Her depth is over sixty feet and the indicated horsepower reaches the enormous force of 68,000, which is 28,000 more than that of the Kaiser Wilhelm. Her maximum speed will be twenty-six knots, or thirty and one-half miles in an hour, as much as is made by any of the ordinary trains in Southern California. To reach this enormous speed, the Lusitania has to consume about a thousand tons of coal a day. The cost of the vessel, completed, is $6,250,000. In addition to 1500 tons of cargo, there will be accommodations for 2350 passengers, first class, second class and steerage, and a crew of 800, making a total of over three thousand souls, or enough to form quite a respectable little town. With nine decks, half a dozen elevators, electric lights, telephones and daily papers, such a vessel does, indeed, more resemble a floating city than a passenger vessel of the old type.

According to trans-Atlantic passengers, it is said that a great objection to these modern rapd vessels is the continual vibration. It is claimed that the Lusitania, which is to be driven by four screws, operated by turbine engines, will vibrate as little as an American river steamer. If so, she should become immensely popular with those who are able to afford the price. Meantime, however, old and experienced travelers, who are not able to hire a suite of expensive state rooms, will prefer to take one of the older and slower boats, on which they will get much more comfort for their money. That is to say unless they are willing to travel second class, which a good many Americans object to.

A newspaper item states that these two vessels are believed by nautical experts to set a standard that will not be surpassed for a quarter of a century, and may exist for fifty years. This is exceedingly doubtful. The probability is that, fifty years from now, people will look back at the Lusitania and her sister ship as being as far behind the times as the vessels of twenty-five years ago were, in comparison with those of today. One thing that insures a constant improvement in trans-Atlantic steamships is the rivalry between the companies. There is something of a touch of international jealousy in these leading lines, flying respectively the American, English, German and French flags. Far better that they should fight each other with turbines, rather than with 12-inch guns.

A Great Lumber State.

Donald McDonald writes as follows in the Sunset Magazine:

"The forests of the Upper Mississippi Valley, of the Great Lakes region and of the Southern States have furnished lumber for generations to the treeless prairies of the West and the denuded lands of the East. But the saw is cutting deep into the last of the tall timber of the north and more and more sunlight is being let in upon the southland. Prices for northern white pine and southern yellow pine have risen in the last few years by leaps and bounds. The lumber dealer of the East hus turned his eyes to a new source of supply. As a result, Portland, Or., in the center of the Great American Forest, has become the greatest lumber city in the union, far outstripping Minneapolis; and Portland is but at the threshold of its great industry. Oregon is the greatest lumber State in the union. During the next generation, and so far as one may judge, for all time, Portland is to hold its supremacy as the greatest sawmill city. The national hunger for lumber grows year by year, and Portland commands the gate to the forest."

Maj.-Gen. MacArthur is expected to succeed Lieut.-Gen. Corbin, who will retire September 16. The vacancy thus created will be filled by the promotion of Brig.-Gen. Jesse M. Lee.

The Delicious "Love Apple."

VARIOUS WAYS OF MAKING THE TOMATO ESPECIALLY PALATABLE FOR TABLE USE.

By Mrs. Ruth Arbogast.

IT is quite incomprehensible to the present-day lover of the tomato, or love apple, as our grandmother called it, that in their generation, it should have been considered by them as not only unfit for food but positively poisonous, being grown in their gardens only as an ornamental plant. It did not require much time after this mistake was discovered for the tomato to win universal favor and now there are few people who do not relish it in some form or another. Many prefer to eat the fruit ice cold, the slices peppered and salted, and either with or without the addition of vinegar; others would much rather have them stewed in cooked form. While August sees the tomato in its perfection, no fruit looses less of its flavor and attractiveness in the canning process, and most cooked tomato dishes can be made quite as satisfactorily with the canned product as with the fresh fruit.

Though called the love apple nothing of the apple race is, in reality, in its constituency save the nature of its acid. Since it is composed of nine-tenths water it is a readily digestible food. Its seemingly solid flesh is only in quantity one and one-half per cent. of its whole weight, so full of juice it is, and the amount of free acid, its malic possession, together with its valuable saline contents, more than equal in amount the weight of its flesh or protein, for the salts and acids come to very nearly two per cent. The material that combines with the protein to give the real solidity is the force-giving principle, its glucose, or mingled gum, starch and sugar. These equal over 6 per cent. and are in reality the solid substance of the tomato.

In its alkaline nature is found the reason why the tomato is the friend of dyspeptics, for when indigestion is caused by the too-abundant presence of acids in the stomach it comes as a neutralizer and counteracts the effects of these acids, as proving beneficial. Again, the liver requires alkaline matters in order to elaborate its bile, which has the power of digesting fats. The tomato supplies what the liver needs and thus aids its work. The bile is then duly made, and all fatty matters are properly digested. Hence it is a good plan to eat raw tomatoes with fatty meats such as bacon or cold mutton.

While it contains some fruit sugar, yet no sweetness is apparent. This is because the greater part of its glucose is nearer the unsweet gum stage than to the saccharine point and the alkalies overpower the sensation of sweetness by their presence.

Panned Tomatoes—This is a way of preparing tomatoes with which comparatively few are familiar. Take a half dozen smooth, good-sized tomatoes, wipe and cut them in halves, making the incision across the stem axis. Lay these halves in a baking pan, skin sides down, add a sprinkling of salt and pepper and a quarter of a teaspoonful of butter to each portion. Then set the pan in a hot oven and roast for forty-five minutes. Lift the slices carefully from the pan with a pancake lifter and lay each piece on a square of toast. Place two tablespoonfuls of flour in a bowl, add a half tablespoonful of butter and rub together until smooth. Heat one pint of milk and when boiling add half a cupful to the flour and butter, stirring well and mixing as it is added, then turn the flour mixture into the milk. Cook until creamy—not more than three minutes, however. Place the pan from which the tomatoes have been lifted on the top of the stove, add the thickened milk to the juices in the bottom and stir well. This slightly colors the milk sauce. Taste and add salt if needed. Then strain over the tomatoes and toast on a platter. Add a sprinkling of pepper and serve hot.

Tomato Omelet—Peel a couple of tomatoes and split into four pieces, then remove the seeds and cut into dice. Fry with a little butter until nearly tender, adding salt and pepper. Beat three eggs, mix them with the tomatoes and make the omelet as usual.

Tomato Farced—Cut firm, even-sized tomatoes across broadwise, remove the core and pips carefully with a spoon, then set them with the skin side up on a sieve to drain off some of the superfluous liquor. Meanwhile chop up finely two or three eschalots, a piece of garlic about the size of a small pea, and a half dozen good, fresh mushrooms. Brown the two first named ingredients over the fire in a little butter, then do the same with the mushrooms, which need the special treatment to extract the unwholesome moisture which they contain. Add the mushrooms to the eschalots and garlic, put all over the fire, season plentifully with salt and pepper and add half a claret-glassful of white wine. When this has boiled once put in a small handful of bread crumbs, which have been previously soaked in a little milk, and squeezed rather dry. Cook all of these ingredients twelve or fifteen minutes, stir in the yolks of three eggs, and a teaspoonful of finely-chopped parsley and tarragon. Cook five or six minutes longer, then place on a plate to cool. Arrange the tomatoes on a grating dish thoroughly rubbed over with good olive oil, and fill them with the stuffing. Cover with bread crumbs and on each tomato place a tiny piece of butter. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes, when the dish is ready to be served.

Tomatoes en Masquerade—Boil a cupful of rice in water, and when tender drain it thoroughly, afterward moistening it with as much stock as it will absorb, adding finally two tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese and a little pepper and salt. Keep the rice at the side of the fire and when it is thoroughly soft and fairly stiff turn it out onto a dish and spread it evenly to the thickness of two inches. After it has become thoroughly cold take a two-inch cutter and cut into rounds. Roll each in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs, and with a cutter two sizes smaller mark on one side of each cassolette, as they are called, the portion to be afterward hollowed out. Fry in saucepan of hot fat, drain thoroughly, scoop out the inside and fill with puree of tomatoes. Arrange on a dish, and pour over and around them a brown sauce flavored with grated Parmesan cheese.

Dainty Tomato Salad (Illustrated)—Cut a splice from the top of a half dozen tomatoes, carefully remove the pulp and add the latter to a small bowl which has been rubbed with a clove of garlic. Mix in a half pint of macaroni previously boiled tender and cut into fine pieces; one dozen clams, cooked and diced; two hard-boiled eggs, and twelve olives chopped fine; and two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese. For the dressing use two tablespoonfuls of oil, one teaspoonful of vinegar, a dash of paprika and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix and toss all together until thoroughly covered, then fill into the tomato shells. Garnish with a teaspoonful of whipped cream on top, and serve on a nest of lettuce leaves with wafers.

Delicious Breakfast Dish—Choose large tomatoes, scoop out a part of the center and fill the hollow with minced ham. Place in a covered stewpan, with a little butter, and cook until perfectly tender throughout, which will require about thirty minutes. Dish them up without breaking, placing each on a small square of buttered toast and lay a poached egg on top of the tomato.

Tomato Croquettes (Illustrated)—To a pint of finely chopped tomatoes add a tablespoonful of sugar and stir thoroughly until sugar is absorbed; then add a pint of very fine bread crumbs, salt and pepper, two tablespoonfuls of mince onion, if liked, a well-beaten egg and enough of the juice of the tomatoes to moisten so that the mixture may be shaped. Fry in hot fat until brown and serve either hot or cold. When serving for a company luncheon, the croquettes may be given a festive appearance by sticking in the top a tiny ribbon rosette.

Tomato Sauce—Put one quart of tomatoes in a stewpan, adding one slice of onion, two cloves, a little pepper and salt, put over the fire and boil for twenty minutes, then remove from the heat and strain through a sieve. Now melt in another pan an ounce of butter, and as it melts sprinkle in a tablespoonful of flour, stirring until it browns and froths a little. Mix the tomato pulp with it and it is ready for the table.

Cauliflower with Tomatoes—Break into small pieces one small head of boiled cauliflower and arrange with sliced tomatoes in alternate layers in a buttered baking dish, seasoning each layer to taste with salt and paprika or white pepper. When the dish is full pour over a sauce made as follows: Cook one tablespoonful of flour in one tablespoonful of melted butter until smooth, but not browned, and add gradually one cupful of milk. Continue to cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and perfectly smooth, then remove from the fire, stir in two well-beaten egg yokes, three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, and lastly the stiffly-whipped whites of the eggs. Pour it into the baking dish, cover all with buttered crumbs and bake half an hour.

Stuffed Tomatoes (Illustrated)—Cut off the stalk end of tomatoes and scoop them out with a sharpened knife. Take a cupful of chopped cold meat and mix with minced onion, bread crumbs and seasoning. Fill the tomatoes with the mixture, sprinkle bread crumbs over them, and put a bit of butter on each. Bake ten minutes and serve on lettuce leaves.

Rich Girls and Work.

WEALTHY GIRLS MUST NOT WORK FOR LOW SALARY.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

We talk about the idle rich; the phrase is a misnomer; there really are no idle rich people in America today. Wasteful, haughty, arrogant and purse-proud rich there may be, forming the minority and pointing a contrast when compared with the vast multitude of well-to-do women and men who have gained wealth without losing the virtues that distinguish good people everywhere. Even those who form the lower stratum of the smart set, who are vulgar and pushing and have no claim to consideration beyond their bank account, are not idle. Far from it. They are as restless, as eager and as busy in the pursuit of pleasure as any laborer in the world can possibly be in the pursuit of honest bread.

The daughters of the rich by reason of the excellent care that surrounds them from the cradle belong to what may be called with reason, our highest aristocracy. No princess of royal blood is more carefully educated, more zealously surrounded by everything that can make her physically perfect and educate her in accordance with the most advanced ideas, than is the girl whose father is a successful merchant, railway magnate or financier. She has every advantage, and when she has been graduater from college she is a radiant creature, the finest product of modern civilization.

What does this daughter of the gods aim to do with herself? She is fitted for any station. She shall presently be presented to society and she may at once, if she choose, become a reigning belle. Marriage in the old world is the ultimate goal of a mother's ambition for such a daughter. The American mother is not very anxious to get rid of her daughter, and tells her not to be in haste. Why should she not enjoy a long, bright and triumphant career as a daughter at home, before she takes on herself the responsibilities of the wife, and withdraws from her position as reigning princess to be the sole queen of her own home?

The girl herself in a majority of cases thwarts her mother's inclinations and amazes her father by a downright determination to work precisely as if she had no prospects, and were compelled to labor for her own support. She argues that her brother when he leaves college goes into business or a profession, and that he is the object of criticism if he postpones doing so longer than the limit of a six or twelve months' vacation. A young man who should content himself as a dilettante, who should pride himself on being an idol of society, and live a butterfly existence would be regarded with a mixture of amusement and scorn. The girl claims that she is a human being just as her brother is, that she has received practically the same education that has been given to him and that she wants to make use of it as he does. Her mother does not need her, servants can do whatever is necessary for the comfort of the most elaborate home, and the young woman whose brain has been developed by serious study is not content to sit down and let her tools rust.

It is impossible not to sympathize with this view. Energy and ambition are in the air we breathe. A girl who has a pronounced talent for business is not happy if obliged to spend her time over embroidery or cake-making. She not only feels that she has gifts that may be used successfully out in the world, but she thinks that the friction, the competition and the activity of the outdoor world, are interesting and profitable. They seem to be her worth while.

The problem that should bid her pause is an ethical one. In a suburb not far from New York there resided three years ago on the same street two girls, one of whom had a fortune, the other of whom was dependent on her daily work for daily bread. Both had business ability. Each had studied book-keeping, each applied in the same week for the same vacant situation. It was given to the rich girl, probably because she was rich and bore a name well known in business circles. Had the rich girl not applied the position would have been given to the girl who needed it, who would have performed its duties with equal fidelity and who was forced by her poverty to take something less suited to her training and less remunerative. In this instance the first girl really acted, without intending it, the part of a robber and made life more difficult and frugality more pressing than it need have been in the home of another, a sister woman of her own age and with an education similar to her own.

The rich girl who not infrequently accepts work at a lower salary than she could afford to take if she did not possess private means, cheapens the market and adds terribly to the burdens of the poor. In not a few cases women of wealth plume themselves on the austerity of their economy. They give lavishly in charity, but they grudge the money they pay to those who help them. They will engage as secretary or companion the daughter of a relative or of a wealthy neighbor, who has a desire to earn pin-money, and will fancy that they are doing a double good; they are gratifying Cousin Helen or Niece Mary by letting her work for them, and they are saving something for their missionary fund or their charities because they pay her what would not be a living wage to an equally well-equipped girl who was poor.

If a rich girl decides that she must and will work, let her enter the lists as anyone else would and ask for and earn the same wages, no more and no less. She does well to exhibit the same qualities of steadiness, resolution and pluck that are expected in her brother, and exacted from other wage-earning women.

It should not be forgotten that there is plenty to do in this world for everybody who has a will and a wish to work. The girl who has large wealth should aim to become an employer, to put herself where she may engage and pay others and carry on large business interests without detriment to the good of society. If she has capital, she is at liberty to use it as a man does, provided she has a man's firmness, concentration and power of discernment. In the lower rounds of the ladder she should hold steadfastly to this end. The probability is, however, that after three or four years of business or professional life, she will tire of the monotony, drop the whole thing, go abroad, travel or settle down and marry. The difference between the rich man's son and the rich man's daughter in the matter of business, is that with the former it is regarded as a serious occupation, and with the latter it is usually a fad or caprice.

Settlement work affords endless opportunities to rich girls who honestly wish to work. They may teach what they have learned, they may gather about them classes in sewing, music, or art; they may go in a friendly way to the sick and the poor, and in every department without money and without price, they may do good. Those who have never investigated the subject imagine that settlement work is mainly sentimental. Never was there a greater mistake. It affords scope for the energy of the most practical and most sensible of young women who ever she may be. To a sympathetic and womanly girl it offers an inviting field of usefulness.

No rule is without its exception. Where a woman has commanding ability and positive genius, she has a right to use it for the benefit of the world whether she be rich or poor. A great artist, a great poet, a great novelist is not to be shut out from the expression of her God-given talents, because she has wealth. But if being rich and being only mediocre, she finds pleasure in painting menu cards or illustrating children's stories or writing short articles for the papers or doing any other thing for which she is paid and by doing which she shuts the door on some one who needs the money more than she does, she is in the wrong. Even though she give the money away, she is acting a selfish part. Only superlative endowment may justify a rich woman in doing for money something a poorer sister could do as well.

The Ladies' Companion.

FALSE IMPRESSIONS GIRLS GET OF LIFE COMPANION.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

If I may judge from a somewhat extended correspondence, three-fourths of the young women who have no training for anything in particular, and who wish to earn money, set their hearts on securing a position as companion.

There is something that appeals to them in the sweet homeliness of the word and the idea in their minds is that they are to be taken into the beautiful home of a woman of wealth and refinement on terms that would befit a daughter of the house. They invest the situation with many privileges and pleasures that very seldom belong to it. A girl writes to me that the dream of her life has been to travel abroad and see the world. Art galleries, museums, ruins, lofty mountains, winding rivers, storied moors and castles loom up before her in fancy. She explains that she has no money, and that her father cannot afford to send her to Europe or Japan, but that she is very willing to go as companion to a lady who does not wish to go by herself, or, who being old or an invalid, needs some particular service.

Another girl who has been graduated from a high school, and who meant to be a teacher, or a trained nurse, or an artist, but never achieved the fulfillment of her desire, determines now that she will become a companion. "I can sing a little," she says, "I can play a little, I can write letters, I can read aloud. I am willing to do anything, not mental, but I want a pleasant home." So it goes.

Obviously, to assert that all the women who engage other women as companions are disagreeable, inconsiderate, mean, stingy and selfish, would be both untrue and unjust. Women who require the services of a companion are often gently bred, amiable and charming. The trouble is to find them and to find for them the sweet girl who also is gentle, well-bred, well-educated and possessed of tact and common sense. The misfits in these associations are extremely disappointing and discouraging. Taking them, however, as they are known to be, the women who engage companions are usually solitary, are sometimes purse proud, and are often far from cheerful people with whom to pass the years of one's youth. They seem to regard a companion as a cross between a lady's maid and a cook's assistant. They care little what drudgery they impose upon her. She is either kept very much in the background, having a less definite position than the cook and the housemaid, and belonging neither upstairs nor down, or else she is brought forward as a foil to the lady herself. I have known an instance where a rich woman engaging a needy cousin as her paid companion, seemed to take special pains to introduce the latter with a word acknowledging the kinship, but explaining the relation. The employer wore velvet and jewels and was dressed with oppressive elegance; the employed went about with her in winter in a costume that shouted at one its impression of cast off clothing badly remodeled.

The young girl who goes to Europe as a companion for the average lady of means will see little of Europe for her pleasure. She might much better stay at home, read books, look at pictures and attend illustrated lectures.

It, of course, ought to be said that a young woman who assumes that although she is dissatisfied or unhappy at home with her father and mother, her own brothers and sisters, she will be contented and pleased, and find the day a dream of delight in the house of a stranger, is falling into a mistake. One knows the faults and foibles of one's kith and kin. When one goes into the home of an entire stranger one ventures into unexplored territory.

If the family receives one on a footing of toleration, the servants very likely are patronizing and condescending. Occasionally, a companion has the amazing tact and wonderful magnetism of Julie Le Breton in "Lady Rose's Daughter." Every one recalls the life this young woman led with old Lady Henry, and, of course, there was a good deal said on Lady Henry's side, this companion, so to speak, cutting the ground from under her employer's feet, but there are few Julies, and there are many Lady Henrys.

Another blunder made by girls who would be companions is condensed in the phrase that they know a little this and a little that, and nothing well. The ill-educated, untaught girl who fancies that her willingness to accommodate will make up for her ignorance is wofully wrong. Far better would it be to learn something thoroughly and depend on that for a livelihood, than to know almost nothing, and think one's shocking incompleteness may be condoned and paid for in current coin.

If you really are set upon undertaking this difficult and disagreeable business, set about your preparations at once. Study the art of effacing yourself. You have been in the habit of stating your opinions freely and frankly; get over that. You have been accustomed to going out and in when you pleased; your hours will not be your own. You would best learn to brush hair, to mend garments, to make nice dishes for an invalid, to do all sorts of things that fill up chinks, including, perhaps, the weekly bathing and combing of a poodle dog, and the daily attendance on a cat, a canary or a parrot. Whether or not you like dogs, cats and parrots will not enter into the bond. If your employer be a capricious, nervous, restless person, who changes her mind twenty times a day, you will have a hard time of it. She will expect you either to reflect her mood or to coax her out of it, and in neither case will she be easily satisfied.

Companions are, as a rule, wretchedly paid. Why be a companion at a low salary when you may be a cook and command any wages you choose to ask? Why be a companion and drudge in season and out, when you may be a laundress with regular hours, your own evenings and good pay for a day's work? You see, girls, do you not, that I at least do not think a companion's life a bed of roses, and that I am doing my best to warn you against drifting into it so long as there is any other thing on earth you can do.

There is no reason why two women coming from different environments to dwell for a while under the same roof should not be mutually helpful and altogether friendly. The relation must be a friendly one, as well as a business one. As the companion of one who has taken you into her home, you must cultivate a high sense of honor. You have become a confidential and intimate acquaintance in a family hitherto unknown to you. If there are family secrets which are revealed to you, or which you suspect, about them your lips must be sealed. The same professional reticence that obtains among doctors, nurses, and all well-bred people in positions of trust must be yours.

On the whole, the situation has its possibilities and requirements that only a woman of more than average endowments can suitably fill.

Ancient and Modern Tapestries.

THE SOUL THAT WAS PUT INTO THE EARLIEST PRODUCTS IS WANTING IN THOSE TODAY.

By M. B. Arnold.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

AMERICANS, few of them, have arrived at the condition, artistically, where the handiwork of man is prized above that of the machine. Still fewer have the "soul" to desire a thing, be the craft of whatever kind, that shall express an idea, theirs or the craftsman's, that shall exist, incorporated materially, for them alone, that shall not find its replica in every shop window, and at each neighbor's house.

They are buying with dollars and want the "dollar" value in quantity, and "positively the latest style," and when, in the beginning of the time that their dollars have assumed the proportions of being generously good to spend, not realizing their own individuality nor that of a craftsman, are content to live in a lavish display that means nothing.

"In the days of old," when the work of the hands was prized as the expression of the man's spirit, the tapestry weaver was considered an artist, his art, prized by Emperors and Kings. Few of these famous tapestries are in existence, for, in the fortunes of war between Emperor and King, they were a prize for the victorious, precious as jewels, or lost in the destruction of cities.

The art of transmittinw designs and pictures on the loom is old. The loom, singularly like those now used in the Gobelin Tapestry Works, has been found by research to have existed three thousand years before Christ. The Pharaohs produced tapestries, exceedingly rich and fine. Western Asia and Greece had their tapestries, weaving the stories of the victor and the myths. The Bible tells of the rare and costly fabrics of Babylon, Nineveh and Tyre, in their days of glory and splendor. Especially were the Babylonians noted for the richness of material, and wondrous blending of wondrous dyes, carrying this to the highest point of artistic excellence and perfection, the weavers, equalling in their work the magnificent compositions of their artist, and when one considers that this excellence is achieved by working on a chain of threads, drawn either vertically or horizontally, around which are woven the colored threads of wool or silk, making one body, following the tints and forms of the artist designed picture, line for line, so that the woven whole shall be a perfect copy, the weaver's art can be appreciated.

Painting by textile materials, the weaver individually interprets, or transfers, in other tones, what the painter-composer meant to say.

So greatly prized were the "Babylonicas" that enormous sums were paid for them, Metillus Scipio paying what in our day is $40,000 for the "Triclin aria" Babylonica, for which Nero paid later $200,000.

During the voluptuous times of Solomon, Herod and the Roman Empire, the making of tapestries was encouraged by the voluptuaries of the time. Subjects detailing the histories of the times were the favorites. And then the secret of the tapestry loom seems to have been lost, to be revived in more modern times.

The oldest pieces of real tapestries in existence are the work of the twelfth century. Two are in the cathedral at Haberstadt, Germany, hanging above the choir. Each are forty-three feet in length and three and one-half feet high, and represent scenes from the old Testament—"Christ and the Twelve Apostles," "St. George Killing the Dragon," the portrait of an Emperor, "Carolus Rex." One well preserved was in the Church of St. Gerven, Cologne. The canon of the church, dividing it in three parts, sold it to the museums of Lyons, Nuremburg and South Kensington. These were the work of German tapisers. Likewise the work of the thirteenth century is represented by that country in the Abbey of Quedlinberg, in a tapestry representing "The Marriage of Mercury and Philology." This was the work of women, the Abbess Agnes and the nuns in her charge.

In the fourteenth century Belgium and France awakened to the possibility of this art, and Paris, Flanders, Brussels and Arras were vying with each other for supremacy of technique. During the reign of Charles V the tapisers were much encouraged, and the court artists designed many beautiful pieces, chiefly historical. Imagine tapistries woven with gold thread and in such manner that they cost at that time $350 a square yard, and today are priceless, because of their age and historical significance. In considering their value from the latter point of view, it seems a shame that any such work should ever pass from the country of its creation, for nowhere else can it have so great a significance.

The Flemish Ateliers were also producing rich weaves. The Duke of Burgundy being an especial patron, and his taste being for the truly magnificent, was a spur for the magnificent in weave and color. The town of Arras produced dyes that mean much to the tapestry weaver of today, as one dyed with Arras dyes means one that never fades.

In the fourteenth century the Vatican, with a newly-elected Pope, threw its desire for splendor in the way of tapestries, and, under this far-reaching and sheltering fold, many beautiful pieces were made.

All European countries now encouraged the art, and the nobles of the day took the deepest interest in its advancement and in the possession of pieces telling of the valor of their people. While, during this epoch, Lebrun, the great artist of verdure, impressed his personality upon designs.

The chef d'oeuvre of LeBrun was "The Marriage of Louis XIV," and was considered the perfection of art of design and weaving. "The Mass of St. Gregory," in the Nuremburg Museum, is of this era.

This, the fifteenth century and beginning of the Renaissance, was influenced greatly by Italian artists, but the tapisers of this century picture knighthood and Itournaments, as well as religious and historical subjects.

Raphael was commissioned by the Pope to paint the famous cartoon, "The Acts of the Apostles," to be e cuted in tapestry, at an expens $150,000. They were completed in years, and Raphael received $10,00 his work.

These tapestries, after being pawn surviving wars and a pillage of Ro becoming separated, at last, in the century were gathered togethe are to be seen in the Sistine for which they were made. Th iginal Raphael cartoons are to be in the Kensington Museum. The seums of Europe contain some fine old tapestries, and do not let get out of the country if it can avoided.

The sixteenth century tapes passed through less vicissitudes, many of them are in existence, "The Story of Joseph," "The Tw Months," "The Grotesques," "The tory of Alexander the Great," " Story of Lucrezia," all large and subjects. So great is considered historical and anthropological sig cance of tapestries that the Museum Archeology, Paris, is searching far wide for them, and already it has dreds.

The sixteenth century marked founding of the famous Gobelin Wo producing at this era "The Caledo Bear Hunt," "The Sacrifice of Ab ham" and many others. These live today, the property of the Fr republic, and perpeturate a which, it is to be hoped, will not way wholly to machine-made tions.

Lebrun and Reubens impressed art on the weaves of this period. history of Louis XIV is incomp in its execution of detail, while " Elements" and "The Seasons," gorical, have the dainty grace of brush. All of these are in the session of the French government are highly prized for their value.

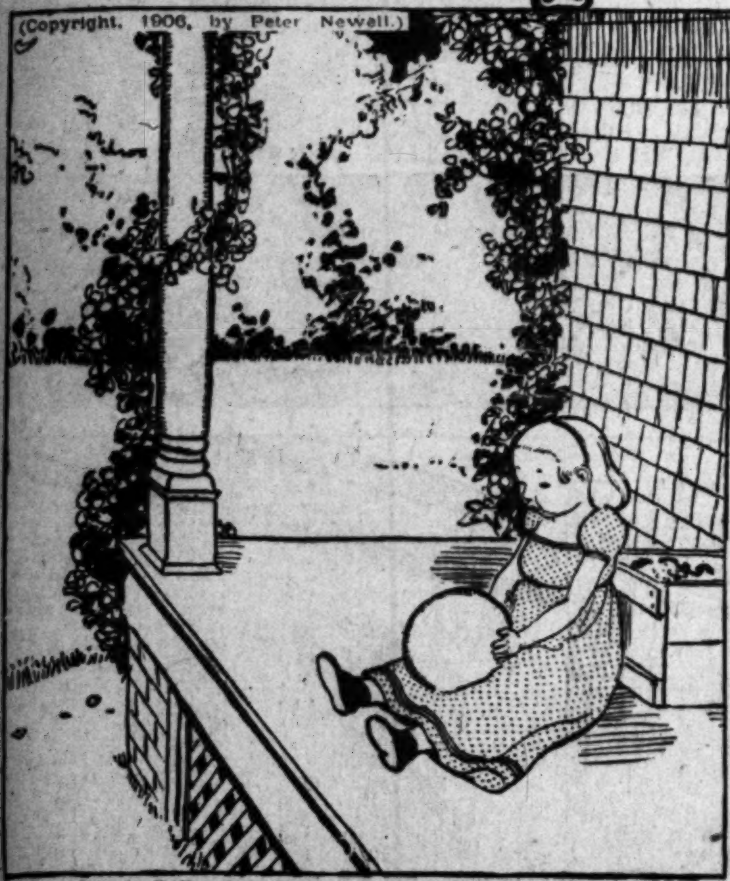
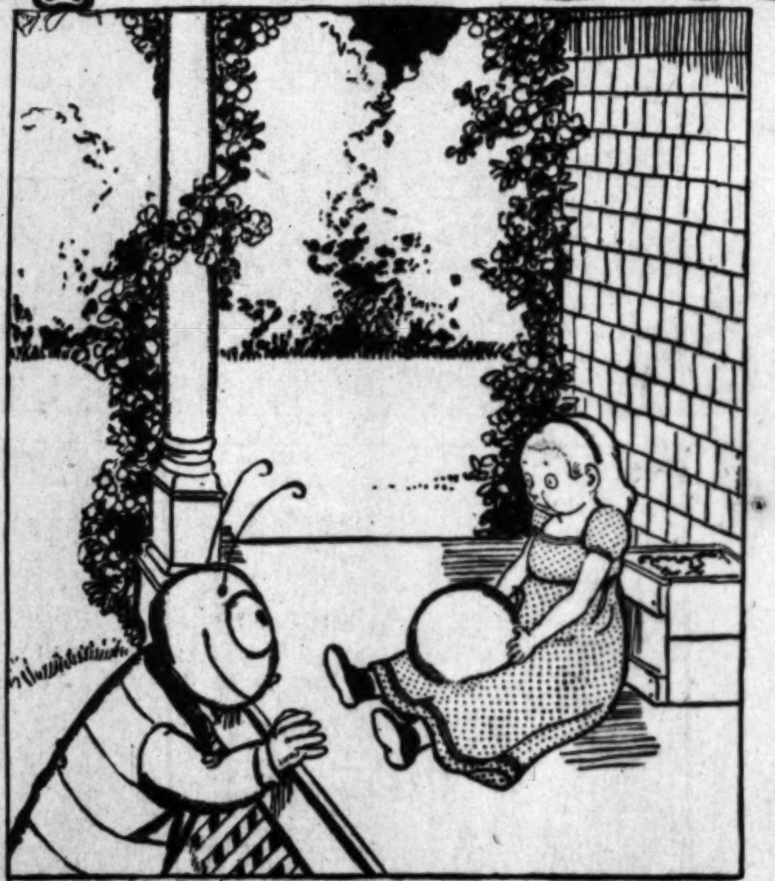
DRAWN BY PETER NEWELL

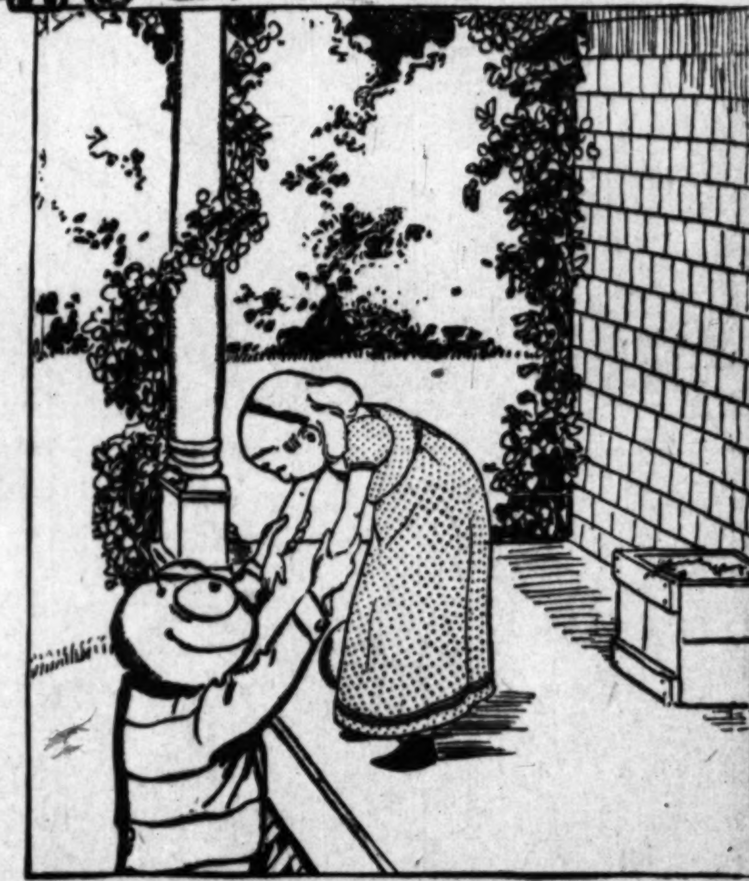
(Copyright, 1906, by Peter Newell.)



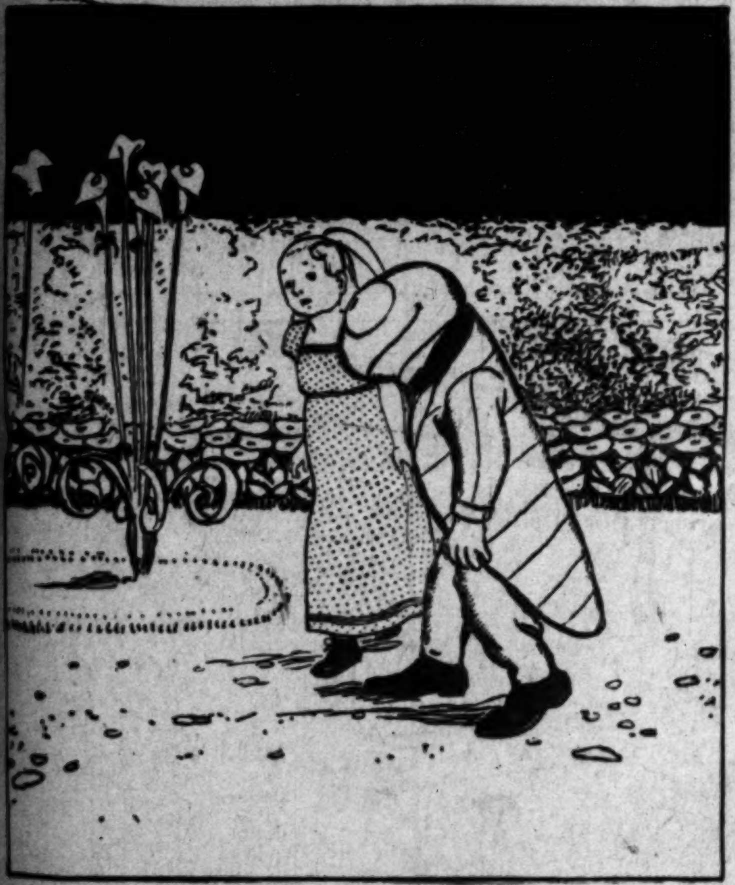
No. 1.—Polly was playing with a melon which the green grocer had left on the back veranda with other vegetables. "It looks like a bombshell," said she, and she did not pursue the subject further on account of a drowsy feeling creeping over her.



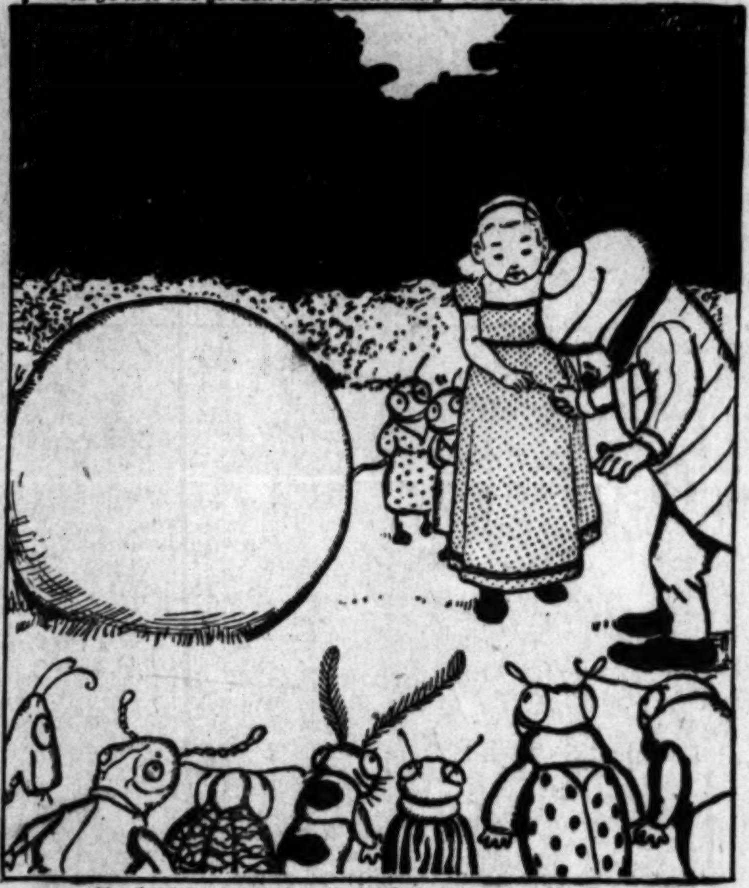
No. 2.—But her quiet was broken in upon by the sound of a strange harsh voice directly in front of her, and, raising her eyes, she beheld the largest bug she had ever seen. "Excuse my intrusion," said the insect, "but I thought I would ask you to go into the garden to see something wonderful."



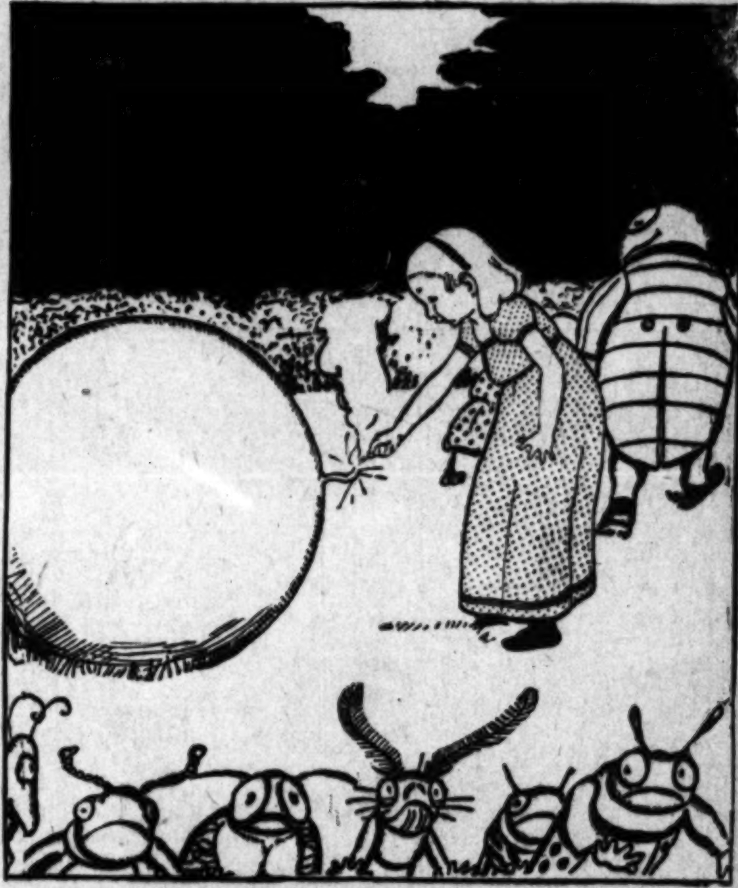
No. 3.—Since his manner was very agreeable, notwithstanding the harshness of his voice, Polly consented to go with him, and he politely helped her to the ground.



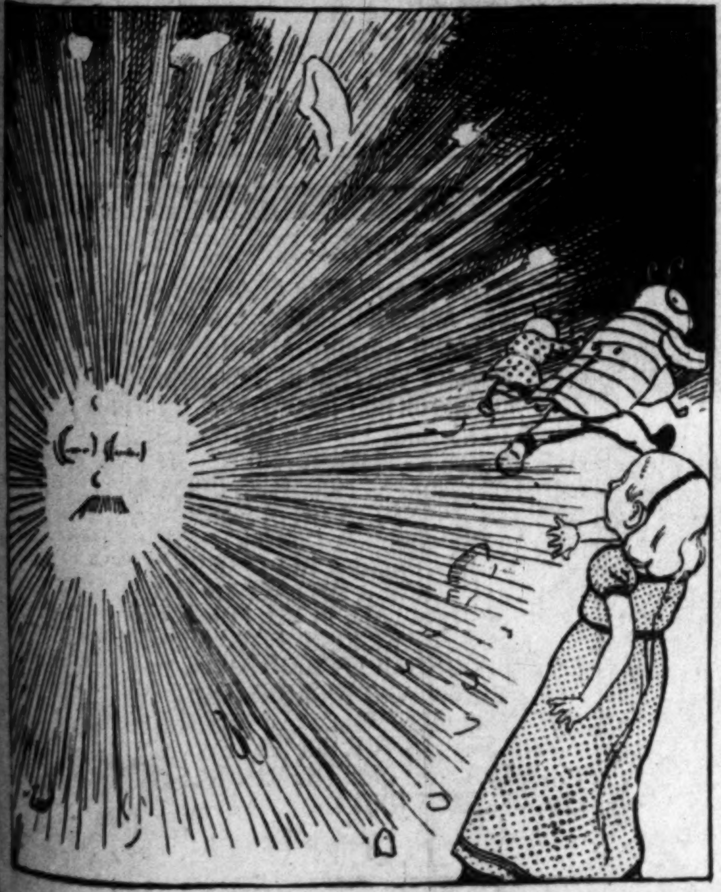
No. 4.—They then walked together into the garden, Mr. Bug in the meanwhile apologizing to her for not having brought his buggy to fetch her. "But I thought the distance was so short," explained he, "you wouldn't mind walking."



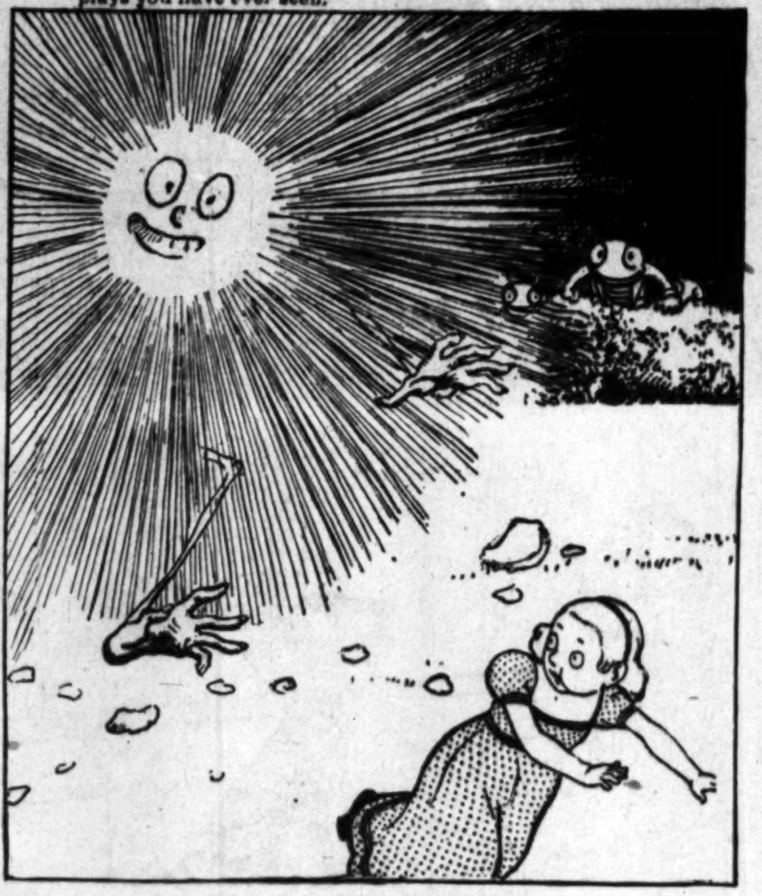
No. 5.—As soon as they arrived in the garden Mr. Bug conducted Polly to a spot where there was a perfectly enormous melon with a severed stem attached to it. "Now, Miss Polly," said her conductor as he produced a match from his pocket, "take this and light the stem and wait for one of the finest displays you have ever seen."



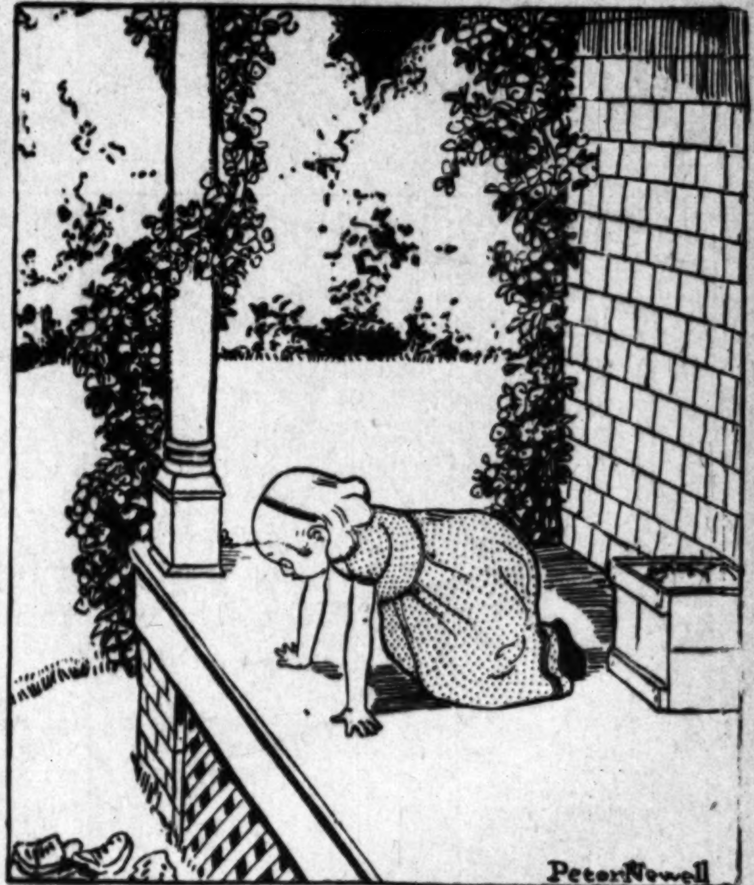
No. 6.—Polly struck the match and applied it to the stem, which began to burn with a spluttering sound. Mr. Bug and others of the tribe who had assembled to see the fun at once took to their heels as fast as they could run.



No. 7.—And then the little girl stepped back just in time to escape the full force of a tremendous explosion.



No. 8.—And then the explosion unfolded its cramped legs and arms and made for Polly in a most terrifying——



No. 9.—Polly woke up just in time to hear herself say:—"Go back, Mr. Explosion, please," but checked herself and began to wonder what had become of the melon. "What will mamm say!" exclaimed she as she caught sight of it in a sadly jumble state on the path below. "I've let that melon roll off on th ground and burst while I was napping!"

SCHOOL CLOTHES FROM ENGLAND

LONDON, '06.

THE first thing that strikes in upon your comprehension about an English schoolgirl is her look of being absolutely comfortable—and perhaps that is the real secret of her very thoroughbred air. Her clothes are severely simple, but the excellent materials of which they are fashioned is wonderfully cut, fitting her slim young figure with an easy grace that seems to have happened without the least calculation. In reality it is a "studied carelessness," even more carefully planned than that conspicuous absence of unnecessary furbelows.

The growing girl's changes of fashion partake of the same subtle quality that causes her grown-up sister to wonder why her big brother has got a new suit exactly like his old one, until he explains the fine points of difference. And don't imagine that our schoolgirl is one whit less anxious about looking spick and span than is that same big brother! In a very remote way, her fashions are following exactly the same models as are the older girl's.

Skirts are cut circular, in two or four pieces, and flatly trimmed with stitched bands of cloth, or braiding. This flat trimming has for her an added virtue in that it facilitates the lengthening of last year's skirt. And, by the way, no sensible mother forgets to obtain an extra yard or so of cloth with every new suit.

Coats, like the grown-ups', are shorter, with sleeves generally moderate; varying, however, according to the costume—a very artistic advance is this latitude in sleeve fashions, too.

A fifteen- to eighteen-year-old's suit is pictured first, at the left. Its trimming is on the simplest and yet most stylish order, for the military is to be very fashionable this year. The back of the coat is cut without a middle seam; the fronts are slightly fitted, with one dart, and two under-arm pieces complete it.

The sleeves just escape being perfectly flat, and are gathered into the armhole or shaped in with tiny darts. Their military effect would be completely killed by the usual double box-pleat.

Heavy blue serge or cheviot makes a good material for school wear, and looks well with the wide Hercules braid. If, however, it is a question of "Sunday best," broadcloth is handsomer and more correct from the military standpoint.

The fourteen-year-old girl who has grown out of all reason may revel in Scotch plaid, with a kilted skirt and loose box coat to give just that degree of grace that her poor mother has been indefatigably seeking for many a weary day. For a stouter girl such a model is made of plain material—perhaps a stunning brown cheviot, with a plain skirt cut like the blue suit.

Little girls look better in separate coats; for them there are long, belted ulsters of frieze or homespun, in tans and grays, plain and checkered. Two pleats running the back's entire length make the new note here.

Regular Norfolk jackets have usurped the reefer's place. Usually they are of chinchilla cloth, and the littlest girl has hers made of flame red—just like Tommy Atkins' coat! With a black kilted skirt it looks mighty stunning.

Indeed, English mothers seem to have discovered the French appreciation of "a spot of black"—perhaps from the sensible rather than the artistic standpoint — but, after all, there is a very fine distinction between the two, especially where the dressing of schoolgirls is concerned.

"SUGGESTIONS"—A NEW DEPARTMENT MRS. HERRICK WISHES TO START

Several girls have asked of late for patterns for pillow tops for Each and All and for quilts in Each and All colors. Others have requested suggestions as to how to arrange leather postcards to make a pillow and to use in a screen. Others, still; have begged for new ideas for framing and using postal cards of pasteboard and paper. Some of these queries I have been able to answer. More frequently I have put the inquirer in touch with some one else who knew more about the subject than I did or have printed her inquiry on the page, where there would be a probability of its meeting the eye of some one who could answer it helpfully.

All these inquiries that have come to me have had the result of giving me a new idea for Each and All, which I hereby present to you. I wish to start a new department on the page, to be called "SUGGESTIONS." And I wish to beg all of you girls to help me in it.

If you will look over any copy of the page, you will see many good suggestions we have sent in. Just for example: A while ago, one of our members wrote and told us how successful she had been in using postcards as a frieze about her room. Another told how she had grouped and framed her choice cards. As often as once a fortnight, and sometimes oftener, come letters from girls who have new ideas for quilts or who have adapted old ideas for using the blue and gold in silk or calico, with or without the bee, plain patches or feather-stitched or embroidered. A number of good ideas for pillow tops in the Each and All blue and gold, or in other colors, but with the bee upon them, have been supplied. In spite of these, every week comes a plea for suggestions how to do just those things. Either the girls have missed those copies of the page or they have overlooked the special letters that would have helped them.

I have no idea of limiting the field of suggestions to the topics I have mentioned. Not by any means! I have spoken of these special things because of late an unusual number of inquiries have reached me on these topics. But there is no limit to the scope of such suggestions. If one of our housekeepers has discovered some specially useful economy or some particular way of simplifying her work or some new way of doing an old thing, her idea would have a good place in "SUGGESTIONS." If the mother who has had a difficult child to manage has some discovery to communicate, as to how she cared for him, "SUGGESTIONS" is waiting for her letter. If any girl has learned a new method in art work or music or fancy work, or has some good pattern which is a novelty to her, let her write to me some mention of it for "SUGGESTIONS." Under this head, too, would come such letters as we have already had from several girls, about the best methods of preserving clippings, ideas for earning pocket money or making a living, hints as to how girls save their money or make their clothes or trim their hats or clean their ribbons or gloves, or do their studying or conduct their home entertaining or adapt their social and church and club duties or help their mothers or keep their tempers.

Place there will always be, too, for ideas for sub-club work, whether from the presidents and chairmen or from the individual members, and we will put there also requests for suggestions along any special line. How does the idea strike you, girls? And are you going to help me to carry it out?

Individual Prettinesses for Hospital and Home Inmates

To begin with, will not you send me your patterns for quilts and pillow tops, you who have undertaken to make these, and let me print them, as soon as I can, for the benefit of the other girls? A number of girls have recently asked for these patterns, and I know your answers will be of real benefit. Write them plainly, in ink, on one side of the paper, and make the directions as clear and concise as you can.

Now, I am going to take advantage of this opportunity, and make a suggestion on my own account, or, rather, give you a suggestion that has been made to me. Some one has asked me if I did not think it would be a good idea for those of the girls who are dexterous with their fingers and have an aptitude for making the pretty little articles of apparel that girls love—the stocks and belts, the collars and cuffs, and the like—to make up a lot of things, and send them to hospitals and homes, for the benefit of those who are lacking these dainty bits dress. How does the idea strike you? I thought it charming, and I am glad to pass it on to you. It is work th could be done by the sub-clubs, who could sew on th sort of thing at their meetings, or the articles could made by the individuals who are anxious to do some for those who are lonely and desolate, and yet do know quite how to set about it.

One word of caution, however. Before you ma your pretty things to give away, find out if you will allowed to bestow them at the special place you ha chosen. In some institutions there are rules abou uniform, and the little individual prettinesses are permitted. But, even if they are not allowed in place, you may be able to find a chance to give them another. Certain of our sub-clubs are doing good in cheering patients in hospitals by gifts of flowers, etc., and the children in hospitals are always grateful visits. They are delighted, too, by picture scrap and these are easily made in these days of plenti illustrated magazines.

Another suggestion I wish to make along the line is the collection of souvenir gifts by you wh the chance to go to the seaside or the woods. A marine photograph, mounted on a card, with perhap bit of seaweed pasted on it, or a tiny sea shell, will b the very sound of the waves to some prisoner in a room or a city. A fern or a pressed flower, thus mou either with or without the picture, is a joy to a sh Pillows made of balsam or the white immortelles, dried sweet fern leaves, are a comfort to invalids. is a chance of help near to many of you. Tell others that have come to you, and let me give the place in "SUGGESTIONS."

Various Topics Touched Upon by Letter-Writers

Our work in sub-clubs continues to grow, and it cannot increase too rapidly to please me. I wish that all the members away on summer outings would form sub-clubs in their vacation places and send to me for application blanks or membership cards.

A Plucky Invalid Member

I have been very sick, and cannot do much for the girls of the club; but I have answered every postal I received, and have written to an Each and All invalid; for, though I am sick, I am not downhearted.

I am going to try and get a little sub-club here in Crafton Terrace. It will be something like a sewing club; but we will pay 5 cents, and give it and clothing that we make to the poor and sick children. I have not started anything yet, as I have been too sick; but will start soon, and all my members will be new members for Each and All. J. E. P. (Chartiers, Allegheny county, Pa.).

There are pluck and energy for you! Do our well, strong girls mean to let a sick member outdo them?

An Inspiring Report

I feel sure our sub-club will be a success. We have our meetings every week (Tuesday noon) in the reception room, which is nicely furnished in green mission furniture and papered in green and red burlap. It is a distinct privilege, which we appreciate very much, and was tendered to us by the superintendent.

We have kept our work strictly within the factory, each week sending some little remembrance to a sick one. These have been deeply appreciated. Next week we branch out by sending two bouquets—one to each of our hospitals. Then we intend to remember the Girls' Home, the Day Nursery and any others which may appeal to us. We have fine workers and big hearts, too. That counts, does it not?

We are still hustling for more members. We now number between sixty and seventy. We shall be most proud and happy when you come to see us, and I am sure you will never receive a more hearty welcome anywhere. J. T. G. (Brockton, Mass.).

This is from the chairman of our fine Walkover Sub-Club. The secretary's report tells me even more of the work in detail. When one thinks of what has been done by these busy girls in a factory, who can honestly say she has no time or chance to work for Each and All?

Dressing Dolls for Sick Children

We are dressing dolls for the hospital children. Our secretary will, no doubt, tell you of other work which the club has done.

We want more members, knowing that in numbers there is strength, and we intend to do a great deal of good. Mrs. W. F. D. (Dorchester, Mass.).

A notice has already appeared of the "Utopian Club," of Dorchester, and you know something of their work. This is simply a further intimation of what they are doing. May many new members come in!

What the "Invalid" Girls Are Doing

One of my helpers has been sick; another asked to be excused from active service until after graduation, and still another until after housecleaning; but, still, I have a right good report.

So many of my helpers have been so good about writing to the invalids, sending them reading material and souvenir postals. One girl sent a dear little invalid two souvenir postal pads (she is very poor, and it's so hard for her to get money to cover the cost of stamps and writing material). An invalid bag was sent to another invalid by one of the girls. There were pretty gifts and cute gifts, useful gifts and all kinds—fourteen in all. A very dainty collar was sent to one of the invalids, but the main things were reading material and postals, and the girls enjoy both so much. A Boston lady, one of my newly enrolled helpers, called upon one of my girls living in that city. Really, we have just got into working order, and we expect to accomplish great things after a while.

I have quite a number of new members, both invalids and helpers. E. P. D. (Aspinwall, Pa.).

This is the chairman of one of our Invalid-Help Sub-Clubs. I know she would be glad of more members to write to the invalids, and she would like the names of any invalids who wish cheering.

Crocheted Yokes for Corset Covers

They tell me I am a good cook, and, by the way, I can give a recipe for as nice brown bread as was ever made, and that I've never seen in any cook book.

I also write visiting cards, and might be able to give some one a few points on that.

I have made some very pretty crocheted yokes for corset covers or chemises. Those of linen are very dainty. HOPE (Manchester, N. H.).

I have "Hope's" address. That brown bread recipe sounds attractive.

Baby Bonnets

I would love to have some simple patterns of drawn work and directions. In exchange, I will send some new pieces of madras and gingham for piecing quilts. I would also like a few pudding recipes.

I am anxious to get postals from abroad—in fact, everywhere. I like interesting cards, such as historical, odd views or beautiful scenery. I have a fine mandolin, and I had a very few first pieces or lessons. I think I could learn very easily by myself, as I am quick with music. I am willing to exchange leather postals.

I wish to add that I can make the daintiest little bonnets of white mulle for children under 5 years. I make them for a small price. For children with round faces I make a different shape bonnet from the children with long faces. I am willing to exchange them for pieces of drawn work, burnt wood, sofa pillow covers, white aprons or corset covers. MOTHER DELL (Minneapolis).

A woman with such diversity of interests can never find life "slow" or dull. There must always be something to do. "Mother Dell" will not lack for correspondents.

Not Minor Things

I am 13 years old, and a good scholar. As I have been sick a good deal I have had to do nine years' schooling in six. I can do fancy work pretty well, cook and a few other minor things. I love music and elocution, and so if any of the girls would like to have me help on any of these, excepting music, as I have just begun to take lessons, I will be glad to help. Please mention it on the page. C. S. (South Lumenbury, Vt.).

I don't consider cooking a "minor thing" myself, and think help in this line would be quite as valuable as in music.

Life on a Big Ranch

I live on a big ranch, and am kept so busy with my household duties and the care of my baby that I have very little time for outside work. We have a postoffice near here, but we are eighteen miles from the nearest town of any size.

I have some very pretty patterns of a shadow embroidery waist, to be made up with lace, and corset covers in eyelet and French work. I will willingly stamp and commence work for any one. I also can suggest some pretty and simple Christmas gifts.

I would like to help some one who is unable to return it. I will send some shut-in who needs reading a year's subscription to some magazine. E. V. M. (Vail, Ariz.).

A life on a lonely ranch has not diminished your willingness to help. If all our girls did as well, there would be few lonely or needy ones in an Each and All neighborhood.

For Preserving Clippings

Buy a scrapbook and paste the clippings in it as soon as you receive them. I think if you put them in an envelope it is liable to get mislaid. I think a file would ruin them.

I have kept the poems that have appeared on the page, and I mean to keep them all. ROSALIE (Tacony, Philadelphia).

We have had several excellent suggestions as to preserving clippings, which show the interest our girls feel in the subject. I would like to have more ideas, and also to hear from those who collect such cuttings. It would be worth while to know how many there are.

Exercise on the Vocabulary.

Malsano, malsaneto, dormegi, malpurajo, malpureco, tagmezo, noktomezo, kapdoloroj, centjaroj, kristnasko, dormeti, policano, naskiĝo, unufoje, dufoje, kioma? bovido, novajo, verdajo, juneco, internajo, kokido, pureco, maljuneco, infaneco, infanajo, eksterajo, ĉirkaŭajoj, amikeco, maljunajo, vireco, saneco, blankeco, blankajo, suprenajo, gajeco, trankvileco.

Exercise in Reading.

Unu tago estas tricent sesdek kvinono de jaro. Kioma horo estas nun? Estas la unua—kvarono de la dua—duono de la tria—tri kvaronoj de la kvara—dudek minutoj post la kvara (or, de la kvina). La trankvileco de tiu ĉi vilaĝo en somero estas tre agrabla. Kian aĝon vi havas? Mi havas sep jarojn (or, mi estas sepjara). Kvardek ses kaj kvindek du faras naŭdek ok. Mia patrino ne fartas tre bone nun, ŝi havas febron jam de du semajnoj. Kiun daton ni havas hodiaŭ? La kvinan de januaro. Unu malgranda bovido kostas en tiu ĉi sezono sesdek frankojn. Sepoble kvin estas (or, faras) tridek kvin. Nokte la policanoj en Parizo ĉiam iras duope. La ĉirkaŭajo de Parizo estas tre verda en printempo. Unu monato estas la dekdua parto de la jaro; unu semajno, la kvarono de la monato; kaj unu tago, la sepono de la semajno. Je kioma horo venos via bofrato? Al la kvarono de la kvina, hodiaŭ dekduan de Februaro. La suprajo de tiu ĉi stono estas blanka. Ni venas triope, mia amiko, ĉu vi estas malkontenta? Ne, kara najbaro sed mi havas nur duono de kokido, kaj tio ne estas sufiĉe por kvar, hodiaŭ vespere. Lia malsaneco, ne estas grava, sed li havas ofte kapdolorojn. Kiun aĝon havas la ĉevalido de l' najbaro? Ĝi estas dujara. Maljuneco estas malgaja. Tiu ĉi ĉirkaŭmano sinjorino kostas sescent kvindek frankojn.

La Homa Vivo kaj la Sezonoj.

Oni povas kompari la homan vivon kun la kvar sezonoj de l' jaro. Se la agrabla printempo estas la aĝo de la gaja infaneco, aŭ de la sana juneco, la bela kaj varma somero estas tiu de la vira fortikeco. En la trankvila aŭtuno ni vidas la tempon de matureco ankoraŭ forta, sed rapidege venas la maljuneco, vintro malgaja kaj malvarma de la vivo. Ni povas ankaŭ kompari la vivon kun la tago; la mateno estas la tagmezo la matureco kaj la vespero la maljuneco; baldaŭ venas la nokto, eterna dormado.

De la naskiĝo al la morto, de la unua tago al la lasta, ne marŝas, sed kuras, eĉ flugas la homa vivo, kiu estas nur mallonga, febra sonĝo.

Questions.

Kun kio ni povas kompari la homan vivon?
Ĉu vi komparas la infanecon kun la somero?
Kiel estas la maljuneco?
Kio venas rapide?
Ĉu la homa vivo estas eterna?
Ĉu la vivo estas longa aŭ mallonga?
Ĉu vi povas diri al mi la tagojn de la semajno?
Kiuj estas la monatoj de l' jaro?
Ĉu vi fartas bone hodiaŭ?
Ĉu vi malvarmumas ofte in vintro?
Ĉu via filo havas febron?
Kiom faras kvinoble dudek?
Kiun aĝon vi havas?
Kiu estas la dato de via naskiĝo?

What Worcester Girl Plays the Mandolin?

Is there a Worcester girl in the society who can play the mandolin, and who would be willing to teach me? As I have no fine accomplishments, I do not know what I could do in return. But, after meeting and talking it over, I am almost sure we could find something that I could do for her in return. A. S. (Worcester, Mass.).

How about this, Worcester girls? Are there any mandolin players among you? And, if so, will you help this member?

A Letter of Thanks

I have been intending for some time to write and tell you how good our Each and All girls have been to me. I felt sure you would like to know that they were trying to live up to their pledge so far.

They have been wonderfully generous in sending me reading, and in writing kind and cheerful letters. Although a much larger number wrote to me than I ever dreamed would, I have tried to answer them all at least once. If there is any one who has not received an answer, please consider that it was overlooked in my hurry, or not received, and I will most cheerfully answer them now, if they will send a card with their address written plainly to MADAM CANADA (New Brunswick).

Here is another to whom Each and All has brought happiness and help. And there are many, many more.

The "Little Beasties" She Loves

I am sorry to say that my animal project does not prosper, so far as the Each and Allers are concerned. I have not received a single letter from them in regard to it, and I hoped there would be so many! I am disappointed that I cannot seem to reach the many animal lovers who must be somewhere among so large a number of girls.

However, I have started my sub-club, since you say even two members may constitute a "quorum," and it consists at present of myself and I, two ardent workers of a delightful unity of mind and purpose. No disagreements in this club, you may be sure! And, though not officially recognized by Each and All, we have a name—"The Animal"—and we think, myself and I, that there are many little beasties who will remember us kindly, and whose little blessings may, perhaps, keep us warm against the many unkind breezes we must encounter. We are working hard, dear Mrs. Herrick; I am sure you would approve us if you could see how hard. DIXIE (Philadelphia, Pa.).

I wish I had a big troop of such girls as "Dixie." Her indomitable spirit is worthy of the name she has assumed. I hope her letter may enlist the interest of others in her scheme for saving suffering to the "little beasties" she loves. "Brotherly love" should extend to our animal brothers and sisters in Philadelphia and out of it.

The Spanish Sub-Club

I know you will be pleased to hear that our Spanish sub-club is improving greatly. Although living at a great distance from the members, I can help them just as much by corresponding.

I write out a list of exercises and send it to them. These they translate and send back to me to correct. You have no idea what a great help we are to one another. N. A. (Boston, Mass.).

I think it time our local Spanish Sub-Clubs—we have two or three of them—affiliated and formed a general correspondence club—like our big Stenographers' Sub-Club. What other Spanish Clubs mean to report?

Three Little Poetic Reminders

These three little poems have been sent to me as throwing light upon our Each and All spirit. I put them here together in the thought that many girls would like to preserve them as they do their membership cards, for reminders of the pledge.

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

If you've a tender message or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it, but whisper it today.
We live but in the present, the future is unknown,
Tomorrow is a mystery, today is all our own.
The tender words unspoken, the letter never sent,
The long-forgotten messages, the wealth of love unspent—
For these some hearts are breaking, for these some loved ones wait,
So show them that you care for them before it is too late.

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TODAY?

We shall do much in the years to come
But what have we done today?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the afterwhile,
But what have we been today?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
We shall feed the hungry souls of earth;
But this is the thing our hearts must ask:
What have we done today?

TELL HIM SO.

If you have a word of cheer
That may light the pathway, drear,
Of a brother pilgrim here—
Let him know.

Show him you appreciate
What he does, and do not wait
Till the heavy hand of Fate
Lays him low.

If your heart contain a thought
That will brighter make his lot,
Then, in mercy, hide it not—
Tell him so.

Objects and Aims of Each and All

Perhaps some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in almost every State in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon—and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl can belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

Life in Japan

I would be glad to correspond with any of the members. Father is a missionary in Japan, and I have lived there twelve years myself, and would be glad to write about my life there, if any of the members are interested in foreign countries.

I am only 15 years old, but am expecting to enter college this fall; and if some of the girls have some ideas about arranging one's room, I wish they would write to me.

I am also very anxious to learn how to do eyelet embroidery, and would be glad to receive ideas about embroidering underclothes and handkerchiefs. I have a few ideas and designs of my own, too, which I got in Japan, that I would be glad to pass on to some other girl. A. D. S. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Here is a chance for some of [illegible] college girls to make a delightful exchange of ideas and knowledge.

Ten-Inch Blocks

I am interested in a club quilt, and would like to exchange squares or blocks. I want blocks about ten inches square, any color, and of calico, with their name and address worked in embroidery. E. S. (Ventura, Cal.).

I hope she may get numbers of squares for her quilt.

Interested in Elocution

I am a married member, over 30, and mother of two children; but, as I have few acquaintances here, feel the need of congenial companionship, and would be glad beyond words to hear from women interested in self-improvement, physical culture, elocution, "new thought," etc.

I would be glad to give what help I could to any member desiring to learn elocution.

I have a few South American stamps I would be glad to send to collectors. I will also exchange postals. E. S. L. (Lynn, Mass.).

We have a number of members interested in elocution and in the other topics mentioned who would be delighted to exchange views.

Who Has Hops or Balsam to Sell?

I am making a collection of leather postals. I would like to exchange with any one, and would like to buy either hops or pine for pillows. I have some very good books I would send to some one who enjoys reading. MARGE (Franklin, Pa.).

We have had offers of fir balsam for pillows, but not, I think, of hops. Can any of our members supply them?

Another Lonely Girl Asks Advice

Here is another lonely girl. Have you room for her? I have studied, or, rather, taken a two years' business course, intending to be a stenographer; but since then have been obliged to stay at home, and never had an opportunity to practice it. I have no special talent, but still, it seems as though there must be some way in which I can earn money at home. I hope some one can suggest a way, as I have plenty of time at my disposal. VIOLET (Jamaica Plains, Mass.).

Cannot some of our successful girls give suggestions to this lonely struggler? Her case seems hard.

Exchanges of Ideas by Many Correspondents

I am very much interested in hospitals, as I many weeks in them and know the hours of loneliness endured, and realize how a kind few flowers may bring hope and brightness and helpless. Unlimited Fun With Spools.

HOW many, many empty spools your mothers throw into the waste basket, boys and girls!

Beg them not to do so any more, as you can make good use of them. They will serve you for a hundred different toys that you can invent with your own sharp wits—things that you couldn't get for love or money from the shops.

Take your collection of spools and make the toys pictured here, first. After that you can very easily invent toys of your own design.

And it is such fun that you will keep the thing going for many a summer—till you are grown up, in fact. And even then you will probably keep it up to amuse your little friends.

You need a good jackknife, paste pot and some black paint (or black ink).

Take a spool, cut a slit in it for a cardboard nose (triangular shaped); put this spool on top of one or two other spools, as you please, and keep them firmly together by means of a wedge whittled out of a stick. (Fig 1 and Fig. 2.)

With your paint, black up a curve to serve for a mouth (or paint teeth if you feel like it); make the outline of eyes and ears and paint in whatever you want by way of whiskers and hair.

If you want to represent a king, make a cardboard crown; if a soldier, make a cardboard sword; if a captain, make a cardboard visor for the cap (see Fig. 6), and outline a collar with your paint.

For an Episcopal clergyman you can make the rim of his low flat hat out of cardboard. (Fig. 7.)

Whittle arms out of sticks and bore holes in the sides of the spool to stick them into. Make the hands out of chewing gum.

These are only a few of many good suggestions that might be offered. You do not need any more, however, for you will have plenty of ideas of your own—figures of girls and ladies, for instance.

Now—a game.

Take marbles and flip at them to see how many you can knock down at a lick, or make a sort of bowling alley and bowl at them with marbles. It is great fun!

Experiments of Tom Tit

SUPPOSE we first have something to eat, boys and girls. Let's eat knives and forks. How? Oh, that is the trick.

Ask one of the friends present to lend you a knife, which you must cover with both hands, the end of the handle excepted. And setting the point to your eye, say, "Somebody please strike the knife with his fist."

But nobody will; because it is such a dangerous thing to do. Then, setting your hand on the side of the table, look about you and say: "What! will nobody strike it in?" Meantime, let the knife slip into your lap, then make as if you would slap it hastily into your mouth, or hold with one hand and strike it (apparently the knife) with the other.

Then make a few wry faces, saying: "Now let some one put his fingers into my mouth and pull it out."

While the folks are trying to make out whether you are serious or are simply plotting to bite their fingers, you can spirit the knife into your pocket and make the mystery seem all the more mysterious when some one finally investigates your mouth and finds the knife is not there.

Next, let's try the magic bell and bushel. This is a fine trick if you do it right.

The bushel must be turned neatly, like the trick eggboxes that you have seen, in order that one may not easily discover where it opens. And you should have a false lid to clasp on and off.

Upon the false lid paste some birdseed. Then have a true lid to clasp neatly upon the false one, and an artificial bell to go with your bushel.

You may make your bell of wood or brass. It must be made to unscrew at the top, that it may hold as much seed as your bushel will when it is filled; and you should have the handle of the bell made with a spring, so as to let the seed fall down at your word of command.

Work the trick as follows (be sure to fill the top of your bell with seed before you begin to perform, and hold the bell by the handle):

"Ladies and gentlemen," you should say, "you see that I have nothing in my bell nor in my bushel. Therefore, I will fill my bushel with seed."

Then fill it and clap on the false lid. (Nobody will know any better.) Then ask anybody in the company to hold the bushel in his hands, and say that you will command the seed under the magical bell.

So, clasp the true lid on, and then ring your bell; and, sure enough, the seed will apparently have gone out of the bushel into the bell, to the mystification of the beholders.

Now let us try the mysterious egg trick:

An egg can be shown in a bottle with a mouth too narrow for it to have passed through. How did it get there? When an egg is soaked in equal parts of strong acetic acid and water it becomes softened, and may be pressed into any form. Water will again harden it. You might remark to your friends that you had at first thought of exhibiting the hen in that bottle, but left that trick for another occasion.

Another good trick is the fire-eater trick:

Prepare a piece of thick string about nine inches long by soaking it in a saturated solution of nitre and drying it. Wrap the string in a piece of tow and ignite it. Hold it in the left hand; with the right hand put some tow into the mouth, chew it and appear to swallow it. Now take the handful in which is the string and put into the mouth, taking out at the same time, unobserved, the piece already chewed. Take a breath through the nostrils and breathe it out through the mouth. Repeat a few times and smoke will issue forth, and on opening wide the mouth it will be lighted up with a glow. When the mouth is shut and the tow pressed together the fire goes out.

Next we will change a white flower into a red one:

This is a performance suitable for the garden or the drawing room. The dry petals of a white rose or any other flower must be first delicately, and as far as possible uniformly, sprinkled with aniline crystals. The rose should be shaken so as to leave as little as possible visible; what there is will be only trifling specks. By bringing to play on it a spray of eau de cologne or other spirit from a vaporizer—those connected with a finger ring enable the performance to be most mysteriously accomplished—the delicate white petals can be promptly suffused with a rich crimson blush.

Some Good Games to Play

HAVE you played the game of "Fishermen"?

Mark off two lines across a clear piece of ground (or across a beach if you are at the shore) about [illegible]-five feet apart. Then let all the children count out to see who is to be fisherman.

The fisherman must stand between the lines of players and repeat the following rhyme:

"[illegible] little fishes, from the river to the sea!
[illegible] little fishes—one—two—three!"

At the word "three," all the children [illegible] must run across his territory and land beyond their opponents' line, and while they run, he (the fisherman) must catch as many as he can.

Those who are caught now become fishermen and help him catch more fish. The game goes on as before, the fishermen all repeating the rhyme in concert until all the fishes have been caught.

In the game of "King Caesar," one player is chosen to be the King. All the others form two rows, one at each end of the ground, with a line drawn across the front of each row to mark the "den."

All the players must keep within their respective lines, and King Caesar stands in the middle, between the lines. Any number of players can then rush across from one den to the other, King Caesar trying to catch one as they run. If he catches one, he must succeed in holding him while counting ten, the boy meantime trying his best to break away. If he cannot, he then remains with the King and helps him catch others.

When the other den becomes empty, the King goes into it, and says: "Crown the base; one, two, three," three times. If no player from the other den can go across to his den before he has finished, then he may choose some boy from the other den to run across to his.

This boy must run, whether he wishes to or not, but may be supported by any number of volunteer helpers, the King, meanwhile, doing his best to capture him.

Then there is the game of "Jolly Miller."

"There was a jolly miller, he lived by himself;
As the wheel went round he made his wealth,
One hand in the hopper, another in his bag,
As the wheel went 'round, he made his grab."

There must be an uneven number of players. All of the children, except one, stand in couples, arm in arm, and singing this verse, march around in a circle, each couple closely following the other. The odd child stands in the centre. At the word "grab," the children marching on the inside of the circle let go of their partners' arms and try to catch hold of the one standing immediately in front of their previous partners.

Now, the child who has been in the centre tries to secure one of the partners and thus get a place in the circle. If he succeeds, the one who was left out must take the centre, and the game goes on as described.

"Fox and Goose" is another good game.

Mr. Fox takes his place in one end of the room or lawn, while Mother Goose gathers her little geese behind her in a line, he first clasping her waist and the others clasping each other's waist in turn.

Then Mr. Fox and Mother Goose hold the following conversation, Mother Goose beginning:

"What are you doing this fine morning?"

"Taking a walk."

"What are you after?"

"After an appetite for my breakfast."

"What will you have for your breakfast?"

"A fat goose I'll have for my breakfast."

"Where'll you get it?"

"I see your little geese are handy, so I'll satisfy myself with one of yours."

"Catch one if you can."

Then there is a lively scene. Mother Goose spreads out her arms and the little ones cling tight. But they must not break the line.

Mr. Fox dodges around and snatches all the geese he can capture.

The game can stop here or can be continued, thus:

Having put his captives in his den (located wherever he sees fit), Mr. Fox can repeat his conversation with Mother Goose. Then, while he is dodging around trying to catch some of the geese, his captives can make an attempt to run back and join the Mother Goose line again. If they succeed in doing so without being touched by Mr. Fox, they can stay there until recaptured.

But if touched by him while trying to escape, they must return to the den and wait for another opportunity to escape.

Two players join hands, holding them up as an arch for the others to march through. All the players sing the two following verses:

"Hark, the robbers coming through,
Coming through, coming through!
Hark, the robbers coming through,
My fair lady! (or gentleman!)

What have the robbers done to you,
Done to you, done to you?
What have the robbers done to you,
My fair lady? (or gentleman?)

Just as the second verse is finished the player then going through the arch is stopped, and one of the players forming the arch sings the third and fourth verses, as follows:

You have stolen my watch and chain,
Watch and chain, watch and chain!
You have stolen my watch and chain,
My fair lady! (or gentleman!)

Half-a-dollar you must pay,
You must pay, you must pay!
Half-a-dollar you must pay,
My fair lady! (or gentleman!)

Then all sing the fifth verse, as follows:

Half-a-dollar we cannot pay,
Cannot pay, cannot pay!
Half-a-dollar we cannot pay,
My fair lady! (or gentleman!)

The last verse is sung by the one who sang the third and fourth verses, and he seizes the nearest person in the marching line and makes him prisoner as he sings:

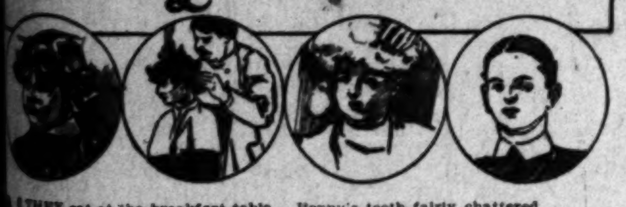
Off to prison you must go,
You must go, you must go,
Off to prison you must go,
My fair lady! (or gentleman!)

The next time the other player forming the arch sings the third, fourth and sixth verses and takes the prisoner. In this way two equal sides are at last formed, and then they proceed to tug against each other, and the strongest side wins the game

Divide by Four.

A boy is sent to the grocer's for a pound of raisins, and on his way home meets three other boys. How many times did the four boys go into the pound?

Benny's Hair-Cut.



AS THEY sat at the breakfast table one morning, the first picture shows the way Benny looked.

"Mercy!" said mother, "Benny [illegible] must have his hair cut. He [illegible] look pretty any more. Can't [illegible] him in to the barber's, father?"

"[illegible]" said father, "we'll go directly [illegible] breakfast."

[illegible] Benny and his father went down [illegible] city, and pretty soon they reached [illegible] barber's parlor.

"[illegible] little fellow wants a shearing," [illegible] father.

"[illegible] right, sir," answered the barber, "[illegible], too, sir?"

"[illegible] you might as well," said father. "[illegible] Benny, I'll leave you here for half [illegible]; then I'll come back."

"[illegible] in this chair," said the barber. [illegible] so Benny climbed into a chair [illegible] a great big mirror.

[illegible] barber took a pair of sharp [illegible] and clip-clip-clip off came ever [illegible] long locks of Benny's hair.

"[illegible], I didn't know I had so much [illegible]," said Benny.

"[illegible] take a nice long lock home to [illegible], Benny," said the barber. "[illegible] never have any more hair like [illegible] know."

"[illegible] just what I shall do," said [illegible].

[illegible] the barber took a bottle and [illegible] and shook it and squirted a lot [illegible] into his hands and then ran [illegible] all through Benny's hair.

"[illegible]!" exclaimed Benny. "[illegible] making a snowball of my head."

[illegible] boys and girls would have [illegible], too, if you could have seen [illegible].

"[illegible]" laughed the barber. "You [illegible] like a snowball, but you don't [illegible] this warm day, I'll warrant."

"[illegible], I don't," said Benny.

[illegible] barber told him to go over [illegible] part of the room where there [illegible] chair and at the head of [illegible].

"[illegible] and hang your head back [illegible]," directed the barber, and [illegible] as he was told.

[illegible] barber connected a piece of [illegible] turned on the water, and—

"[illegible]" gasped Benny, "what are [illegible] me?"

"[illegible] the soap out of your [illegible]" the barber, as he turned [illegible] the hose here and there all [illegible] head.

"[illegible] hot?"

"[illegible] mind, it'll soon be cold."

"[illegible] better, I like that," re[illegible], as the barber made the [illegible] less warm. After that he [illegible] and finally so cold that just [illegible] or two that it lasted Benny's teeth fairly chattered.

Then the barber wiped his head with his towel and walked him back to the regular barber-chair. And, drawing up a queer-looking machine, lighted a gas jet somewhere under it; and the next minute a fan began to zip-whirr-r-r busily behind Benny's head.

"Whew!" ejaculated Benny. "That feels like the north wind!"

"Oh, it won't feel that way very long!" said the barber. "The gas heat will soon make it warm."

Which it did, sure enough; and then it felt like the south wind. And now the barber did such an odd thing—he connected a piece of hose with the fanning machine and turned this south wind on Benny's hair, just as through the other hose he had turned on water.

In about five minutes Benny's hair was perfectly dry. And the barber dressed and parted it neatly, so that by the time his father came back he scarcely knew his own son.

And no wonder! For the fourth picture shows the way Benny looked.

His head looked several sizes smaller and himself several inches taller than before his hair was cut.

"Papa, I want to give a lock of my hair to mamma," said Benny.

"All right," said his father; "we'll go to the jeweler's and have him put it in a pretty locket. And by the time we are ready to start for home it will be ready for us."

So, that evening they got the locket from the jeweler's and gave it to Benny's mother. When she saw Benny and then the lock of hair she broke down and cried a little.

"For, Benny, Benny, you aren't my baby boy any more," she sighed.

Some Amusing Epitaphs

(Are there any amusing or curious epitaphs on old headstones in your neighboring cemeteries, boys and girls? Polly Evans would be glad to hear what they are, if you will kindly write to her.)

THIS inscription is to be found on a tombstone in an English churchyard. The man to whose memory it was raised was, as the writing explains, fond of eating:

"Here lie the bones
Of Joseph Jones,
Who ate whilst he was able;
But once o'erfed
He dropped down dead
And fell beneath the table.
When from his tomb
To meet his doom
He rises amidst sinners,
Since he must dwell
In heaven or ——,
Take him—which gives best dinners."

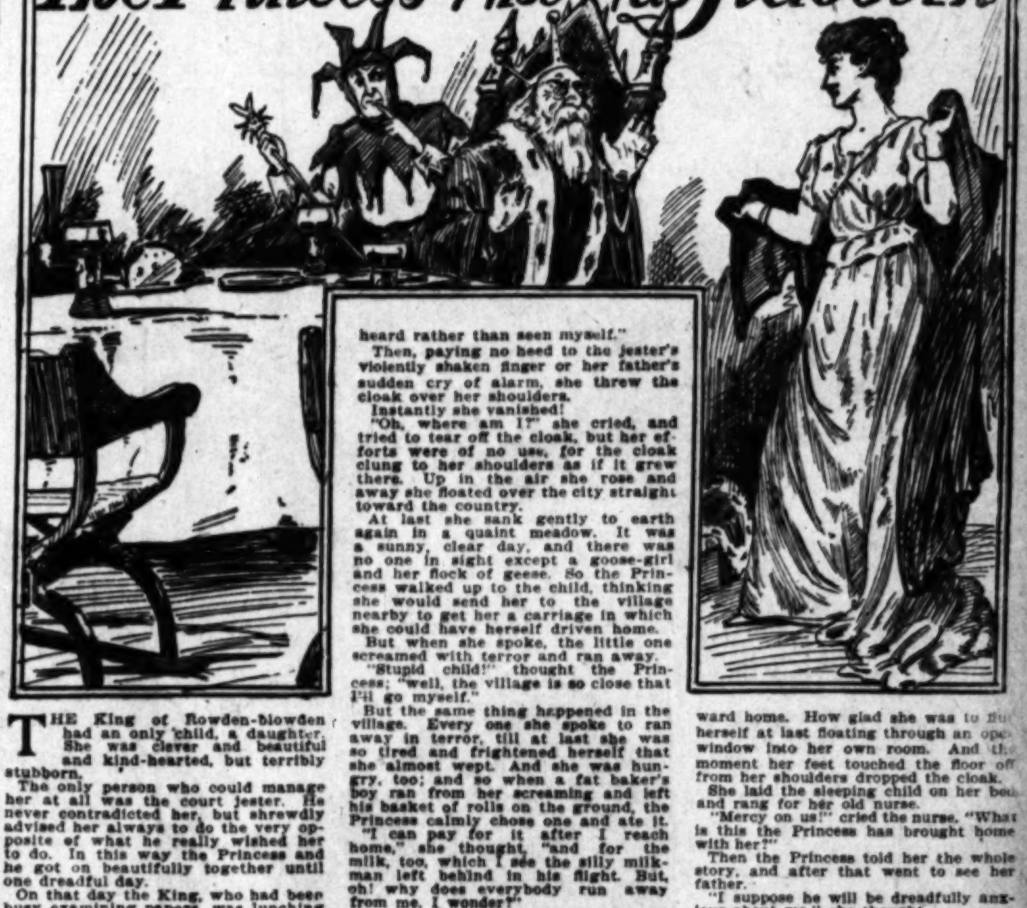
A stone in an English churchyard shows this plaintive epitaph. The trade of the deceased while he was alive and the manner of his death are both explained in the quaint rhyme:

"Weep, stranger, for a father spilled
From a stagecoach and thereby killed;
His name was John Sykes, a maker of sassangers, .
Slain with three other outside passengers."

Enoch Wood, a rustic celebrity, who was locally famous as a cricketer, died in 1852, and this was raised to his memory:

"Tread gently, stranger, 'neath this mound,
The bones of Enoch Wood are laid,
Hard by the village cricket ground
Whereon in life he often played.
How oft in vain the bowlers sought
To bring an end to Enoch's stay!
How oft his curly ones have brought
To other batsmen dire dismay!
Alas! no more he'll make a score,
For, faced by that grim bowler, Gout,
He chanced to get his Leg before,
And Death, the umpire, gave him 'Out.'
His game of life is played and won,
An honest man—brave, gentle, sage.
He'll hear the Victor's meed, 'Well done!'
When God works out his average."

The Princess Who Was Stubborn



THE King of Rowden-blowden had an only child, a daughter. She was clever and beautiful and kind-hearted, but terribly stubborn.

The only person who could manage her at all was the court jester. He never contradicted her, but shrewdly advised her always to do the very opposite of what he really wished her to do. In this way the Princess and he got on beautifully together until one dreadful day.

On that day the King, who had been busy examining papers, was lunching quietly in his study, and the court jester was the only person waiting on him. The Princess was also in the apartment and amused herself by looking at everything in the room. Suddenly she interrupted her father.

"See what a funny old cloak I've found in that big cupboard!" she exclaimed. "What do you keep it for, father?"

The King, being rather cross at the interruption and forgetting his daughter's unlucky stubbornness, spoke rather sharply and to the point:

"Put it right back, my dear."

"Why, pray tell?" demanded the Princess, obstinately.

The court jester motioned to the King to be careful, but in vain.

"Because I bid you do so, my daughter, and because young people should be seen rather than heard," he returned irritably.

"Then I shan't," declared the haughty Princess. "I shall put it on and see how I look in it, and I prefer to be heard rather than seen myself."

Then, paying no heed to the jester's violently shaken finger or her father's sudden cry of alarm, she threw the cloak over her shoulders.

Instantly she vanished!

"Oh, where am I?" she cried, and tried to tear off the cloak, but her efforts were of no use, for the cloak clung to her shoulders as if it grew there. Up in the air she rose and away she floated over the city straight toward the country.

At last she sank gently to earth again in a quaint meadow. It was a sunny, clear day, and there was no one in sight except a goose-girl and her flock of geese. So the Princess walked up to the child, thinking she would send her to the village nearby to get her a carriage in which she could have herself driven home.

But when she spoke, the little one screamed with terror and ran away.

"Stupid child!" thought the Princess; "well, the village is so close that I'll go myself."

But the same thing happened in the village. Every one she spoke to ran away in terror, till at last she was so tired and frightened herself that she almost wept. And she was hungry, too; and so when a fat baker's boy ran from her screaming and left his basket of rolls on the ground, the Princess calmly chose one and ate it.

"I can pay for it after I reach home," she thought, "and for the milk, too, which I see the silly milkman left behind in his flight. But, oh! why does everybody run away from me, I wonder?"

And she might have continued wondering to this hour if a curious thing had not happened.

It was growing dark and chilly, and the Princess was sitting by the roadside, cold and unhappy, without an idea how far from home she was, and wishing she had not been so foolish and stubborn, when she heard a soft cry of pain. There on the grass near her was a tiny, ragged baby boy, just able to toddle. He was whimpering with pain, for his little bare feet were bruised and cut.

The Princess forgot her troubles.

"Oh! poor darling!" she said, and jumped up. And, strange to say, the baby stopped crying and let her bathe his feet in the brook and bandage them with strips from her soft muslin dress.

And then she gathered him under the old cloak and sang him to sleep. Just as he fell asleep, what do you suppose happened? Why, the Princess found herself lifted in air and flying straight toward home. How glad she was to find herself at last floating through an open window into her own room. And the moment her feet touched the floor off from her shoulders dropped the cloak.

She laid the sleeping child on her bed and rang for her old nurse.

"Mercy on us!" cried the nurse. "What is this the Princess has brought home with her?"

Then the Princess told her the whole story, and after that went to see her father.

"I suppose he will be dreadfully anxious about me," she thought.

But, lo and behold! he was still sitting calmly in his room, and the court jester was with him.

"So you are back, my dear?" he said, with a twinkle in his eye. "And how did the cloak fit, eh?"

"Oh, father!" cried the Princess, "don't tease, if you please; but tell me what is that terrible cloak?"

"It is the magic cloak of Justice," said the King;" and it punishes and rewards so strictly that I keep it locked up. You see, it took you at your word, and made you heard rather than seen."

"Oh! and that is the reason why everybody screamed and ran away. I see!" said the Princess. "Well, I don't wonder, I'm sure. But why did it bring me back?"

"Because you were good again, of course," said the King.

"Oh, I see! I was good to the little boy. Well, I promise you, father, dear, I am cured of stubbornness, once and for all."

And she was, too. E. D. F.

It is heard in France and in Versailles, too,
In Eiffel Tower and Nice it also has something to do.
Dreyfus and Loubet must not be left out,
In the French republic it is, without doubt;

A Peculiar Sea Anemone

MOST varieties of sea anemones attach themselves to rocks or other hard substances, but there are some that make their home in sand, in which they can bury themselves completely, or above the surface of which they can as readily rise.

Extended, these sea anemones may be seven or eight inches in length, or more; collapsed, they settle down so that their tentacled upper disc is flush with the surface of the sand or mud in which they bury themselves, or it may be drawn down a little below it, making a little depression, a veritable trap for any small creature that might chance to wander that way.

Not Under Control.

Tommy had got into a bad habit of making faces behind his teacher's back at school. He always prided himself on his smartness at never being caught; but he made an ugly grimace once too often.

"What are you doing, you bad boy?" demanded the wrathful teacher, flashing round and almost withering the lad with a fierce look.

"Oh, please, sir," whimpered Tommy, "I was going to laugh, but my face slipped."

A Cat With Wings.

The boatswain of the "Caspian," an English schooner, brought with him from India a strange animal-bird, which he always referred to as his "Tabby." It certainly looked more like a cat than anything else; but it was probably some freak of the animal world. It had two pairs of wings, but could fly only with difficulty, like a tame duck.

This is Said to be the Finest White Hybrid Rose Yet Produced. It Thrives in a Cold Climate

An Ever Blooming Tea Rose Created by Hybridization.

GIVE a true genius facility to carry on his chosen work, and he asks for nothing more.

No better illustration is needed than that of Dr. Walter Van Fleet, pottering about in his rose garden at Little Silver, N. J., oblivious to the praise of experts, who pronounce him the greatest hybridizer of roses; caring nothing for money or the world's goods; content to put fortunes into the pockets of nursery owners, and receive for himself only the satisfaction of doing congenial work.

To produce new varieties of flowers he has given up a medical practice which bade fair to make him wealthy; he has undergone severe physical hardships, and at times has been upon the threshold of poverty

Curiously enough, his work has received greatest recognition outside of America. In Europe horiculture experts do not hesitate to pronounce him greater than Burbank in the hybridization of roses and gladiolas.

Even more important than the invention of beautiful roses has been Dr. Van Fleet's conquest of climate. He has taken the glorious flowers of California and fitted them to the rigorous winter of the East.

For ten years he tried patiently to secure a double hardy climbing rose of free-blooming habit, and at last succeeded.

WHEN you look from your window at, say, a Sir Thomas Lipton rosebush, whose immense white blooms are enjoyed all summer; when your nostrils are delighted by the fragrance of the double pink New Century; when over fence and wall your eye traces the pink, white and red course of the May Queen, Pearl Queen and Ruby Queen ramblers, you may consider yourself indebted to this quiet, hard-working, praise-shunning physician in the little New Jersey country town.

The popular ever-blooming pillar rose, Birdie Blye, is another of his creations. He produced the noted Magna-Frano, whose large pink flowers bloom constantly from early June to frost.

Tens of thousands of people are made happier every year because Dr. Van Fleet gave up his medical practice to devote himself to the hybridization of roses. Considering this, are his sacrifices in vain? He is satisfied.

If he had followed the course of least resistance, he would, perhaps, be a railroad magnate now, for his father was vice president of the Erie Railroad, and would have given him every advantage.

But Walter Van Fleet was satisfied to just work in the flower garden of his home at Renovo, Pa. When pressed to choose a profession he decided on medicine, was graduated and established a profitable practice; but gradually that old childhood craving for the rose garden got the better of him.

Giving up his practice—although he has every year since passed a medical examination—he leased a farm at Alexandria, Va. That was twenty years ago, when Dr. Van Fleet was 30 years of age.

Unable to make the farm pay, he gave it up and took a position as gardener in a nursery at West Grove, Pa., at a very meagre salary. And he had a wife, too; but she was one of those devoted, self-sacrificing women who think only of their husbands' pleasure.

For several years subsequently he was a member of a co-operative horticultural colony in the wilds of Tennessee.

Since settling in Little Silver, N. J., he has devoted part of his time to literary work in connection with horticulture, but has regularly labored in his garden at least three days a week.

He has no elaborate equipment, no helper, save a young man and Mrs. Van Fleet.

Combining the best qualities of the Lucullus and the Liberty, he secured what is known as "No. 100," a hardy dwarf continuous bloomer, with a good double flower.

Crossing the Helene, a rambler hybrid, with the Lucullus, he gained an even bloom with the climbing habit and a distinctively new form.

Again, he desired to get a rose of double bloom which would bloom freely, have a double flower, would climb and would retain a hardy nature. "Impossible," said friends in whom he placed his confidence.

Never once did he give it up. He knew that from the Wichuriana he could get the hardiness and the climbing habit, but he would have to eliminate that rose's single flower. Then in the Marie Lambert rose he saw the double flower; but this is a bush rose and not hardy. Here were a good many qualities to combine.

Year after year for ten years he persisted in the crossing. Every season he saw dozens of flowers come from his hybridization, but not one possessed the qualities he desired. He knew, however, that if he persevered, some time a single successful rose might come from the exertions. And one did come. Flower experts consider it the most marvelous accomplishment in this line.

Next year one of his roses, the Charles Wagner, is to be put on the market. It is a Victor Hugo, crossed with an ordinary rose, producing a hearty hybrid perpetual free bloomer of deep crimson color.

The Philadelphia Rambler, which blooms two weeks in advance of the old Crimson Rambler, and which, last summer, was given a certificate of merit at the London Temple Flower Show, is a Van Fleet production. Another well-known child of his genius is the American Pillar.

CAST-IRON LANGUAGE.

Andrew Carnegie, the laird of Skibo, is undoubtedly a person who deserves a great deal of attention from us all, and the President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, stands, taking him all in all, absolutely at the head of all the men of the [illegible] time. There is no king or ruler upon earth [illegible] are higher and whose influence is greater. Carnegie has proved his adeptness in mechanical [illegible] a long lifetime. As a follower of Tubal-Cain he is one of the leading men in iron-working in [illegible] of iron. The President is a great statesman and [illegible] politician. The Scotchman in iron work and Knickerbocker in statesmanship may well challenge [illegible] with any man. They are both great philanthropists and in this respect may challenge comparison.

When it comes to making a language as cast iron [illegible] or making one as charges up San Juan Hill [illegible] on, they are out of their element and are [illegible] to failure. Languages are living things, as endowed with life of their kind as the oak tree is with life [illegible] or a human body with its type of life.

[illegible] spelling is no new thing. The whole effort of written speech is toward phonetic language. It has always been so, and it always will be so. But all [illegible] in spelling as well as in the grammars of all languages have been made in the living use of the language slowly and through long ages. One of the new [illegible] the Carnegie school of spelling is to change ph [illegible] wherever it occurs. This has been tried before, [illegible] worked successfully in some languages. In [illegible] the double consonant has given place to the [illegible] in every instance. It is possible that we [illegible] that spelling with a good deal of benefit [illegible] language. Of course the obstructionists object [illegible] would cloud the origin of a word to change its [illegible] in this way. This is hardly tenable. Scholars [illegible] Greek would have no more difficulty in tracing [illegible] photograph back to its original Greek if spelled with f's than they have as it is spelled at the present day.

It is not such an easy matter to decide by sound exactly how to spell a word. We have some examples in the English language which would not only puzzle Mr. Carnegie with his cast-iron language theory, but even the President himself, with all his Harvard cultivation. Take the proper name so familiar here in Southern California, Tehachepi. The man who will spell that phonetically and be sure that every other ear will catch the same vowel sounds as his will study a long time. There is only one vowel in that proper name that is not utterly indefinite. You can go through it syllable by syllable from end to end and try every vowel in the English language, and each one will fit about as well as the other in almost every syllable. If we will turn to Chaucer and the other writers of his age, when the English language was unformed because printing had just come into existence, we will find it exceedingly difficult to determine just how words are spelled by sound. Chaucer himself spells the same word often in half a dozen different ways. The word that has settled down into the form "sudden" is spelled in ten different ways if not more by Chaucer and the other men of his time. If ten people will sit down and attempt to spell the word "sudden" as they think it sounds, they will probably find that they have half a dozen different spellings of the word. Our adverb "there" is spelled all through Chaucer "ther." Is the "e" short or long? What does your ear say? Why not spell it "thar?" For the life of you you can't tell. He spells manner "manere." That was the way his ear caught the sounds. The advocate of phonetic spelling who will sit down and go through a few pages of Chaucer will find examples of phonetic spelling which will puzzle him to account for. When Chaucer tried to spell "long ago" without a dictionary he spelled it with a "y" instead of an "a," and if you pronounce it you will find that it sounds all right. "Beard" is "berd," and it is difficult to decide whether the "e" is long or short.

It is useless to multiply examples. The whole language of Chaucer's time, before dictionaries had been printed, was full of just such discrepancies owing to phonetic spelling. Of course it does not follow from this that we should not know that "berd" stands for the same word "beard" and is to be pronounced the same. But that would be a matter of knowledge on your own part, and our ear would not help us at all in arriving at a just conclusion about the matter. The English language is an exceedingly complicated one as it is. No cast-iron inventions by the Pittsburgh Tubal-Cain, nor even by the scholarly President, will make it otherwise. The language is complex in its origins. In one respect it is the simplest language ever spoken by highly civilized people. To master the grammar of the Greek language with its almost half dozen moods and its almost half score of tenses requires years of study. The man who has mastered the subjunctive mood in Latin has expended years of study on that one point alone. The grammar of the French language is very complicated and the grammatical uses are of extreme delicacy. The German grammar is even more complicated than the French. Here is one point where living use on the lips of an intensely practical people has resulted in a linguistic simplification never known before. English has been aptly termed the grammarless language. But all these changes are like the branches, twigs, and leaves of the oak. They are a natural growth, and each one fits into its own place, harmoniously and naturally. They could not have been made by cast-iron inventions devised at Pittsburgh.

This is not to say that the campaign being carried on by the laird of Skibo and the strenuous President will result in nothing. It will tend to call the attention of scholars to unnecessary existing complications in the language and will act like cultivation around a tree, or rather like abundant fertilizing in producing more rapid and luxurious growth in the living organism of our language.

MORNING.

Storm-dark cloud 'gainst heaven's blue,
  Lightning flash by thunder's roar attended,
Plains, meadows, woodlands flushed with dew,
  Rainbow tints with bursts of sunshine blended:
Night's curtains folded, stars at rest,
  Orchestral airs of winds and waves in chorus,
Flame streaks athwart the blushing east,
  Morning, glorious morning, streameth o'er us.

NOON.

Wealth of sunshine falling o'er the world
  Illumines mountains, plain and cool retreat,
Like quivering lances penciled rays are hurled
  In color surges o'er fields of wind-swept wheat.
In cataracts it rolls mid fleecy films of cloud
  Till vast creation thrills with life and power
And all the earth in matchless, witching mood,
  Declares life's zenith in the noon-tide hour.

NIGHT.

Low-arched to earth the heavens bend,
  The wind harps thrummed and soothed to rest
The shades of night with day's rich colors blend,
  The sun has marked a trail of glory in the west,
God's hand hath set the evening star
  So low it soon must pass from sight
Beyond the purple hills and ocean's bar
  Shall darkened be. 'Tis calm and holy night.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

THE LOVE OF CHANCE.

ON the strength of the belief that "life is but a game of chance," many people seem to be determined to play the game with as persistent a recklessness as possible, holding nothing too sacred or too dear to be placed at stake, while every form of human activity under such a conception of life becomes a thrilling "side issue," teeming with the speculative spirit and covetous temper of the whole. The epidemic itch of commercialism is the prevalent disease infesting the remotest recesses of the world, engendering the ruinous lust for chance profits or fortuitous rewards to which old and young, native or foreigner, man or woman, sooner or later, succumb.

Hearken to the gossip of the streets; listen to the chance remarks in social circles; what is the nature of the rumors calling forth condemnation of men in private life, or evoking anathemas that are hurled at the heads of administrators of public affairs! All-pervasive is this overpowering disposition to gain by gambling, to pluck financial plums, not by the slow, legitimate process of growth, not by planting, tending and garnering, but to gather stores of riches today in places that yesterday were devoid of promise.

The stress and stir of our quick-pulsing national life is carrying us into a vortex of rapid transformations. Instead of wholesome growth from germinal stage to maturity, there is a maddening haste for premature development in industry, finance, agriculture; in the construction of houses as in the building of character, the aim is to span the distance between the beginning and end in a single leap by running a daring risk; to accomplish both start and finish, not by a graded course of rising steps, but by taking somehow, somewhere, at the expense of oneself or others, a tremendous chance!

The chief forms of amusement at popular pleasure resorts are a typical expression of this love of chance that dominates all classes from the millionaire sportsman to the ragged urchin who stakes his last nickel on the hope of working a lightning change in his condition by a "lucky hit."

Hence there is but small difference today between much of the spirit pervading the commercial field and the atmosphere of the race track and gaming table.

We note especially among the vast numbers of enterprise-seekers in the newer countries of the Far West, a wild and feverish play for prosperity. Success is sought, not so much through hard work, or irreproachable methods of procedure, but by illicit arts of trade deserving of severest moral censure.

Men gamble with their reputation, with their liberty, their lives and loves, as thev do with their money, their property or other valuables. Hence they resort to shrewd tricks and keen devices to fool and mislead any who will engage in a game with them, and instead of offering a "square deal," or the honest man's share to his fellows, their joy is the wicked sport of unholy self-advancement. Much of the talk of the "market" reminds one of the ráffler's stall at a county fair. Never is the important point value for value, or worth rendered for price received; but ever is urgent appeal made to one to buy a "big chance" at a little cost. To drop your coin into the machine of fortune when the swiftly-revolving wheel will cast forth, for the trifling stakes entered, fabulous returns.

In their impatience to arrive at their heart's desire by a happy stroke of chance, and not by careful culture and studious improvement of conditions, men talk and act as if the human race came into existence but yesterday and not millions of years ago. Life is short, they aver; and it is a risky game at best to live. Death is certain, and pleasure is sweet. So they seek land instead of life, and would find happiness in extension of territory, at the cost of character.

It is due to a mere matter of chance that we are here at all, so they argue, and perchance we shall be no more tomorrow; hence, what boots it to do wisely and well for a day? Moreover, for some the straight course is too prosaic and uninteresting; they prefer the flush and hey-dey excitement attendant upon a more hazardous mode of transacting the business of the world.

However, the greatest evil from this extreme love of chance in the psychical nature of man does not issue solely from the mart, nor persist there alone. It possesses no less the men entrusted with safe transportation of human lives. It seizes in its diabolical grasp operators of steam and electric railways who, yielding to the treacherous impulse to take a turn at a terrible play of chance, rush headlong into danger for the sheer delight of experiencing the thrilling sensation of a narrow escape.

All such men, who are inclined to a spirit of wantonness, and out of the passion for perilous situations to place in jeopardy the lives dependent upon the conscientious performance of their duty, should be seriously impressed with the grave difference between times of work and times of play. When every nerve and muscle should be bent in strict attention to the duty before him, there is no time to indulge in reckless, boyish competitive pranks, to give way to personal feelings for a risky bit of so-called "fun," likely to result in dire calamity.

On and on we could trace indefinitely this gaming spirit or love of chance, which winds its way like a hideous serpent through every path of life; with a reptile-like attracting power, fascinating its victims, holding them transfixed until, risking all, spending all, forgetting all, in the fervid glow of high expectations, they are at last aroused only to sense the terrorizing chill of final destruction World's Furniture Center. By Frank G. Carpenter.

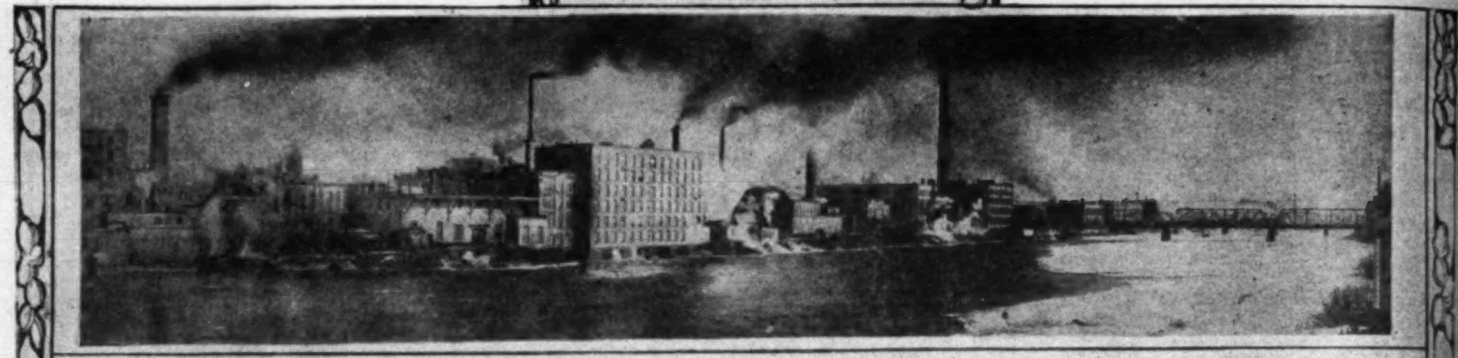
GRAND RAPIDS.

FAIRS AT WHICH THE SALES RUN INTO THE MILLIONS.

GRAND RAPIDS (Mich.) Sept. 2.—Grand Rapids is the furniture center of the world. It picks its lumber from every forest and sends it out all over the United States and to Europe, South America, Africa and Australia, in the shape of beds, tables, chairs and office furniture. There are, at this writing, lumber camps in Mexico and Central America chopping out mahogany for these factories, agents are stationed at Liverpool to buy up the best timber brought in from South America and Africa, for Grand Rapids, and there is scarcely a hardwood section noted for its fine lumber which is not tributary to this point. During my stay at Panama last year I found that Grand Rapids men had taken out concessions for the best mahogany on the isthmus. I saw other Grand Rapids buyers in Cuba snapping up the best timbers as they were brought out to the railroads and the sea, and during a recent foreign tour I discovered an agency for Grand Rapids office furniture in every European capital.



Grand Rapids, the World's Furniture Center

A Great Furniture Fair.

Indeed, this is one of the queer commercial centers of the globe, and is different from any other in that it seems to have monopolized its specialty. It is more like one of the great fair cities of medieval times to which the merchants and buyers from all over Europe went to make their annual purchases. The most of such centers have long since disappeared, although in one or two of them fairs are still held. Leipsic has a fur market to which fur buyers from all parts of the world annually come, and also a book fair, which is largely attended. In the middle ages nearly all the trading of England was done at fairs, and the same was true of France, Germany and Italy. The largest commercial fair of the world today is at Nijni Novgorod, in Russia. It lasts for about a month or six weeks and brings together buyers from Western Asia and Europe.

The daily attendance at that fair numbers 200,000, and it is estimated that $200,000,000 changes hands at each of its annual sessions. Everything is at wholesale, and the single purchases are large.

The furniture fairs at Grand Rapids are held twice a year, and the sales then run up into the millions. Exposition buildings have been constructed for them, and one of these is so large that its floors cover fifteen acres. Practically all the goods sold are from orders given at the fairs, and the factories spend large sums in preparing their exhibits. A single firm may spend $50,000 upon its samples, and all goods will be sold from the sample thus shown.

Buyers from Everywhere.

The furniture sold here is not confined to Grand Rapids. The factories in other parts of the country rent space and send in samples so that the buyer has the furniture of the United States to choose from.

The buyers come from everywhere, and they number hundreds. Many are representatives of wholesale houses, many purchase for department stores, and some represent big retail dealers.

Not a few bring their families with them, making this the vacation tour of the year, and at such times the Grand Rapids hotels are full even to the cots in their hallways. The city then puts on its gayest clothing. There are dinners and receptions night after night. The furniture-makers subscribe to an entertainment fund, and they give their customers automobile rides, parties at the country clubs and everything to keep them in a good humor. The time for these fairs is midwinter and midsummer, the summer sales being devoted to furniture for the market for the following winter and the winter sales to the summer demand.

Why Grand Rapids Is.

I have often wondered why Grand Rapids should monopolize, as it were, the furniture business of our country. Here, in the heart of the United States, with a long railroad haul to each coast, and far away from the South is a city that does business with all the world. The materials it uses in manufacture are heavy, and the greater part of them are carried many thousand miles. The city has some water power, but there is no coal near by to give it cheap steam. It was once close to a hardwood region, but the greater part of the hardwood has been long since cut away, and nevertheless the city grows and increases in its specialty year by year. In 1890 Grand Rapids had just about 60,000 inhabitants. It has today more than 100,000, and its houses and factories are scattered over seventeen square miles. It has sixteen steam railroads, and its tramways, operated by electricity, have fifty miles of track. The public works of Grand Rapids are worth almost $2,000,000, and its clearing-house business is more than $100,000,000 per annum.

Grand Rapids has 532 factories, employing over 20,000 hands, with a daily pay roll of over $50,000. The most of the factories are devoted to furniture, and some of them are enormous. During my stay I have gone through one of the largest, which makes the finest of beds, china closets, dining tables and sideboards. The factory turns out chamber suites which cost as much as $2500, and it has made dining tables worth close to $1000. The most of the furniture is, of course, much cheaper, but all is of the highest grade, and such as you will find in our better-class homes throughout the country.

A large part of the work of this establishment is done in mahogany. The wood is brought here in logs and sawed into boards. The boards are put away in kilns and roasted until every bit of moisture has gone out of them. They are then left under cover for a time in order to absorb enough moisture to be easily worked, and are then run through machine after machine to be trimmed and polished for furniture-making. A great deal of the manufacture is by hand, and many of the laborers receive high wages.

Without attempting to give the process in detail, I will mention one or two odd things I saw as I went through the works.

All Fine Furniture Veneered.

One was that the finest furniture of today is veneered. We like to think that our mahogany is solid and we often talk of our solid mahogany dining tables, sideboards and bedroom sets. The truth is there is mighty little such stuff in the markets, and the veneered furniture is far more beautiful than any solid article could be. The reason is that in veneering a section of wood which has a beautiful grain can be so cut up into sheets that it will cover a large space. The sheets are just about as thick as one's big toe nail, but one log may make several hundred of them, and when they are properly glued to cheaper woods the two are as solid as though they had grown together. The machinery here is such that skins of this fine wood can be fitted to furniture of every shape. It can be pasted around a column or follow the curves of an arm chair or the scroll-like roll of a bedstead. The mahogany is put on rough and is carved, smoothed and polished in such a way that one could not but imagine that every piece is solid.

I found a great deal of original work going on in the factory. One room was devoted to designers who were planning new furniture, and in another skilled carvers were working the wood out according to designs piece by piece. There was also a large photographic room where the finished furniture is photographed to show the trade the coming styles.

William Alden Smith

A Senator in Prospective.

During my stay here I have seen something of William Alden Smith, who for the past dozen years or so has been one of the prominent Republican members of Congress, and who promises to be the next United States Senator from Michigan. William Alden is enthusiastic over the future of Grand Rapids. He has been one of the factors of its growth, and, in addition to his prominence in political life, he is the proprietor of its leading newspaper, the Grand Rapids Herald. Mr. Smith is now wealthy, but his first money was made, as a newsboy, and I think there was some sentiment connected with his purchase of the Herald, although it is fast becoming a valuable property. Indeed, William Alden Smith has had a remarkable career. He was born just about forty-five years ago at the euphonious town of Dowagiac, in Southwestern Michigan. Shortly after he came with his parents, as a boy of 13, to Grand Rapids, his father died, and from then on he made his own way. For a time he acted as a telegraph messenger, and later was appointed page in the Michigan House of Representatives, where he got his first taste of politics. After this he studied law and was admitted to the bar, and he has since practiced in the intervals of his political career.

Mr. Smith is a self-educated man, but he bears the marks of one who is college-bred. The other day he and a Congressional graduate of Yale were dining at the capital with Jeter C. Pritchard, who was in the Senate from North Carolina and is now one of the judges of the United States Circuit Court. Pritchard is an intelligent man, but he has not had a college education. After he left, the Yale representative said to William Alden Smith: "That man Pritchard has ability, and I venture he would have made much more of himself if he had had the educational advantages that you and I have had." I understand that William Alden smiled in his soul, but that he did not tell the Yale graduate that his only schools were those of experience and self-help.

Our Congressional College.

In my talk with Mr. Smith I referred to his self-education, whereupon he remarked:

"It is not right to say that I have not been to college. During the past dozen years or so, I have been going to school in the University of the House of Representatives, and there is none better than that. The duties of Congress are a continual spur toward bettering one's self. One must be careful of his language and is continually studying English. He has to practice to think and speak quickly and precisely; and the man who tries to do his duty must read and study along educational lines quite as hard as any student of our colleges. Indeed, I doubt whether there is any place where the active thinking student can improve more rapidly than in our national House of Representatives at Washington."

William Alden and the Kaiser.

As we chatted together, the subject of Mr. Smith's tour of Europe last year came up, and I asked him about his audience with the Emperor of Germany, saying that it was a strange thing for an ex-newsboy to be talking familiarly with one of the chief rulers of the world. I mentioned an interview which I had once had with the late John Sherman in which he told me that when he was presented to the French Emperor, Louis Napoleon, he wore a pair of velvet-knee breeches ,and I asked William Alden how he was dressed.

"I wore the plain black of an American citizen," was the reply, "and my dress was conspicuous only by its simplicity. My audience took place at the palace, and I was the only one of the party present who was not in uniform. All the others were diplomats or army officers, and they wore gold braid and epaulettes. I had no idea that I should be presented, and I suppose I was indebted to Baron Sternburg, whom I knew as German Ambassador at Washington, for my audience. I know that when I arrived in Berlin I received an intimation that the Kaiser would be glad to see me."

"Did you have any conversation with his majesty?" I asked.

"Yes. He talked with me for about twenty minutes. In meeting his own people he had used more of ceremony, and he seemed to me rather stiff than otherwise. When my turn came to be presented, however, he greeted me just as any gentleman would have greeted another in our country. He trust out his hand, I took it and we shook, and His Majesty seemed to put himself on the same level with me. In the talk which he was animated and interesting. We each said nice things to the other, and His Majesty proposed a number of subjects common to the two nations. One of these was the tariff. He referred to our protective duties and said that he did not like them on the ground that they prevented the increase of German trade. I replied that the Americans did not like the German regulations for the same reason. Thereupon His Majesty laughed. I wish to say that I was impressed with the force of character which shines out in every act of the Kaiser, and also by his evident friendship for the United States."

If William Alden Smith is elected, he will have Gen. Alger's seat in the United States Senate, a place which has long been held by noted men. Zach Chandler kept it in the limelight of publicity for many years. Thomas M. Palmer did likewise, and both McMillan and Alger were Senators of national influence.

I understand that Gen. Alger is by no means well, and that he is anxious to rest. He is now over 70, and his work has been continuous for almost sixty years.

From Log Cabin to the Senate.

Indeed, I doubt whether there is a man in public life who had as hard a boyhood as that of the senior Senator from Michigan. Alger's father was singularly unlucky. He tried a half dozen different businesses and failed in all. He was a pioneer farmer in Ohio at the time Alger was born, and this millionaire Senator, who is now three score and ten, first looked out upon the world through the door of a log cabin. When he was about 11 years of age his father died, and prior to that both father and mother lay sick in the same bed in the log hut, with four little children about, and but little to eat. They both died within a short time of each other, and at the age of 12 the future Senator was the main prop against the cabin door which kept the wolf of hunger out. He once told me of his struggles at that time. He worked for a neighbor, receiving as wages three teacups of flour a day, and this, mixed with the milk from the family cow, formed the food of himself and sisters. There was a little corn in the house, and one day young Russell shelled a bag of this and carried it on his back to a mill nine miles away and traded it for meal. He walked eighteen miles for that meal, and says he cannot remember that he felt especially tired upon his return.

It was shortly after that that young Alger got homes for his younger brother and zister in some neighboring families and then went out to work as a farmer's hand, taking three months off for schooling each winter. His wages during the first two years ranged from $4 to $6 per month, and after he had worked six years he received $15 a month, which, he says, was big wages for farmers in those days. All this time the Senator went to school a part of the year and studied in the meantime. Later on he taught school and then read law, and later still went to Michigan and got into the lumber business, in which, after some financial disasters, he finally became established and gradually amassed a fortune. He is largely interested in lumber today, and has, in addition, other investments which make him one of the wealthiest men of his State.

DISCOVERED BY ACCIDENT.

Numerous Valuable Inventions Have Been Brought Out Unexpectedly.

[Tit-Bits:] The invention of the laryngoscope was due to chance. "I longed," said the late Manuel Garcia, "to see a healthy glottis exposed in the very act of singing. One day in the autumn of 1854 I was strolling in the Palais Royal, when suddenly I saw the two mirrors of the laryngoscope in their respective positions as if actually before my eyes. I went straight to Charriere, the surgical-instrument maker, and was supplied with a dental mirror. Returning home, I placed against the uvula this little mirror, then flashing on its surface with a hand-mirror a ray of sunlight I saw at once the glottis wide open before me, so fully exposed that I could see a portion of the trachea."

The potter's art owes much to accident. When on a journey, in 1720, Simon Astbury chanced, on halting at Dunstable, to notice that one of his horse's eyes was much inflamed. He consulted the hostler, who threw a red-hot flint into a pail of water, thereby reducing the former to a powder, which he applied to the injured eye. Astbury, who had watched the process, preceived therein the solution of a problem that had long perplexed him. He procured a cartload of flints, had them fired and pulverized, and having mixed the powder with pipeclay and water applied it to his ware, which thus, after the first baking, acquired the white shine he had so long sought.

Equally extraordinary was the discovery, in 1703, of the essential ingredient of white porcelain by John Frederick Bottgher. He noticed one morning that his wig was unusually heavy, and, on inquiring the reason of his servant was told that it was owing to the powder, a peculiar kind of white earth then much in vogue for powdering wigs, with which it was covered. Was this the very substance for which he had so long and vainly sought? He submitted it to experiment and discovered in that koalin the want of which had up till then prevented him obtaining complete success.

To Prince Rupert we owe the mezzotint process. Happening one morning to be strolling through Brussels he came upon a soldier cleaning his gun, which, having been left out in the rain all night, was somewhat rusty. To the rusted part the soldier applied a linen cloth, on which the continued rubbing left a rough pattern. This struck the quick witted prince as being capable of application to the purposes of art, and calling to his aid a skilled printer, he carried the idea to a successful conclusion.

British gum was discovered through a fire. When, in [illegible] the starch factory of Chapelizod was burnt to the ground, some calico printers, who in assisting to extinguish the flames had been plentifully bedewed with the starch which the water had washed into the highway, found on attempting to remove their clothes that they adhered to their bodies as if they had been saturated with glue. On returning to the scene of the disaster the men found the ground covered with puddles of glutinous matter, some of which they removed, and found that it served as well as the gum-arabic hitherto employed in their trade. This secret, which they ultimately sold for a small sum, resulted in the issue of our present adhesive postage-stamps.

The discovery of the telescope was brought about by the children of a Dutch spectacle-maker, named Lipperskey, playing with their father's glasses before the door. While shifting and changing the spectacles the children were suprised to see the spire of a distant church brought, as it were, close to their eyes. They called their father to witness the strange sight, and he with his knowledge of optics, at once recognized the opportunity that chance had given him. He forthwith constructed the telescope, which after certain improvements by Galileo, to whom it had been shown, was for a while the wonder of the age.

The arts of war, no less than those of peace, stand indebted to chance. A regiment of Basque soldiers, hard pressed by the enemy near Bayonne, drew the long knives that formed part of their equipment and fastened them into the barrels of their muskets. The charge that followed was so successful that the military authorities adapted and improved upon this sudden inspiration, with the result that, in 1672, the bayonet was adopted by the British Army.

Watts, the Bristol plumber, made £10,000 through a dream. One night he dreamed that while soldering up some defect on the roof of a church he let the ladle of molten metal slip from his hand into the street below. On hastening down to recover the utensil he found to his surprise that the lead which it contained, instead of lying in an intact mass, was scattered around in a myriad of minute globules. On awakening his curiosity prompted him to repeat the experiment when to his surprise the falling metal behaved as it had done in his dream. This discovery, which he at once adapted to the making of lead shot, brought him in the above substantial fortune.

Variety in Wives.

Wordalogue by the Author of Honeymoon Conversations.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHAT would you say," asked the widow, tucking her skirts cautiously about her patent-leather ties and leaning back luxuriously against the variegated pillows, "if I should tell you that I have found the very girl who would make you a model wife?"

The bachelor glanced up indifferently and dipped the paddle lazily into the water.

"What model?" he asked, suspiciously. "Women are like automobiles, you know. There are so many models. And even after you have selected one most carefully you never can tell what it is going to do."

"They are more like horses," declared the widow, "if you know how to handle them, and are gentle and kind——"

"And let them see you're master——"

"And don't jab them with spiteful little spurs——"

"And know when to pull on the curb——"

"And when to coax them with sugar——"

"And when to beat 'em—and even then you can't tell what they're going to shy at or balk at any more than you can tell when an automobile is going to break down or run away or blow up. But this 'model'—is she pretty and fetching and warranted to run smoothly over rough roads and to climb all the matrimonial hills and not puncture a tire in the finances and to be just as good for a long run as for a spurt? Is she smart-looking and substantial and——"

The widow sat up so quickly that the canoe swayed unsteadily beneath them.

"She's not a harem, Mr. Travers!" she cried. "Oh, dear!" she sighed hopelessly, leaning back again, "why is it that every man expects to get a harem of virtues combined in one wife? I don't believe any man but Solomon was ever perfectly satisfied with domestic life."

"Solomon," remarked the bachelor, giving the paddle an emphatic shove, "understood the necessity for variety in wives. But if Solomon had lived in the twentieth century he wouldn't have needed so many—er—annexations. He would have got it all in one modern woman. Now, you, for instance——"

"Speaking impersonally," interrupted the widow, trying to look austere and at the same time to blow a chiffon veil out of her mouth, "when a man buys an automobile he selects a runabout or a victoria or a touring car or a racing machine, according to his needs, and is satisfied."

"Not at all," protested the bachelor. "The moment he has one automobile he is sighing for another, and he is never happy until he has a garage full——"

"And it is the same about a coat or a hat," persisted the widow, ignoring the interruption; "he picks out what suits him best; but he doesn't expect his top hat to do him for picnics nor his swallow-tail to serve for lawn tennis nor his yachting cap to look well in church nor——"

"A derby," interrupted the bachelor, "will do almost anywhere."

"They're hideous, Mr. Travers! and stiff and commonplace and uncomfortable and——"

"Are they anything like the model wife you've picked out for me?" inquired the bachelor insinuatingly.

The widow flushed under the corner of her chiffon veil.

"Well," she acquiesced unwillingly, "she isn't particularly pretty nor brilliant and fascinating, and all that; but she's just the kind of a girl a man ought to marry."

"And never does!" finished the bachelor triumphantly, backing water and turning the canoe for midstream. "Of all kinds of women a man detests——"

"How many kinds of women are there?" cried the widow suddenly.

"How many women are there?" retorted the bachelor. "The variety is only limited by the number of feminine individuals. But fundamentally they can be divided into two classes, just as automobiles can be divided into gasoline and electric. There is the woman a man wants to marry, the kind that is stamped from birth for wifehood, the even-tempered, steady-going, comfortable kind of girl that you would like to tie to for life and with whom you know you would be perfectly contented—and utterly stupid. Every man has in mind his ideal wife; and nearly every man's ideal is of the calm, domestic, wholly good, wholly sweet sort, the sort that seems like a harbor away from the storm. But so often just about as he has found this ideal, or before he has found her and before the sun of his summer day dream has risen the storm comes along——"

"The—what?"

"The tumultuous, impossible, adorable, unfathomable woman—the woman who may be good or bad, ugly or beautiful, but is always fascinating, alluring and irresistible. And she wrecks his little summer day dream and turns his snug harbor into a roaring whirlpool and carries him off in a tempest. Sometimes he marries her and sometimes he doesn't; but whether he does or does not, he is always spoiled for the other kind afterward."

"And if he does marry her," added the widow, trailing her fingers thoughtfully in the water, "he is always sorry and wishing he had married the other kind."

"Well," the bachelor laid his paddle across his knee, "what's the difference? If he had married the other kind he would always have been wishing he hadn't. Now if a man could only be allowed two wives——"

"One for week days and one for—holidays?" inquired the widow sarcastically.

"Yes," acquiesced the bachelor, "one for each side of him, the tame side and the untamed side. One to serve as a harbor and make him a home and fulfill his domestic longings and bring up his children and keep him sane and moral; and the other to amuse him and entertain him and inspire him, and put the trimmings on life and the spice and flavor in the matrimonial dish."

"A sedative and a stimulant!" jeered the widow. "One to stir you up and one to calm you down; one to spur you forward and one to pull on the curb—a Hebe and a Minerva! And then you'd be running around demanding a Venus to make you forget the other two. Whatever woman a man marries, he invariably spends his life sighing for something different. If he is tied to a nice, soft sofa pillow, he longs for a backbone. If he marries a parlor ornament, he yearns for a kitchen utensil. If his wife has a Greek nose, he discovers afterward that what he really admires is pugs. If he picks out red hair or black, he will go blocks out of his way to pursue every yellow glint that catches his eye. And if he married a whole harem at once he would discover that what he really wanted was monogamy, and a single wife with a single idea. There aren't enough kinds of women in the world to fulfill any one man's idea of what a wife should be."

"And yet," sighed the bachelor, "I once knew a woman who would have done that—all by herself."

The widow looked unconvinced.

"Was she a model wife?" she inquired, skeptically.

"How do I know?" said the bachelor. "She wasn't my wife."

"Of course not!" cried the widow. "It is always the other man's wife who is our ideal——"

"She wasn't my ideal," protested the bachelor. "She was the storm that shattered my ideal and spoiled me for matrimony. She was a whole garage, a whole stable, a whole harem in one!"

The widow looked distinctly disapproving.

"It's lucky," she said coldly, "that you escaped—a woman like—that!"

"But I haven't," protested the bachelor, laying down his paddle and leaning forward so that the ends of the widow's chiffon veil blew in his face. "She was the spice in life's pudding, the flavor, the sauce, the stimulant, the——"

"This canoe is tipping dreadfully," remarked the widow, but the disapproval had disappeared from her eyes.

"She was——"

"Why, I do believe it's growing dark, Mr. Travers."

"It is," agreed the bachelor. "Nobody can see——"

"See—what?" asked the widow, suddenly sitting up straight and fixing the bachelor with her eyes.

"How perfectly adorable and unfathomable and tumultuous——"

"Are you feeding me sugar, Mr. Travers?"

"Perhaps," acknowledged the bachelor, leaning back and picking up the paddle again, "but some day, when I'm ready, I'm going to stop feeding you sugar. I'm going to put on the curb bit."

"Why don't you do it now—Billy?" asked the widow, with a challenging glance from beneath her lashes.

"I can't," grumbled the bachelor, "while you are blowing that chiffon veil."

The widow took the two ends of the offensive thing and tied them deliberately under her chin.

"Some day," continued the bachelor, as he swung the canoe shoreward with a vigorous dip of the paddle, "I'm going to show you who's master. I'm going to marry you and then——"

"Be sorry!" laughed the widow.

"Of course," assented the bachelor, "but I'd be sorrier—if I didn't."

Swiss Festivities.

THE LARGEST TURNFEST EVER HELD IN THE LITTLE REPUBLIC.

By a Special Contributor.

TWELVE thousand young Swiss athletes, with delegations from the United States, France, Germany, Austria and Italy, marched through the streets of quaint Berne and inaugurated the largest Federal turnfest ever held in the mountain republic. It is with an earnestness that makes a deep impression upon the foreigner that the Swiss enter into the spirit of any festival they may undertake. Schoolboys met the visiting gymnasts at the trains and escorted them to their rooms; young lads proudly carried the banners of the associations and marched in front of the men who were all clad in the regulation turner costume, white shirts, white knee-breeches and black stockings, even the President of the Confederation made an address of welcome and, flanked by members of the council, democratically walked in the procession. The delegations from New York and Chicago, carrying American flags as a token of their adoption by the sister republic, met with an enthusiastic reception. Everywhere the "Amerikaner" were signaled out for tumultuous applause.

The effect of the evolutions in unison by these thousands, executed upon a broad plain and surrounded by a cheering multitude of spectators, was stupendous. Swaying backward and forward, with arms uplifted, swinging or outstretched, each man performing the same exercise as his neighbor, the effect was that of an enormous field of living corn undulated by the breeze. There were prizes for individual work, jumping, stone throwing and bar exercises, and wreaths for team drill, some of which, particularly difficult parallel-bar team work, was equal to any circus performance I ever witnessed. The peculiar Swiss wrestling—sometimes five or six bouts at one time in adjacent rings—where the combatants seize each other by the waistband and the short, firm trouser leg, met with great favor.

After training was broken, and countless bottles of red and white wine had been consumed, it was the lads from French Switzerland who set the pace for liveliness. Anybody who had received a wreath wore it about his head. The secretary of an association carried the corks from the refreshment bottles fastened to his hat. One society marched slowly to the railroad station with bowed heads, preceded by drummers with muffled drums. "What is wrong? Has there been an accident to one of their men?" was asked. But there had been no accident, and nothing was wrong. The team had merely failed to win a wreath and had chosen this method to publish its disappointment.

There was always a drum. No association seemed capable of walking half a block without forming in marching order, having the word of command given, and being led by a drummer and a little boy carrying a stick upon which was fastened a pasteboard strip bearing the name of the town from which they had come. Long lines of gymnasts in lock-step, each with his hands on the shoulders of the man in front, executed serpentines through the streets and made life miserable to the innocent bystander. Many a pretty maiden innocently nocent bystander. Many a pretty maiden innocently gazing at the zigzaging line, was swooped down upon, and gradually drawn into an increasingly tightening ring as the file circled around and around her, and then, uncoiling with snake-like undulations, it would march off and leave her blushing perhaps from a rapidly-snatched kiss. The famous mechanical clock tower came in for a large share of attention, which took the form of rousing cheers as the bears moved about in their circle, the jester struck his little bell and the king turned his scepter, but midnight was usually chosen for this homage, as the pilgrims sat about in the street, each on his pocket handkerchief.

Twelve hundred performers, all members of clubs, greeted with shouts and waving of hands. The dren, united in the presentation of the festival performance, a series of pictures representing the life and customs of different parts of the Canton Berne. Simplicity and the lack of professionalism lent a charm not to be found in many of the other Swiss festival plays which occur so frequently. An audience of 10,000 sat upon benches behind long deal tables laden with "festival wine" and "wine of honor," as well as non-alcoholic beverages. A cow bell, rung on the broad stage, enjoined silence. The first picture showed the Bernese Oberland, pasture, a chalet, the hills, and the snowy Jungfrau looming up to the rear.

The summer approaches and the dwellers of the Alps prepare for the journey up the mountains. A young shepherd sings the song of the Simme Valley, and as he sings the sound of cow bells is heard faintly mingled with the shouts of the herdsmen. Gradually the sounds grow louder, and cows, oxen and goats, driven by the picturesquely-clad herdsmen, appear. At their head is the prize ox, the "muni," carrying the milking stool between his horns. Then come characteristic figures of the Oberland—the old woman who plays the sort of zither called the hackbrett; an alp-horn player; a chamois hunter pursuing a herd of chamois, and then the peasant lad of Brienz, known far and near, who is able to purchase the mountain farm, only to be

It is with difficulty that the spectators refrain from joining in.

A class of school children in the Guggisberg costume come marching in with their schoolmaster and favor us with a song depicting spring and the migration of the herds to the upper pastures. It ends, as most of these songs do, with a

"Jo holl, holl, holl, ho.
The cattle to the pastures go."

The third picture is the Valley of the Emm, where the celebrated Swiss cheese, of which 50,000,000 pounds is exported every year is made. Hans and Eisi have been lovers for a long time, but Eisi's father places obstacles in the way of the marriage. He owns thirty-five cows, to say nothing of the calves and goats, while the little farm down by the meadows where Eisi's parents live has but two dozen. Now this is no slight inequality, but Eisi at last has her way, and today the wedding is to be solemnized. First come the peasant musicians, playing laboriously, then the guests led by happy Hans and smiling Eisi, then father and mother, the grandparents and relations. It was with considerable difficulty that the club which represented the marriage party could obtain a couple to act the bride and groom. Each member knew that forever after in private life the names of the persons playing the happy pair would be coupled, and the roles went begging. Much to the relief of the society's unmarried members, a young married couple was at last prevailed upon to personate Hans and Eisi.

Following the bridal train comes the wagon laden with the household goods brought by the bride, and without which no peasant girl in the Emmenthal would think of marriage. It must be a poverty-stricken maiden who cannot furnish the new home with a bed and bureau. The bed is made to stand against the wall, for one side is unpainted, denoting practical economy. The procession is stopped by young folk who hold a rope across the street and force the groom to pay toll according to the old custom, which he does willingly. After the peasant dance, the Emmenthal song is heard. It tells of the merry people of the Emm Valley; of the sturdy men and lovable maidens; of the rustic life and lack of superficiality; how every one is called by the familiar "thou," be he the milk boy with the flat pail on his back, or a councillor; and of the native costume with the half linen elbow sleeves and bodice hung with silver chains—ho-li-o-di-day!

The grapes have been gathered in the picture showing the Seeland, the country near the Lake of Bienne, and the innkeeper and his wife at the sign of the "Grapevine" prepare to receive the vintners. Some of them carry on their back the wooden vessel in which the wine is brought from the press. To pour it out into the casks they do not unstrap the vessel from their backs, but mount a short ladder placed against the cask, and stooping forward, allow the red wine to flow out in a stream over their heads. More songs, more dances.

After a historical episode of the time when a part of the Canton Berne, the Jura, was in danger of being annexed by France, the picture returns to Berne itself, which has invited the gymnasts from all parts of Switzerland to celebrate a festival in the Swiss capital. Among the sights Berne has to offer—the cathedral, the [illegible] the majestic bridges and the stately council chamber where the welfare of the Fatherland is deliberated —Berne is proud to show its youth, sturdy lads with bright eyes and strong arms, red-cheeked girls, an [illegible] to whom the elders turn to find the Bernese spirit well preserved and ever young. A DAY WITH CHERRY BLOOM AND LEGENDS OF THE PAST.

By a Special Contributor.

SOMEBODY found in the morning paper (the staid official-looking Dresdener Anzeiger) the announcement that in all the country round about, the cherry trees were blooming.

The notice was as matter-of-fact as if it dealt with the market price of butter or eggs; but it stirred the company about the breakfast table into instant enthusiasm, for the "wanderlust" engendered by long sunny days was ready to take fire at a touch.

Somebody knew of an ancient castle in the hills not far away—there must be miles of fruit trees on the way —why not follow the time-honored custom of killing two birds with a single stone?

The castle decided the matter. By Herculean efforts the day's work and study might be compressed into the morning, and then ho! for a free afternoon!

We all but missed the train in spite of desperate hurrying, and had scarcely done laughing about the final undignified scramble, when the guard put his head in at the window and said that if the ladies wanted to go to Wesenstein, they must "umsteigen."

"Umsteigen," by the way, is a word which the traveler in the Fatherland must understand, or take the consequences, as it is seldom one reaches his destination without changing cars at least once on the way.

The change, in this case, proved peculiarly acceptable to a collection of feminine minds bent solely on adventure. As the train pulled out of the station where we had alighted, a miniature railroad was disclosed to view, the first sight of which all but upset our gravity. There was a small engine, little more than a toy it seemed, in the cab of which sat a portly man, who looked as if he had climbed in there as a boy, and then had grown too large to get out. The engine had a car attached, of strange and antiquated build, and into this we bestowed ourselves at the friendly invitation of the engineer, who, when we were comfortably settled, blew a long, shrill whistle, then pulled the cord which rang the engine bell, a huge brass bell with a voice loud and solemn enough to deserve a belfry.

With this preparation we started on one of the most delightful little journeys one could wish for on a summer day.

In and out between the low, green hills we glided, into quiet, sunlit valleys where the sheltering hills were sprinkled so thickly with cherry bloom that they looked like huge bouquets—passing now and then through a cluster of red-roofed cottages, where children tumbled out of the doorways to gaze with awe at the passing train.

Once we were brought to a sudden standstill by a baby, who sat in the middle of the track pulling wild flowers, and who could see no reason to be disturbed at the approach of the puffing engine.

The engineer pulled vigorously at the bell rope till the clamor brought the baby's mother to her cottage door. Taking in the situation at a glance, she swept the interested botanist to her shoulder, kissing him on the way, and held him there to wave a laughing greeting as we proceeded on our way.

The train pulled up at length in a deep, green valley, round as a cup, closed in on every side by friendly wooded hills, a brown and limpid mountain stream wending its way through the midst of it.

Standing boldly out against the soft background of green was the gray mass of the castle buildings, dominating all the valley from its commanding height; and nestled confidingly at its base was a village half hidden among the trees.

The exploration of the castle was a rare delight to minds romantically inclined. The lower building, extending its wings about a cliff of solid rock was, we learned, a comparatively modern excrescence, having but two or three hundred years to its credit, and nothing more exciting in its history than the occasional visit of this king or that, for the entertainment of a hunting party. Through endless chains of apartments we wandered, listening to the Saxon sing-song of the uniformed, brass-buttoned guide, lingering now and then before some cabinet to ask the history of a delicate piece of china, a jeweled dagger or a quaint embroidered gown.

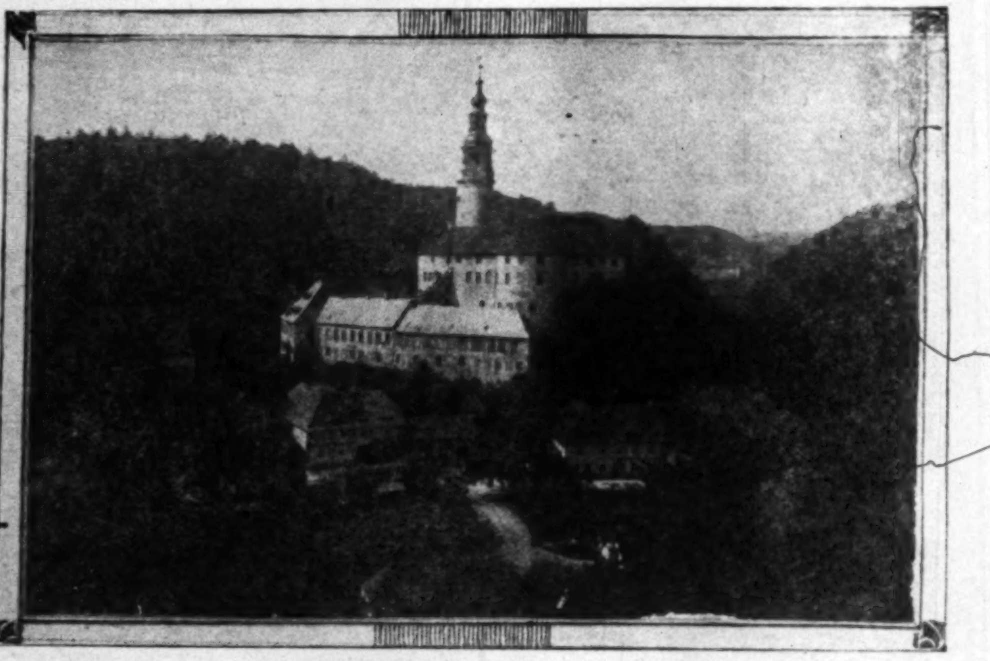
But after having climbed a fourth flight of the winding stairs, we found ourselves in the rock-hewn stables of the older castle, which, before the addition of the modern building, had stood above the valley on a sheer and lofty cliff.

It was one of the many castles built 900 or 1000 years ago to serve as bulwarks of the early empire against the tide of wild Slavonic tribes which beat upon its borders—and to present, as well, a wholesome exhibition of strength to the unruly Saxons who objected so long and so energetically to civilization.

The bare and empty rooms of this old castle told, as plainly as any bard or minstrel of the old days could have told it, the story of the life which had passed through them.

It was evident from the spacious quarters provided for the horses, that they were important members of the knightly household, and indeed there was little difference to be discovered between the stables and the "halls of state." Rudely enough they must have lived, those ancient lords of high degree, who ruled like kings in their small domains and knew no other law than might.

The dining hall was partly hewn from the native rock and partly built of masonry so solid that one could scarcely tell where one began and the other ended. The floors were made of uneven slabs of stone, and the windows, cut in deep embrasures, were square and low, so that to look with any comfort at the view framed in their cross-barred iron, one was obliged to sit down on the floor.



CASTLE OF WESENSSTEIN NEAR DRESDEN.

It was evident that the windows and the beauty of the view had no connection with each other in the builder's mind; a window, in the baronial estimation, being merely a convenient loophole from which to shoot arrows or pour hot lead upon the head's of one's enemies.

One small door, iron-clamped and heavy, gave access to a passage leading, by ways underground and devious, to some place, no one knows where, the earth having long ago caved in and filled it, at a point some hundred yards away.

There was a dungeon damp and grewsome, shut off from all light of day, and near it the opening to one of those chutes, called with such hideous suggestion an "onbliette," down which a body might be dropped and never seen again by mortal eye.

We left the castle by an oaken, iron-bound door, which once had been the only entrance, barring the secret passage underground.

It opened to a steep road, cobble-paved, which led between high walls to the castle gate, then wound its way down the wooded hillside to the village below.

It was safe to conjecture that one among the red-roofed houses would be an inn, and soon we found it, close beside the winding stream. We had our coffee on a platform built over the water and roofed by a grape-vine trellis, through which the sunlight broke in brilliant patches.

With the gray walls of the castle towering high above our heads and the brown stream murmuring dreamily at our feet, we fell to weaving stories of the robber-baron days. There was an animated discussion as to whether the baron should be handsome and good or handsome and bad, and a decided difference of opinion on the point of the willingness or unwillingness of the beautiful daughter of the baron's enemy, to be captured and carried in triumph through the underground passage to the stronghold on the hill.

It was at this most inopportune moment that the bell of the little engine, announcing immediate departure, woke the echoes of the valley, and banished our dream

Pennsylvania's Capitol.

MAGNIFICENT NEW STRUCTURE IS BUILT WITHIN APPROPRIATION.

By a Special Contributor.

PENNSYLVANIA reaps the first fruits of reform in its magnificent new State Capitol, and incidentally the nation at large is furnished an object lesson of how the grafters are halted when it is known that an aroused people is going to hold them strictly to account.

The splendid new Capitol has been constructed within the appropriation, and is the first public building enterprise of any magnitude in the history of this American commonwealth from which the grafters realized no illegal gains. The new building is a work that ranks with the best structures designed for a similar purpose the country over. It is built of the best material, and money with a lavish hand has put on the beautiful decorations.

The builders, wonderful to relate, made no effort to skimp any of the material called for in the specifications, or to furnish inferior goods, and in many cases even put in a bit better stuff than was asked.

Instead of having to ask for extra money to finish the building the contractors actually left a balance of $30,000, which the commission in charge of the enterprise has just turned back into the treasury of Pennsylvania.

It will be remembered that the building of the New York State Capitol at Albany, was a twenty years' scandal, in which were besmirched the reputations of many men who had been thought above any suggestion of grafting. From time to time the cost first fixed on the structure was gradually boosted up, until the final cost was three times greater than the original specifications made it.

There was no politics in the movement. It was entirely a matter of graft, in which both parties reaped a share, and seemed to vie with each other as to which could be the more rapacious. The basis of a number of ill-gotten fortunes was undoubtedly laid in the peculations that attended the raising of the disappointing pile at Albany.

The experience of the city of Philadelphia was similar. Back in the Centennial days, when U. S. Grant was President, the corner-stone was laid of a public building that was to cost $5,000,000, and was to be finished in five years.

Thirty years have passed, and the pile is really not completed yet.

In the intervening time $27,000,000 of the people's money has been expended, and in order that those who, it is claimed, diverted to their own pockets a large part of this sum could cover up their peculations the structure has been botched and altered till it is now admittedly an architectural disgrace. Philadelphia experts are agreed that as a first step to beautifying the city, the big pile should be torn down.

When this gigantic crime was forced through and maintained, there was very little instinct to regard a public work as a public trust. But the events of the last decade, more especially the last four or five years, have inspired an awakening of public sentiment on the proposition that public business ought to be managed with the same fidelity as private enterprises, and that no citizen should be any quicker to submit to robbery from his public servants than from those under him at his own office.

It has always been hinted that the old State House which the new building at Harrisburg replaces, was burned down in order to hide the crimes there shown in the books of the treasury. When that event occurred, Pennsylvania writhed more helplessly in the grasp of a corrupt combine than any of her sister States. The Legislature that followed the conflagration preserved the record of evil by appropriating $550,000 for a new State Capitol. This sum was naturally inadequate, and almost before the barn-like structure of brick was completed, it had become a certainty that the sum of money had been squandered.

This feeling was borne out when a new Legislature decided that the State must have a building of such dimensions and comforts that the business of the commonwealth could be properly carried out.

The project stirred an outburst of criticism, for the scandal of the preceding building, as well as the City Hall of Philadelphia, was still fresh in the public mind, and charges of graft were made before the bill passed.

So great was the pressure that much as it regretted the circumstance, the gang was compelled to put on the building commission a number of high-class men. Probably the plan was that these could either be cleverly bamboozled, or should they decline to become servile, forced out of the commission.

The greatest guarantee of honesty shown in the commission was the selection of Edward Bailey of Harrisburg, a millionaire business man and citizen of unimpeachable integrity, and of Robert K. Young, of Tioga county, to be attorney for the commission. These were men that no gang influence could touch, and they staunchly devoted themselves to the task of seeing that everything was on the level.

Unexpected events helped them out. Pennsylvania, after a long subservience to the gang, found suddenly and unexpectedly a chance to break the shackles. The political revolt headed by Mayor Weaver, in Philadelphia, spread rapidly through the State, and almost before the startled gangsters could know what had happened, a Democrat, William H. Berry, had been elected treasurer of the State over Caleb Plummer, the regular Republican nominee.

This triumph for decency taught a lesson. It showed that it would now be doubly dangerous to trifle with the new Capitol, and reap any illegal gain from it. In fact, the gang immediately saw that its best chance to get a hearing from the angered electorate was to hurry along the building and make a good job at a cost less than the sum set aside.

In their determination to make the new building the very best that could be had, the architects influenced the commission to consider the decision to build it of South Carolina granite and to use stone from Vermont. The contract for the building was given to George F. P & Co., of Philadelphia, the firm receiving in the gate $3,505,656.

The length of the Capitol is 525 feet; breadth, 254 fe height to the dome, 292 feet. There are 86,275 feet of space covered. Among the notable featu the architecture are 32 magnificent monoliths, 35 tons each.

Three hundred thousand dollars had been specified statuary and $30,000 for mural decorations. The was applied to this purpose with gratifying success, none of those experts who have gone over the have found any cause for complaint in what is a most fertile inspirer of criticism.

The new Capitol will be dedicated on October 4 most elaborate ceremonies, in which no less a than the President of the United States will be a spicuous figure.

Since the whole public life of Theodore Roosevelt been devoted to unyielding opposition to thefts of public money, he ought to feel especially gratified opening a structure that proves that the people of community get just what they deserve, and when say to public officers, "Thou Shalt Not Steal," their is bound to be obeyed.

Farming in Mexico.

ANCIENT METHODS STILL IN VOGUE IN THE REPUBLIC.

By a Special Contributor.

It is a strange commentary on the influence, or lack of influence, of a nation upon its neighbors to reflect that although the United States today stands for preeminence in advanced agricultural methods, one has only to cross the border line into Mexico to find farming in a primitive and almost barbarian stage. It is only in the more advanced sections that modern methods of tilling the soil and harvesting crops are to be met with, the great bulk of the labor being done in the same antiquated manner that prevailed there centuries ago.

To find a duplication of the scenes witnessed in the Mexican fields it is necessary to travel into Egypt, Palestine or the farther eastern countries. Continental Europe, except in its remotest parts, does not afford a similar spectacle, and assuredly nowhere in the United States or Canada are the Mexican farmer's primitive tools and methods in vogue.

Here a purchaser may choose among hundreds of styles of farm wagons; in Mexico the prevalent vehicle for hauling grain, hay, etc., is the rugged two-wheeled cart with creaking wooden wheels. Instead of a steel-pointed, iron-shafted plow of modern agriculture, our neighbors more often stir the soil with the crooked wood en stick of hoary antiquity. Thousands of acres of grain are cut each year with hand sickles, and vast tracts of are not only planted by hand, but are tilled and [illegible] by "the man with the hoe."

Wooden cart and oxen.

Mexico is a land of traditions and legends and mystery, and naturally there is an ancient story that accounts for the introductions of agriculture into the country.

The legend has to do with the "Fair God," and dates back to the fifth century, a thousand years before the Spaniards under Cortes invaded and captured the old kingdom of Anahuac and rechristened it Mexico. At that time the Toltecs, the reigning race, had newly established their capital at Tula, a small town above the City of Mexico, where today their mark is left in the most magnificent ruins of the western world. Then they were a race of fighters and hunters, had their flocks and herds, but understood little of agriculture or the finer arts of civilization.

Then there came the "Fair God," a white man with flaxen or golden hair, a flowing beard and a fair skin. Perhaps he was a shipwrecked mariner, driven by wave and wind from some other land, possibly a Viking from the north of Europe, lured to a western continent by love of adventure. At all events, the Indians of Anahuac regarded him as divinely sent from the sun, one of their gods of worship. They named him Quetzalcoatl, truly a formidable cognomen for even a divinity to endure.

For twenty years he made his home with the king of the land, learned the language of the people, taught the people the arts of weaving, of metal-moulding and, best of all, gave the common folk the rudiments of agricultural knowledge. At the court he also taught dancing, singing, the playing of instruments; gave instruction in building, in sculpture and architecture. He was revered everywhere, his person was sacred, and he was permitted to leave the land upon his solemn promise to return later in all his glory as a God of the Sun. How Cortes used this religious belief of the Aztecs in the conquest of the nation, making pretense to be the Fair God returned, is a matter of mixed history and [illegible]

At all events, it is to Quetzalcoatl that the beginnings of agriculture in the southern domain are traced. He taught them the planting of crops, the gathering into harvests, showed them how to grind corn and maize, how to till and irrigate the lands.

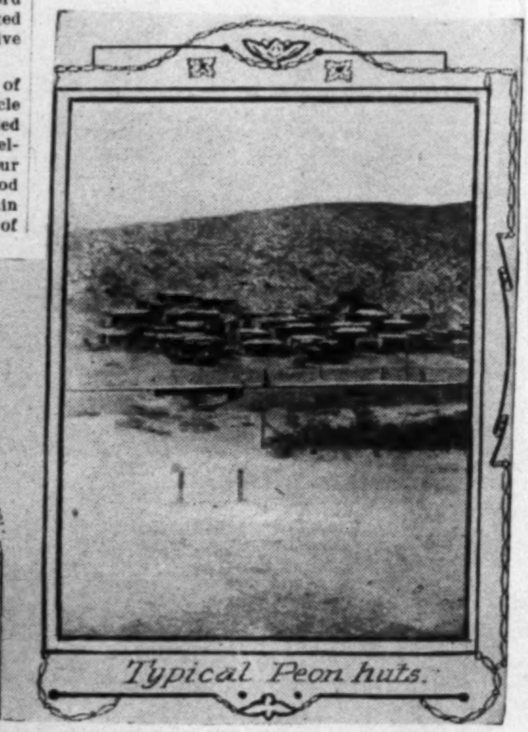
His teachings must certainly have been of the most rudimentary character, and today the common peon class throughout the republic, the descendants of the old Ana-[illegible], are following much the same methods that legend credits the "Fair God" with introducing so many centuries ago.

It is no unusual thing today to see reapers attacking a field of several hundreds or thousands of acres of grain with hand scythes, gathering the ripened wheat into sheaves. The gleaners are there, too, women and children who might readily fit into the description of the gleaners in the field of Boaz in the old biblical story of Ruth.

Oxen are almost invariably used for plowing and hauling. Horses are found in the cities and are universally used for carriages and as mounts, donkeys and mules are employed as pack animals, but in the grind of the farm work the oxen are pressed into service.

By the term "oxen" one must not understand the mild-mannered, docile beasts that we find in this country. In Mexico the animals are taken directly off the ranges, are fiery-tempered and would be utterly uncontrollable under ordinary treatment.

To "break" them to their work, the oxen are hitched to the plow or wagon with a yoke that is fitted on their horns. So painful is this that one or two days is said to be sufficient to reduce them under such treatment to a state of docility. The yoke is never removed from the horns, however, and this cruel method of driving oxen is met with throughout the republic. The driver has no lines or guide rein of any description, merely checking or urging on his oxen with a long goad, usually a light stick of wood.



Typical Peon huts.

Wagons, as mentioned previously, are of the roughest make. Their huge wooden wheels, uneven poles and general ungainly build mark them at once as objects of curiosity to the stranger. Often six, eight, or even ten oxen are yoked to a single two-wheeled cart.

Plowing for the annual crops, such as corn, wheat and barley, is done in a manner that strikes a Yankee as "shiftless." The unwieldy plows, more often than not merely a crooked stick, make deep plowing almost an impossibility. Indeed, the system most often followed is a sort of "cut and cover."

Irrigation is little understood and is not practised at all except where water can be had by gravity flow. The idea of pumping water from beneath the ground for irrigation appears preposterous, and this may well be so when thousands of acres may be had where water, if desired, can be obtained merely by cutting in sluiceways from the streams. In the wells used for drinking water, the old-fashioned well-sweeps are used almost exclusively in the country districts, and present a picturesque feature.

Agriculturally considered, there are three sections in the southern republic: the plateau district, the tropics, and the mountain slopes that connect these two.

The plateau comprises nearly one-half of the country, is situated at an elevation of from 3000 to 10,000 feet, and is adapted to the raising of all manner of grains, fruits and trees of the temperate zone. Its location in a semi-tropic country is overcome by its great elevation above sea level. Where it is tillable, the soil is very rich and often supports two or three crops a year. Rains, however, are uncertain, little irrigation is carried on, and as a result, the farming is decidedly undeveloped. Great tracts are used for pasture land, some of the largest of the monster Mexican cattle ranges being located on this elevated plateau. The climate is universally dry and healthful here, with moderate temperatures, usually cool or even chilly at nights.

In the tropics is found the exact contrast to the plateau district. Here the altitude is almost always slight, the weather is warm a great portion of the year, and the muggy dampness characteristic of the tropics prevails. Vegetation is luxuriant in its wild state, and cultivated crops grow without effort. With such crops as corn and fruits, however, the farmers must wage a constant warfare with the birds and insects of all descriptions that prey upon the plantations. The abundance of animal life makes it well-nigh impossible to escape entirely from their depredations.

Perhaps the tropical district is most fascinating to a visitor on account of its marked difference from usual conditions. Here water is superabundant, in the form both of rains and of streams; the soil is incomparably rich and supports heavy crops. Plantations of coffee, tobacco, fruits and other tropical products abound.

The fruits are a wonder in themselves, and may be bought at ridiculously low prices. There are bananas and cocoanuts and pineapples everywhere, of course; mangoes, both red and yellow, grow universally, as also does the mamey, a delicate fruit resembling the persimmon in appearance and texture, without having its acrid taste. Then there is the papilla, or tree melon, a close relative of the pawpaw; the agua cote, known to us as the alligator pear, and delicious in salads; the plantains, the aguirre, a curious sort of fig, and the very numerous family of zapotes, from the tiny zapote chico to the zapote de domingo, as large as your head.

Between these two districts of plateau and tropics is a sub-tropic region on the slopes and valley of the mountains that lead from the interior to the coastal tropic lands. This intervening strip of land is unquestionably the most desirable in Mexico for purely agricultural purposes, a fact which is being demonstrated by the way in which Americans are buying it up in large tracts and rapidly introducing modern methods of caring for it. This sub-tropic region produces almost every product entrusted to its soil. The temperature is wonderfully equable, there is no suspicion of frost, rains are copious without being damaging, river water is easily obtained for irrigation, and the soil is rich and loamy.

With the generally retarded methods of handling soil and crops it may be wondered how farming in Mexico can be considered cheap. The explanation is simple—peon labor. Work by hand with this class of laborers is even cheaper than work by machinery, thus offering one explanation why improved machinery has not been introduced more extensively. The average peon ranch wage is three or four reales per day, corresponding to from 18 to 25 cents per day gold or United States currency. Boys and women receive one-third or one-half the amount given to men. The hours are from sunrise to sunset.

The peons themselves are unprogressive, superstitious and ignorant. Their wants are few, their pleasures comprised in a dance and a little drink, and as a consequence they are easily held at the existing scale of wages. Most of the larger ranches maintain ranch stores, where the peons must buy their provisions. These provisions are bought by the owner of the ranch at wholesale and meted out to his laborers at stiff retail prices. As a frequent rule the men are encouraged to overdraw their allowances from the store, thus keeping them in constant debt to the ranch owner and forcing them to remain in his employ until they have cleared themselves. Needless to say, few of the peons manage to free themselves from debt, and consequently has come about the Mexican peonage system of such ill-repute. Conditions in this regard, it must be said, are much better than they were only a few years ago, and under the present government are rapidly improving.

"Ranching in Mexico," said an experienced American who had spent most of his life there, "depends on three things: Good land, plenty of water and plenty of cheap labor. Secure these, and you cannot help but make a big and paying success of it. If Americans fail to win the golden harvest in ranching here that they expected, or were led to expect, it is simply because they ignore one of these three fundamental requirements."

He was right. And hundreds of Americans today are making fortunes off of the very land which improvident Mexican predecessors neglected through lack of ambition or through ignorance of practical farming. A big change is gradually coming over agricultural Mexico, and it may be only a few years when the hand sickle, the crooked stick for a plow and the lumbering wooden carts will be a thing of the past in the republic.

Certainly along this line lies the ultimate salvation of the Mexican people. The land is amply capable of producing enough for her underpaid and underfed millions of peons, but only a marked agricultural development can make possible such a production. In this connection the coming of the American rancher is proving an eye-opener to the Mexicans in every corner of the land, and it is only a question of a short time when the advanced methods of the foreigner will be adopted and put in successful operation by the natives. Then may be expected a development in farming worthy the natural endowments of the country and commensurate with her preeminence as a mineral country.

The Civil Service.

BIG AUTUMNAL RACE FOR OFFICE BEGINS THIS WEEK.

By a Special Contributor.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Uncle Sam's great autumnal contest for non-elective government office will commence throughout the country on Wednesday of this week. Fifty-two different classes of positions, paying anywhere from 18 cents per hour to $2250 per year, to begin with, will be striven for by thousands of men, women and youths of all kinds and conditions. The Civil Service Commission now has the United States divided into twelve "civil service districts," each in charge of a secretary, who will hold the examinations and establish "eligible registers" from which the appointments will finally be made, in the United States, Porto Rico, the Philippines and Panama. Increased activity on the isthmian canal, operation of the new meat inspection act and of other enterprises provided for by the last Congress have increased the demand for government employés.

The Civil Service Commission—that busy employment agency which supplies Uncle Sam with "help" wanted—occupies a brick building on Eighth street, one square south of the Patent Office. It is presided over by three commissioners, John C. Black of Illinois, A. W. Cooley of New York and H. F. Greene of Minnesota, each of whom receives a salary of $3500 a year. Gen. Black, a veteran of the Civil War, was commander-in-chief of the G.A.R. when appointed president of the commission two years ago. He is a lawyer, former commissioner of pensions and ex-representative in Congress. He is thirty-four years the senior of Commissioner Cooley, a young New York lawyer of 33, who has emulated Theodore Roosevelt, in so far as he has been a Harvard graduate, member of the New York Legislature, and Civil Service commissioner. Mr. Greene, who is a compromise in age between his two colleagues, being 47, is an alumnus of Princeton and a lawyer, who has not previously held public office.

Jst how the commission does its work is not understood by one citizen in a million. This is proved by the deluge of letters of inquiry constantly pouring in upon its secretary, John T. Doyle.

The first step to be taken by the citizen hankering for government office is the addressing of a postal card—not a letter—to the secretary of the Civil Service Commission, Washington, stating exactly the position wanted. The applicant will thereupon receive gratis a copy of the official "manual of examinations" and an application blank.

If this is filled in and returned it will be received in the "application room" of the commission. Here it will be carefully scrutinized and in many cases returned because of improper or insufficient information. If it is found acceptable a card admitting the applicant to the examination room in his city or community will be mailed.

No Tips to Contestants.

Meanwhile a corps of experts will have been diligently at work in Washington preparing the examination papers. These written questions for this fall's contest will be packed in official envelopes, sealed in wax with the great seal of the commission, and securely locked away in the "question room." Previous to the examination the only persons aware of the character of the full set of questions prepared for any one examination will be the chief of the examination division, the clerk in charge of the "question room" and the shipping clerk, who placed the seals on the envelopes. The sealed envelopes will be mailed to the secretaries of the various civil service districts, who must keep them in a safe until the first day of the contest. Then the local "examining board" will meet and break the seals in the presence of the people to be examined. If there is any reasonable suspicion that the seals have been tampered with the examination papers will be canceled and application will be made to Washington for an entirely new set of questions.

With the list of questions will be received under seal also blanks and paper on which those examined must write their answers. Although these contestants will be required to bring with them pens, penholders, pencils, erasures, ink, typewriters, typewriter stands and book-keeping paraphernalia, as needed, they will not be allowed to carry into the examination room a scrap of paper of any kind, or even a blotter, lest these contain some information to be dishonestly used in the contest. Even incidental ciphering must be done upon the official paper provided by the examiners. The sheets of this will be carefully counted and every scrap must be finally returned with the questions. In fact, this paper will be guarded as closely as that issued to the printers of our paper money, and if a fraction of a sheet goes astray an investigation will be made by the examiners. Each competitor's answers to the questions will be sealed up in an envelope bearing a number, but his name will not be written anywhere in or upon this package. It will be sealed up in another envelope containing the same number, and the envelopes bearing the answers will be carefully sealed with the questions in one package, then delivered at the "question room" at the Washington headquarters. Another package containing the numbered envelopes with the names inside will be received in a separate room and closely guarded by a trusted clerk until the questions shall have all been marked.

Correcting Papers Is Careful Work.

In the "question room" the seals on the questions and answers will be broken and the blank paper account of each examiner carefully checked up, to make sure that every sheet, either used or unused, has been returned. This having been ascertained, the questions will next be sent to the "issue room," where they will be distributed among the official correctors. The papers having first been arranged by sheets, Corrector A will be given all of sheets 1, Corrector B all of sheets 2, Corrector C all of sheets 3, and so on, the sheets b tributed to as many correctors as there are the particular examination. After the papers th ceive their first rating they will be redistribut first rating being reviewed by other correctors. F after each sheet has passed the scrutiny of several ferent experts, the different papers of each comp identified only by his number, will be for the fir assembled and fastened together.

Next, the collected papers will go to the "ave room," where the competitor's general average f entire examination will be given. Finally the envelope bearing his name and address will be fied by its number and unsealed, the name shee attached to his examination papers. Thus not unt papers have been rated and reviewed and his per finally determined will his identity be known. As subject will be rated by examiner and reviewe another, absolute impartiality, accuracy and unif would certainly appear to be guaranteed.

Such discrimination as may enter into this for office cannot be laid at the door of the Civil Se Commission. The correctors are governed by fixed for awarding percentages. Thus, in spelling the cise consists of twenty words and each one missp counts 5, each error in capitalization 1, and each use of the hyphen, 2. Every one receiving a general erage of 70 or more "passes," and his name go the proper "eligible register," there to remain for year unless he accepts a position meanwhile.

The Final Appointment.

Legal Partiality.

But eligibility does not always depend upon rating in examination. The law provides that soldiers or sailors honorably discharged because of wounds or sickness incurred in line of duty shall be preferred to all others for appointment, if possessing the necessary business capacity. Such a veteran is released from age limitations, is put on the eligible register if receiving an average of 65 instead of the 70 otherwise required, and once on the register his name is placed above (and is given to the applying department before) those of all others who have not been allowed such preference. The disabled defender of the flag is, furthermore, released from the laws which require each State to receive only its share of appointments. If on the same register the names of more than one such preferred veteran appear, he having the highest percentage heads the list. This preference does not, however, apply to examinations for promotion or for the Philippine service. But in all other contests a Grand Army button will cause many a gasp in the examination room. Chance of encountering these disabled soldiers and sailors is, of course, dwindling every year, as are their numbers, and they are rarely competed with outside the examinations for such positions as watchman, messenger and copyist. For the railway mail service eligible registers are exceptional in that they are kept by States, and each appointment is made from the register of the State in which the vacancy exists. For the Indian service and meat inspection service the persons examined state the localities in which they are willing to accept employment, while for the immigrant inspection service separate registers are kept for eligibles living east and west of the Rockies. For other offices outside of Washington preference is given to eligibles residing in the general vicinity of the office to be filled.

Residence Counts.

Washington is, of course, the great goal. The law requires that as far as conditions of good administration will warrant appointments to the department of the great white city shall be apportioned among the States and Territories upon the basis of population. Only one appointment to the capital is now allowed—except in certain instances—to every 10,000 inhabitants. The only States and Territories which have not exceeded their quotas to date are Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indian Territory, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Dakota, Porto Rico, Texas and Utah. Eligibles from these States, then, have the best prospects for obtaining appointments in the Washington departments as clerks, messengers or watchmen. Those from the remaining States can still hope, however, for positions in navy yards; pension agencies, army headquarters, land offices, Indian agencies, etc. The following positions are, nevertheless, excepted now from the requirements of apportionment: Printers, assistants and helpers in the bureau of engraving and printing; civilian positions in the field service of the military departments and at army headquarters; mail-bag and mail-lock repairers; employés of the government printing office, pension agencies and local offices of the District of Columbia; also apprentices, students, gardeners, engravers, cabinet-makers, carpenters, electricians' helpers, electric linemen and wiremen, painters, masons and plumbers' helpers. Stenographers and typewriters at a salary of $840 or more are also appointed to Washington without regard to apportionment, as these employés, like the others named above, are scarce articles and Uncle Sam now has to obtain them where best he may.

of Winning.

Just what the prospects of final appointment are may be judged also from the statistics of the last year. Age is a factor to be reckoned with. The appointing officers as a rule select the younger eligibles. The average age of appointees, therefore, is twenty-eight years. Sex also counts. Last year not one woman who passed an examination for any of the following positions was appointed: Compositor, computer, fish culturist, immigrant inspector, or physician in the Indian service.

Male stenographers and typewriters are in great demand, and those willing to accept the salaries offered have much greater prospects for appointments than applicants for other clerical positions. The next best chance of appointment is offered to male book-keepers. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 165 male book-keepers examined 345 passed and 19 were appointed, the usual entrance salary being $840 or $900. Of seventy-six women examined twelve passed, and only one was appointed. Out of 3027 male clerks examined 1286 passed and 22 were appointed; of women clerks 782 competed, 66 passed and 21 were appointed, the usual entrance salary for both sexes being the same as for book-keepers. Of female skilled laborers [illegible] competed, 2079 passed and 69 were appointed. In the stenography and typewriting examinations 2032 men competed, 611 passed and 364 were appointed, while of the 675 women who were examined 223 passed and 59 were appointed.

File Their Photographs.

A novelty of this autumn's examinations will be the requirement that each competitor for positions in the Panama Canal and Philippine services present on the day of examination an unmounted photograph of himself taken within three years. As means of identification in case of appointment these portraits will be filed with examination papers and the required medical certificate.

The examinations for the Panama service are of unusual interest, as the Civil Service Commission is advertising the inducements held out by the government to those who through this fall competition will enter the service there as clerks, stenographers and typewriters, hospital internes, book-keepers and trained

The Civil Service Commission officially states that as higher salaries are to be paid at Panama than in the United States it will be practicable for government employés there to save a large proportion of their earnings. The usual entrance salary for stenographers and typewriters on the isthmus will be from $1200 to $1500, and compensation for other clerical work will be proportionately higher. Employés receiving monthly and annual salaries will be credited with pay from the date of sailing from this country, but will not receive any payment on account until after thirty days' service on the isthmus. Uncle Sam will pay their steamship fare, including meals, to Panama, and they will be provided with living accommodations on the isthmus, or, instead, a monthly allowance for quarters of 15 per cent. of their salary. For the civil service employés, whether bachelors or married men with families, living quarters are now being built on the isthmus in cool places near the sea coast or on higher elevations, where, it is suggested, Americans will suffer less from summer heat than in many parts of the United States. Six weeks' vacation per year will be allowed the employés of this class. This is two weeks more than is allowed those of the home departments, and it may be taken at any time after eight months, or, at the rate of twelve weeks every two years. Civil service employés returning home for such holidays will be entitled to the government steamship rate of $20 each way, but salary for the period of the leave will not be paid until after the return to the isthmus. Sick leave with pay will be granted during illness, not exceeding thirty days. Free medical and hospital attendance is guaranteed; also free steamship transportation to the United States upon termination of satisfactory service. Employés' families will be given the government steamship rate, between New York and Colon, of $20 for adults and of $10 for children between 6 and 12, children under 6 being carried free. Employés will not, however, be allowed to take their spouses and youngsters to the isthmus until they have gone ahead and secured quarters for these dependents. No person will be appointed to this service who is not physically sound. Appointees suspected of disease or poor health will be reëxamined as to physical fitness upon reaching the port from which they expect to sail for the isthmus.

The Old Stone Wall.

A Little Account of Its Wild and Furry Denizens.

By a Special Contributor.

ON one side of our garden there runs an old stone wall. It was built by farmer folk who lived a hundred and fifty years ago, when men still had the time and the energy necessary to erect these most enduring of all fences, when they built those homely but substantial houses which the most cultured people of today are proud to live in, and when, in addition, they cleared the hills of spruce and pine and hemlock, that they might later wrest a living from the rocky soil. It is a famous stone wall, perhaps six feet through at the base, well made, and topped with great flat slabs of rock, which make us wonder at the strength and courage of the stanch men who placed them there. And it is not tottering, this big old wall, but stands as firm as ever; perhaps firmer, for in many places the poison ivy creeper has wrapped her long and powerful gray arms about it. It is a beautiful wall, too, for not only is there beauty in the stones themselves, many of them ground and shaped by the action of ancient glaciers, but they are covered with lichens and other mosses, some gray, some blue, and others green and brown and orange—wonderful at all times, but more so after a shower of rain. Then at one end, it is crowned with a wreath of wild clematis, and the soft shadows between the stones are the backgrounds for clumps of goldenrod, cone flowers and elecampane.

But perhaps the chief reason why we love the old wall, is because it shelters so many of the animals we love. In front of one great stone there is a heap of sandy soil well sprinkled with pebbles; this marks the entrance to the home of a woodchuck, whose burrow runs down under the stone—as safe a burrow as any in New England. And the woodchuck who lives there is an old resident. He was there long before we came, I hear, and I can readily believe it, for he is very large and stout and venerable-looking. Very often we see him lying, stretched at full length, sunning himself on the breastworks which guard the entrance to his fortress. Sometimes he clambers in a slow and leisurely way to the top of the wall, where he sits and blinks. His arch enemy is our collie, who puts into woodchuck hunting all the thought and energy she would have bestowed on a flock of sheep if we had had one. It is said that she has killed more "chucks" than any other two dogs in this county, and her former owner tells me that she has a record of thirty groundhogs in one season. Still, her ambition is yet unrealized; she is most anxious to count the tenant of our old stone wall among her victims. She has paid him endless attention, and has tried all the skill and strategy which has proved fatal to so many other "chucks," in vain. At first I used to call her off whenever I saw her besieging the old fellow, but very soon I began to feel that he was quite able to take care of himself. Whenever the dog is stealing softly through the grass toward the burrow, the old woodchuck seems to know all about it, and when the enemy makes her final charge, the old fellow drops into his burrow almost automatically, just in front of her nose. Nor does he appear alarmed. When the collie reaches the spot, he is still in sight, though not quite within reach. The dog barks and thrusts her nose as far in as she can get it; not quite far enough to enable her to reach the woodchuck, but sometimes just far enough to enable him to bury his big incisor teeth in the soft flesh. This hurts her awfully, of course, but she is game enough, and only the more determined to destroy her tormenter. So far, however, the siege has not been raised, and it seems likely that we shall enjoy these military operations for some time to come. They keep the woodchuck from getting lonesome and give the dog something to live for.

On the far side of the wall, and at some distance from the woodchuck's home, a chipmunk dwells in the ground. She is an exceedingly dainty little creature, and seems like a fairy when compared with the bulky old woodchuck. She is much busier, too, most of the time, for life presents a different problem to her. The woodchuck makes no preparation for the winter, beyond carrying a little grass into his burrow and stuffing himself with all the food he can eat. The chipmunk, on the other hand, must not only provide for present needs, but must lay up a great quantity of food to last her through the winter. Every day she comes on the wall, and often she runs down into our garden, so we have good opportunities to see her at work. She is very fond of raspberries and other small fruits, and I fear that she has accounted for more than one brood of young birds which were hatched in the grass not far from her home. These and certain other foods, no doubt she classes as "perishable," and eats immediately, before they can spoil, reserving such things as nuts, grain and grass seeds for winter use. Just now she is storing away apple seeds. She jumps down into the garden, gallops over to a tree whose fruit is ripe, and, selecting an apple from the ground, scampers back to the wall with it. There she sits and bites the apple all to pieces, until she reaches the core. Then she skillfully takes out the seeds, stuffs them into her cheek pouches, and scampers off to her burrow, where she empties her mouth before returning for another load.

More dainty still are the deer mice, which live somewhere in the crevices of the wall, but which we see less often. Now and then, while I am lying in the shadow of the wall, with a book, I hear a faint squeak, and look up to see the mischievous little whiskered face of a mouse looking at me from some crack or cranny, with a pair of large black eyes, which add much to the little creature's beauty. If he comes out further, as he usually does if I keep quiet, I see the rich yellowish brown fur of his back, his snowy under parts, his delicate white feet, and his long silky tail. He is a famous climber, and sometimes I see him making his way among the branches of some bush or tree in the garden, often twining his long tail about the twigs to steady himself. There was at least one family of these mice born in the old stone wall last year, and I had hoped to see more of the beautiful creatures this spring and summer. I have not done so, however, and perhaps I know one reason why; two or three times last winter I saw a pair of white weasels winding in and out between the stones, and it is a clever mouse indeed that can live in the same wall with a weasel.

Nevertheless, I love my own country the best.
—Mr. Rockefeller.

I've been vilely abused,
I've been shamefully used,
  I've been raked and reviled without rest.
But, while treated much better whenever I roam,
Be it ever so heartless, there's no place like home—
  I love my own country the best.

I never despair
(Except to grow hair;)
  I'm never the least bit depressed.
Though railed at and ragged from Nantucket to Nome,
Be it ever so rough-house, there's no place like home—
  I love my own country the best.

I've been Lawsoned and Tarbelled;
My words have been garbled,
  My holiness turned to a jest.
But I'm cheery from sun-up till day's at its gloam,
Be it ever so chilly, there's no place like home—
  I love my own country the best.

I'm chock full of vigor
(According to Biggar.)
  And feeling well under my vest.
My digestion's improved, I've a new wig to comb,
And—for picking up pennies there's no place like home—
  Home, home, sweet, sweet home—
For grabbing the dollar, there's no place like home—
  I love my own country the best.

WALK SOFTLY.

In a certain London suburb which need not be named, there is a row of typical modern twentieth-century, jerry-built, semi-detached villas. The houses, although quite new, are jerry-built structures of the most perfect stamp, with damp, cracked walls and plaster, and windows and doors which rattle at the slightest breath of wind.

The tenant of one of them had repeatedly petitioned the landlord to make the necessary repairs; but each time he was put off with unfulfilled promises to attend to the matter as soon as possible.

At last, rendered desperate and reckless, the tenant painted the following notice on a big board and stuck it in his front garden:—

"Caution! Pedestrians are earnestly requested to walk softly past this house. Drivers of vehicles of all kinds are implored to slow down when passing, or, preferably, to go round by the other road, as the slightest disturbance may bring the building down, the cobwebs which the spiders have woven in the corners of the rooms being not yet quite enough to hold the walls together."

The landlord has capitulated.—[Tit-Bits.

Skyscraper Railway.

HIGHEST RAILROAD ON THIS CONTINENT JUST COMPLETED.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE is a dizzy, thrilling time in store for the individual who travels over the new Argentine Central Railroad, which has just been completed in Colorado, and which climbs up one of the shoulders of Gray's Peak until it reaches the appalling altitude of 14,007 feet above sea level.

Aside from a railroad in South America, which crosses an Andean pass some 500 feet higher than the end of the Argentine Central, this Colorado road is the highest actual railroad in the world. It is nearly as high as the world-famous cog road up Pike's Peak, and is more than 400 feet higher than the celebrated Jungfrau Railroad, in Switzerland, which is the marvel of European engineers. Gray's Peak, whose grim top this new railroad comes within 200 feet of scaling, is higher than Pike's Peak, and is one of the mightiest mountains on this continent. Years ago it was used as a government weather observatory, and the ruined building is still on the peak. Adjoining Gray's Peak is Torrey's. These giant peaks, of exactly the same height, are connected by a slightly depressed ridge, making a great saddle, and the sight of these mighty twins of the range, streaked with huge banks of eternal snow, is alone worth the journey to the end of the new railroad.

This new railroad to Cloudland is the result of the foresight and pluck of one man, E. J. Wilcox, one of Denver's successful mining magnates. Six years ago Mr. Wilcox began buying up and developing mining properties in the Gray's Peak region. Soon he controlled a large number of properties under the names of the Waldorf and Manhattan groups. The problem of transporting ore was a serious one, and Mr. Wilcox began to figure on a railroad, connecting with the Colorado and Southern at Silver Plume, fifteen miles away. It is at Silver Plume that the Colorado and Southern makes the celebrated Georgetown loop, which will always be regarded as one of the greatest feats of engineering in the world. Silver Plume is at the bottom of a cañon, the mountains rising, almost sheer, to a tremendous height.

In order to make this first dizzy ascent out of Silver Plume, Mr. Wilcox laid his tracks in a series of switchbacks. Thus the trains literally climb a flight of stairs until they reach the top of the valley overlooking Silver Plume. And at the top of this climb is one of the grandest sights ever vouchsafed to man. Clear Creek, straight below, is no more than a silver thread, and the houses of the mining camp of Silver Plume look like peanuts. A stone tossed from the train would drop like a plummet thousands of feet below, without striking an obstruction. World travelers say that this first panorama is not excelled on any road in any country.

After a pull of several miles, up stiff grades, the train reaches the Commonwealth Tunnel, one of the Waldorf properties, near timber line. Here the crowning difficulties of travel begin. Mount McClellan, one of the shoulders of Gray's Peak, rises some 2000 feet higher, and to scale it looks like a sheer impossibility. But the engine rushes at an 8-per-cent. grade, and the last ascent has begun. There are four switchbacks from the Commonwealth tunnel to the top of the mountain, and the grades will average nearly 8 per cent. This means that the train climbs eight feet out of every hundred it advances. In fact, the entire road, from Silver Plume to the mountain top, averages a 6-per-cent. grade, which is something hitherto unheard-of in railroad construction. The curves, which are so numerous as to leave the impression that there is not a straight rail in the entire railroad, average 30 degrees.

Soon the train is above timber line, and a veritable sea of peaks bursts upon the vision of the beholder. On every hand the gaunt granite heads of mountains lift themselves, like petrified waves. Far to the north can be seen the mountains in the adjacent State of Wyoming, while to the west can be made out the Gore range, well toward the Utah line. If the day is clear, a bright yellow streak can be discerned between the uttermost peaks fifty miles to the east. That streak is the vast plain east of the Rockies, and some days the smoke of busy Denver can be discerned. As many as 175 snow-capped peaks have been counted from the end of the Argentine Central road, to say nothing of numberless other peaks above timber line.

The bald side of the mountain has been honeycombed with mine tunnels and shafts. Some of the properties are in the "prospect" stage, while others are paying as high as $500 per day. Through the mine dumps the train threads its way, and soon the last switchback has been made and the last grade climbed. The passengers tumble out and are escorted to an abandoned mine whose inner workings, owing to the dripping of water and the constant action of frost, have become coated with snow and with ice crystals of wonderful formation. The gleam of candle light against these crystals makes a wonderful sight. This mine was the first silver mine opened in Colorado. Ore from it was shipped across the plains by ox team transportation, long before the first stage coaches were run. The pioneer miners, who were looking for silver only, had no idea they were working in a district which would some day become a great gold-mining center.

So quickly has the last ascent been made that the traveler hardly realizes that he is 14,000 feet above sea level. But as soon as he takes a few steps along the side of the mountain he finds out. His breath comes in sobbing gasps, his knees grow weak, and his heart beats as if it would leap from his breast. He must stop and rest every few feet. Even old and experienced mountaineers cannot climb long without stopping to breathe at such a tremendous altitude.

Mr. Wilcox, the man who put through this great feat of railroad construction, was unknown a few years ago. When he projected his skyscraping railroad he had hard work to keep other men from laughing at the idea. But finally he interested enough capitalists to put the road through to the group of mines below timber level. Then came the final burst of work—carrying the road to the very mountain top. And, just a year from the time the first rail was laid, the golden spike which completed the line was driven.

To build this little fifteen miles of railroad cost more than a quarter of a million dollars. It is narrow gauge, and every foot of the roadbed has been firmly ballasted. The engines are of the Shay geared type—a kind of engine that, like Kipling's screw guns, can "climb up the side of a sign board and trust to the stick of the paint." The eight drive wheels are geared together, so the pulling power is enormous. And, in case the engine should leave the track, it always leans away from the outer edge, so that it will not plunge into an abyss.

It is believed that Mr. Wilcox, in building the Argentine Central, has sounded the final note in railroad construction. There are no other peaks on this continent as high as Gray's that can be scaled by anybody short of mountain climbers equipped with ropes and alpenstocks. So those who wish to travel to still greater heights than this marvelous railroad approaches will have to wait until airships are perfected.

UNFORTUNATELY PUT.

"I had the good luck to be invited to dine with the King at Marlborough House when I was in London in June," sail a Western millionaire.

"As I didn't know how to dress the part of a royal guest, I wrote to Lord Knollys, the King's secretary, and asked help.

"Lord Knollys said in his reply:

"'As no ladies are to be present, trousers may be worn.'

"When I first read that sentence, I said to myself:

"'What kind of Neronic revels go on at Marlborough House, anyway?'

"Afterward, though, I learned that Lord Knollys meant that at mixed dinners knee breeches were worn at Marlborough House, at stag ones the ordinary evening suit sufficing."

WHERE BLACK MEANS WHITE.

"If I told you," said a philologist, "that a word white meant not only white, but black as well—that it had two meanings, one the opposite of the other—you would hardly believe me. Yet we have in English many such words.

"Cleave means to cling together. It also means to cut apart.

"Let means to permit. It also means to hinder. 'Let me do it,' we say, adding, 'I did it without let or hindrance.'

"Fast means motionless. 'The horse was tied fast.' It also means swift-moving. 'The horse ran fast.'

"Master means a little boy—'Master Willie Bell'; it also means a strong and resolute leader—'He was the unquestioned master of that unruly band.'"

AN OVERCROWDED TRADE.

"Here's a go," said L'Oignon, laying down his paper.

"What's the matter?" asked Tete de Veau.

"Why, it seems there are so many grafters in politics now that the politicians are going to get up a society to reform some of their number, and thus prevent business from suffering from too much competition."

Afoot in the Foothills.

A SUMMER DAY'S OUTING IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

By a Special Contributor.

WALKING in the country seems to be gaining in favor as a recreation. Perhaps the khaki summer suit has something to do with this. There is nothing like a rough scramble through bushes, over hill and dale, to take the newness out of the garment and give it a weatherbeaten campaigning air. Anyhow the rural folk look now with less astonishment at the appearance of a stranger on foot who is not a tramp by profession.

Some local knowledge is required to select the best line for your outing. Of course if you merely walk to satisfy the demand of well-developed muscles for exercise, and to reap the reward of your toil in sounder sleep and keener appetite, it does not matter much which way you turn your steps. A five-mile tramp out and home, along a flat, springy, oiled road, will do. That is what is called "taking a constitutional," a very good thing in its way.

Most people, however, require something more than this. They want some place of interest to visit, the satisfaction of a semi-scientific curiosity, naturalizing or botanizing; they are amateurs of the picturesque, hunters of views with the snapshot camera. Such folk are eager for a ramble in the cool days of the spring flower festival. But in the dry season they balk at the long perspective of dusty roads, at the barren outlook over endless barley stubble. They must be tempted abroad.

Well, for this season of the year there is nothing like a ramble over the hills by the sea. Variety is the seasoning of a day's outing, as it is called, the spice of that larger outing, our life. There is plenty of diversity in the coast hills. There is cool running water in their cañons, and what would a walk be worth without a shady spot to lunch in by the stream side? The air on the hilltops is of another temper than the salty breeze that buffets your face on the beach. And you have a wide outlook over the everchanging purple ocean plain.

The trolley line has made a trifle of the distance of these hills from the city. One of the cars that run by Westgate and the Soldiers' Home will set you down on the Santa Monica bluff. There you are in full view of the most picturesque part of our coast range, a line of cliffs that overhang the sea, and sink gradually into the headland of Point Duma.

An hour's walk will bring you to the foot of the nearest rise. You must first climb down into the Santa Monica Cañon, where the great sycamore trees are now in the full glory of their summer foliage. This is a favorite resort for picnic parties, whose "kitchen middens"—paper bags, cartons, and Sunday newspaper debris—litter the ground. On the other side of the dry stream bed a road climbs the bluff between ranks of Australian gum trees. This is one way to get into the hills.

You pass a farm, open a gate, and find yourself on a fairly level mesa. On either side are barley fields, the cultivation extending to the edge of the slope where the chaparral begins. Owing to the heavy rain at the end of May, an unusual thing happened. The harvest stubble turned green with springing plants, weeds and volunteer barley, and remained so for a considerable time. The drainage of the hills is conducted seaward through narrow but deep gulches, the existence of which you would hardly suspecta till the road takes a sudden downward dive.

Then the scene changes. There is water in the hollow, of course, and a magnificent live oak by the roadside, with a huge coil of roots. A small farm nestles deep in the dell, its barn and buildings screened by a grove of trees and a field of tall, rustling corn.

The shady place invites the wayfarer to halt. The gentle murmur of the stream tempts him to follow its course down to the sea. If he does, he is in for a rough scramble. For the sides of the narrow cañon are steep, and its bottom pretty well filled with brushwood. But you can worry through, stooping and crawling when needful, splashing in and out of the shallow stream. The strata are generally soft sands and gravels, but if a ledge of solid rock crops out, the stream must take a leap. But there is usually some way of getting round these sudden waterfalls, to right or left, without sliding over the edge.

The pathbreaking in a trailless cañon brings one close to nature, if anything does. You are apt to scare a bird straight off its nest, to step right upon a bunch of fledgling quail. But the spotted midgets vanish before you have recovered your breath, hidden behind stones and ferns; or you surprise a green-and-yellow water snake asleep. All this is rather like turning out the pockets of Mother Earth's garments to see what is in them. There is little that is harmful. The tenderfoot is usually nervous about snake-bite, but in the course of a long experience in hill rambling I have rarely stumbled upon a rattlesnake. Anyhow the rattler gives a man a "square deal," and always sounds a warning, except in the sluggish season. Poison oak is like a thorn in the flesh to some people; and it is well to beware of rank weeds that grow to nine or ten feet high.

But if nettles luxuriate in the damp places, so do the leopard lilies. Nowhere are they finer than in the dells of the Santa Monica Mountains. Maybe you have seen these lilies growing in northern gardens. Be prepared for a California surprise. Here you will find stalks ten or twelve feet high, and any number of buds from twenty to thirty, true count. I have seen a dozen open at once. Their deep orange is stained with purple and like the spots on the hide of a leopard. Under the walls of a hidden cañon like this they grow unmolested, but anywhere near an open road they fall victims to Sunday trippers, who cut the stalks and drag them home in triumph at the tail of the buggy.

After this digression let us return to the hill road. Another mile from the oak dell, or rather less, stands a solitary farmhouse. A mob of shaggy dogs rush out, barking at the unaccustomed sound of footsteps. The voice that checks them is Spanish. It is an old squatter's place; beyond it is upland pasture. The road, diminished now to a trail, drops into the cañon in front of the house, and winds up that natural stairway to the first ridge.

The grade is easy at first. There is shade in the afternoon from the hill, and at any hour from the wild walnuts and elders. The latter grows here to the size of a middling tree, and scents the air with its big heads of bloom. The oaks, as usual near a Mexican farm, have been chopped into firewood. Even in late July there are plenty of flowers—banks of buff-colored monkey flower, cool mauve willow herbs in shady places, a rather uncommon scarlet larkspur, and those orange-red Pentstemons that grow on long curved stems.

It is such a lonely place that one is surprised to find the birds so shy. Perhaps it is of the man with the gun that the dove is complaining, with that mournful croon that harmonizes so with the still sunny day. There is no lack of twittering and caroling, but the songsters give the stranger one glance, and away they go. Only the black-crested sober-suited peewee, swooping in quest of flies, returns to its perch undisturbed by your presence. The goldfinches, because they are unwilling to leave the ripe seed heads on which they feed, allow a passing glance at their changed plumage. They have lost some of the vivid canary color of their courting suits.

You cross and recross the tiny stream, till it diminishes to a thread of water, half choked with green hairy weed. Then, with a last effort, the path flings itself up a steep slope to a neck that connects two ridges. Here you can look into the heart of the mountains. What a number of peaks! They are all much of the same height, crested like the waves of a tumultouus sea. The bright green winding line down there, on which the sun is shining, is the bottom of a cañon. It does not look more than a long rifle-shot away. But it will hardly do to return that way, gradual as the slope is from this ridge there, for there is no trail, and no one who has not tried it knows what a long and tiresome business it is to struggle through breast-high chaparral, thorny lilac bushes and the like.

No need to return the same way, anyhow. A little further along the ridge, a block of sandstone sticks out, like the capstone on a wall. An oak has fixed its roots therein; it is the landmark of another trail, that leads down the face of the hills. Having come up by a side stair, return by the front; but halt a while under the oak.

For it is a point of vantage, commanding a wide view. Not more than a thousand or perhaps 1500 feet above sea level, but that gives a good lift to the horizon. Seaward, you seem to be looking into a deep cup with a high purple rim. The coast to the south shows up in profile. Apparently close at hand, the long railroad pier runs out; beyond it are the cliffs of Santa Monica, then just out, one behind the other, the piers of the beach towns; the towns themselves look like dolls' villages; then comes the low line of the sand dunes and the long curve of the bay to where Redondo, imagined rather than seen, shelters under the uplands of Point Firmin. Inland, over the pale, flat harvest fields, along dark lines of the gum groves, looms the hump-backed mountain of Santa Ana, and the clear-cut edge of the Sierra Madre.

But the wide expanse of ocean is all but empty of life. In the offing a lumber schooner crawls along. Off the long pier lies anchored a tall barkentine, whose red, sea-rusted sides are eloquent of a long struggle with wind and wave. One of the "gipsies of the Horn," as Kipling calls them, she took a year, they say, to make the port of Santa Monica from Europe.

The descent from this mountain eyrie is an easy matter. A cow path leads through the brush down to the open pasture land, which is cut up by wire fences. In the spring it is just as well to put one of these between yourself and inquisitive cattle, but now the herds have gone further, to seek fresh grazing. The Mariposa lilies that abounded in the grass in May have shed their bells and ripened their pods. The grass land slopes down to the edge of steep cliffs, which are only passable at certain places. A deserted cottage, shaded by the only clump of gum trees in sight, is the landmark for an easy path to the beach.

There the wet, firm sands left by the receding tide prove a restful change to feet wearied by solid rock. There is variety, too, in the muscular exercise, in the normal heel-and-toe tramp on the level, instead of the steep descent, where the stress falls on the muscles that keep the body from falling forward. There is a dusty road under the cliffs, above high-water mark. Along this, on Sundays, there streams a procession of motor cars, buggies, and delivery wagons pressed into the service of family parties. They are returning from the romantic cañon on the Cheney ranch road.

This picturesque spot is within the compass of a walk for able-bodied pedestrians. About five miles from the end of the car line, and after passing the remains of the once celebrated Arch Rock (which fell down, last winter, sapped by the rains), a sign post is met with, pointing inland. Turning away from the sea, you enter a wide, oval valley, pretty enough, but with no points of distinction. Two miles further on the valley contracts to a gorge, and the road is forced to dip into the little river and out again several times. Then comes the pass, where the road climbs away up a steep cliff in zigzags. Here is all that delights the enthusiast of scenery; sharp pinnacles of rock, smooth precipices falling sheer into shady pools, white cascades, and sunlit mountain heights. It is a place in which to store your mind with negatives for the memory to develop and intensify in the after time.

The rock through which the road is hewn is worth notice. It is a conglomerate, or pudding stone; and the plums in this very solid pudding are water-worn pebbles, such as lie around on every shingle beach. They are cemented together by a mortar of compacted sand. There is no reason to doubt that these building materials were deposited ages ago underneath some sea. The pebbles run in regular lines, you observe, but these are not horizontal, like bricks in a wall, but steeply inclined. So the pebbles and sand, after having been solidified under enormous pressure, must have been uplifted by some earth-forming convulsion from the bed of the sea, and tilted into their present position.

Such observations as these add interest to the ramble, and afford matter for comment on the return home. It is well to plan your walk over the coast hills so as to return by the sands. There you can best enjoy the most beautiful hour of a long summer day, the hour of sunset, when the western sky changes to primrose and turquoise-green and the purple of the hills deepens to the indigo of night. You are all a little tired and straggling, more disposed to smoke quietly than to talk; and the lap of the waves and the gentle touch of the cool evening breeze cheers both mind and body on the homeward trail.

STATE GOING TO WASTE.

PORTIONS OF MICHIGAN FAST UNDERGOING A REVERSION TO WILDERNESS.

With conditions so uniformly and normally favorable, it comes with a double shock to learn that the people of Michigan have permitted actually one-sixth of their splendid State to be abandoned to waste, a literal reversion to the wilderness. The story of destruction, the recent movement to restore value to this wasted area, and the peculiar obstacles, political as well as material, which are to be overcome, narrates a picturesque condition typically American and interesting in the extreme. It is described at length by Allan W. Benson in Appleton's Magazine for September, from which we quote:

"From Lake Michigan to Lake Huron and from the Straits of Mackinac almost to Grand Rapids, the lumber baron has swept through, with colossal stride, felling the forests that were a people's heritage. And after the lumber baron has come the periodical fire with sweep not less stupendous. Only last May fifty square miles were burned over. Straggling hamlets were laid waste, hundreds were made homeless, and the young trees that a persistent nature was trying to force upon a careless State were burned to the roots again.

"Nature is tiring of this continuous indifference. In spots the white sand is beginning to show through. On tracts of a thousand acres repeated fires have swept away the tangled masses of dead limbs, underbrush, and blackened stumps that mark the landscape elsewhere. The soil is so bereft of vegetable matter by fire that trees will no longer seed themselves, and drifting sand tells the story of nature at last crushed down by man's indifference.

"And yet nature is still ready to grow trees on this poorest part of Michigan if only she be given a little help and adequate protection against fire. The soil is not as poor as the people suppose. It will not raise wheat, but it will raise hemlock, cedar, pine, spruce, and poplar. And the people of Michigan need these forest products. For lack of them, cities and towns in the northern part of the lower peninsula are wasting away. In 1890 Iosco county had a population of 15,224. In 1900 the Federal census recorded only 10,246 residents of the county. A third of the population had vanished in ten years, because the county had been stripped of its timber and nothing had been put in its place. Other counties have suffered as much. Nor has the loss been confined to a few counties. It has affected the whole State. In 1890 $125,000,000 was invested in the lumbering industry of Michigan. Today only a little more than $50,000,000 of this capital is left.

"There is many a 'deserted village' in Northern Michigan, and under the present policy of the State these villages will never rise again. Meanwhile, the people of Michigan, who thirty years ago thought they had an 'inexhaustible' supply of timber, are shingling their houses with shingles from the Pacific Coast, finishing the interiors of their homes with Georgia pine, and getting their moldings from California. The oak for their chairs and tables comes from Mississippi. Incidentally, they are paying an average of $250 a carload for the freight on the lumber they import from other States.

"In Detroit is a man who is trying at his own expense to show the State of Michigan its mistake. He believes Michigan's 6,000,000 lost acres can be reclaimed. He is backing his judgment with his money, realizing at the same time that every dollar he puts into the object lesson will be lost to him, because the tree crop he is planting will not mature during his lifetime. The name of this man is Carl E. Schmidt. He is a public-spirited manufacturer who was closely connected with the political career of the late Mayor and Governor, Hazen S. Pingree.

"In the summer of 1904 Mr. Schmidt asked the authorities at the State Agricultural College at Lansing to designate the location of what they considered the poorest land in the State. He was told that there was no poorer land than that in Iosco county, north of Au Sable. On this recommendation he bought 3000 acres. He wanted land so poor that, if he should accomplish anything in tree growing, nobody could say that as much could not be done anywhere else in the State. A visit to the land quickly convinced him that he had bought what he wanted."

The rest of the article in Appleton's describes the amazing success Mr. Schmidt has had, and the methods by which he achieved it. Incidentally the article describes a peculiar form of graft indulged in by the small town editors of Michigan and their opposition to plans for redeeming the wilderness.

The Sawmill Steal.

A CALIFORNIA FOREST RANGER'S GOOD VACATION WORK.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN the summer season in the Santa Barbara forest reservation was drawing to a close, Bob Willits received a "lay-off" order from the department. At his appointment as summer ranger, early the year before, he had expected to be relieved from duty for the winter season; and so the order from Washington had not surprised him. He had worked hard at his duties and patrolled the territory allotted to him with a regularity and conscientiousness that brought him before the eyes of the superintendent of the division.

Bob had partly planned to enter college during the winter; but, as he could save little from his small salary, he decided to find work for the wet season; and, if he could be assigned for ranger work again in the summer, he could attend college after the holidays.

But a matter of grave import had come before the superintendent through the Washington authorities. The affair concerned a reported timber steal from a range that lay far to the north of the reservation boundaries, but on government land. Headquarters wanted the report substantiated or disproved, either, it did not matter. The superintendent of the division nearest the range was ordered to send a reliable man over the mountains and report on the stealing of lumber. In looking over his list of available men, Willits's record appealed to the superintendent and Bob was selected for the work; besides, he remembered how Bob had proved his nerve and bravery when he captured the condors for the Smithsonian Institution a few months before. He found Bob deficient only in age and experience; but his coolness and nerve, he decided, would more than balance this inadequacy.

So it was that Bob received word to call at the office without loss of time. Wondering what his chief would want of him, he walked into the office and found the superintendent deep in a pile of maps on his desk.

"Good morning, Willits; are you ready for work again? Ready to leave home for the winter?"

"Do you mean work for the government?" He hardly dared ask it.

"Well, yes. I have here reports that the concession people over on the Sawmill Peak in the Sierra Pelona range are selling government timber. It is out of our territory all together; but it's on government land, and we must look up the people who are stealing the timber. I want you to go over there and try to locate the trouble. When can you start?"

"I can get off tomorrow at daylight, or even this afternoon if you wish it."

"Tomorrow will do, as you will need time to get ready. You will be under regular rangers pay from today."

"Good!" His involuntary outcry was abrupt; but his manner expressed his thanks for the commission. He left the office with his head swimming; he would have work for the winter; he would be under good pay; he would still be a ranger. And that meant promotion, and—perhaps, college.

"Find out who is stealing the timber. Well, I shall certainly try it."

During the afternoon Bob planned what he wold take on his trip. At first he decided he would buy a pack-horse and a good outfit for camping; he could carry enough rations for himself and horses on the pack [illegible]. Then he smiled to think how foolish that would be; people in the new country would wonder who and what he was if he came in upon them with such a fine outfit. He would have to walk in, cross-country, and in old clothes. To help out his plot, he thought it best to seek work in the new country; he would find mines on the range, and he could work there, as long as needed; and if not mines, there would be ranches, where he could spend the winter working for his board. He would not rush the matter, but take his time, and make sure of his reports before he sent them in to the chief.

The morning he left early. The sun was just crimsoning the coast fog that lay on the hilltops, and crept in and out of the timbered cañons around the town. He thought it best no one should know where he was going, and so took the brush trail across lots where no one would see him leave. A tramp of forty miles over mountains does not amount to much, where the way is made clear by trails, or where there is no brush; but when the whole forty miles is a mass of cross ranges, deep cañons, with ridges covered with an impassable mantle of scrub oak, or bluethorn bush, it becomes another matter.

Had it not been for the short brush ax that Bob had with him, he could never have made his way through the heavy brush. It was slow work at the most, but he cut a fine, wide trail, and exulted in the work when he thought that it was ranger's work, and would help the ranger cross-cutting the country. One ridge after another he worked over, until he came to the Piru; he crossed cañons so deep that the 200-foot firs did not reach the crest, until he reached this stream. Here the cañon was so deep that he could not work his way down where he stood. He looked in vin for a way; he followed the ridge to the next bluff, until he recognized the spot where he had gone over the cliff for the condors, and he stopped curiously, to glance down at the tree into which he had jumped to escape the rolling rock. A short way beyond this point he found a place where he could reach the bottom of the dark cañon; he made his bed beside the swift stream, and cooked a supper of coffee and bacon.

From the bed of the Piru, the way to the Sawmill was no easier; there were a great many ridges to climb; just as many deep cañons; and also, numerous patches of heavy brush through which he had to cut his way; but gradually the ridges became less steep, and the brush less thick, until, at last, the whole pitch of the land changed and sloped up to the mountains that he correctly placed as the Sierra Pelona range. Late in the afternoon Bob came out into a beautiful mountain ciénaga (a marsh flat, clear of brush) where a small stream headed among the wild blackberries and ferns, and carried the message of the hills to the distant ocean. From this place the land rose sheer to the big ridge in the north. Here he would come into the scene of his winter's work. He made his camp at the ciénaga, as the day was far advanced, and he needed a whole new day on the other slope to find work.

Early the next morning Willits was on top of the mountain and looked down into a vast valley below the timber belt. The valley looked as big as the world; it stretched to the west a hundred miles and to the east it faded away into the great California desert. This was the newly-settled country; in it lived the people who were stealing lumber from the United States government.

Right in front of where he had climbed out upon the bald top of the peak a wide cañon leveled itself into the rolling crest of the range. All arond the top of the cañon were stumps of trees newly cut; stumps that would measure five feet and over; clean stumps that showed a systematic invasion upon the fitliest, and a few fallen firs lay with their limbs lopped and knots hewn smooth. As Bob walked down into the head of the cañon he found the beginning of a log slide; it was made of dressed fir trees imbedded in the soil two feet apart. The small trees that formed the slide were free of knots and worn smooth and highly polished from the friction of the larger trees. Lower in the cañon the timber grew thicker and taller as the cañon deepened. Some of the trees, scions of giants, grew so tall that their tops roared and swayed in the wind, and their whisperings were passed along to their brothers, in adjoining cañons.

About half way down the cañon Bob came upon some of the workers driving eight yokes of oxen up the runway for the first load of the day. He stopped and talked with the drivers for a while and found he could easily obtain work at the mill, at the base of the mountain. He need not have worried; the crew, even the boss, was too busy to wonder at his coming; perhaps took him for a settler from the valley below, and gave him the work he was looking for; and, above all, gave him the first good meal he had eaten in ten days. When the dinner had been eaten, and the teams started again for the top, Bob went with them, and began his work at the top, clearing limbs from fallen trees.

It did not take Willits long to find out that the owners of the mill had a right to cut a certain amount of lumber. A concession had been made by the government; the settlers could cut 100,000 feet of lumber for their houses and barns, each to have what he needed at the cost of his labor alone.

It was a newly-settled country, and lay a long distance from the railway—so far that the settlers could not haul their lumber or pay the railway prices. The government, always ready to help the settler in the way of land and water and mineral privileges, granted the squatters permission to cut the timber, and the mill was soon started. Six of the leading settlers had gotten an old upright traction engine and built the mill at the mouth of the big cañon. From this point a wagon road was easily cut through the brush to the valley. The mill was a success from the start. The single saw cut great quantities of rough, uneven boards from the trees, and as the demand for lumber became greater, oxen were brought in to drag the timber down the slides; more men were put to work, and then temptation came upon the owners, and they sold lumber.

At first Bob could see no reason why he should have been sent in to locate a "steal" when the people had a permit to cut the trees. Then as time passed and the mill still continued to cut great ricks of lumber, he wondered how long it had been running; how long it would take to cut enough lumber for the settlers; and how close to the limit it had run. Then he noticed on several occasions that big ricks of neatly-stacked lumber would disappear in a night; lumber he had worked hard to stack before dark; worked overtime on, just to get an estimate of what was cut in a day. After, he began to keep a record of what was cut each day, and what disappeared in the night.

He could not keep awake after working twelve hours; 8 o'clock rarely passed but he was asleep, dead to the noises of the prowling fox or coyote, or the more subtle movements of strangers about the camp. Once or twice he noticed that the whistle sounded its wailing signal between the calls for meals. This did not happen often, but the unusual sound attracted his attention, and then he noticed that the ricks of lumber disappeared in concurrence with the signal.

He watched the wagon road closely now, examined the dust early each morning for tracks, usually finding a mass of quail tracks or an occasional trail of a deer that had tried to reach its old salt lick by the spring near the mill. Then one day he found the faint marks of wagon wheels, almost blotted out by innumerable quail tracks, where the valley and mountain quail had come to feed on wind-driven seeds and take their baths in the deep dust of the road.

"Some one has surely been here during the night with a wagon. Well, I did not see them," he grinned at his inertness. "I must keep awake." And at last, one night about midnight, he heard a wagon come creaking up the rough road to the mill; and he got up from his bed to see who came so late to get lumber; who was worked so hard that they had to get their lumber when others were deep in sleep. He crept close to the lmuber heaps, and saw the foreman and several others, loading a six-horse team with boards; he crept closer and closer until he recognized the late comers by the faint light of the moon, and then he turned and went softly back to his bed.

A few days after his discovery, Bob decided to take up a homestead; he picked out a claim close up to the base of the big mountain peak; and then he went to the mill foreman and asked for lumber enough to build a small house and shed. For the sum of $8 a thousand feet he got what he needed in the way of boards and had the foreman write him a receipt for the amount. Then one day, while on top of the ridge, he put the paper with his other possessions that he had hidden in a hollow stump on the south side of the mountain; his ranger's badge, his long blue Colts, and belt of shells, and also his commission, that he brought in case of emergency.

The only man in the whole camp who was an "outsider" and who worked for regular wages, besides Bob, was Striever; he had wandered down from the northern lumber camps where he had worked for years; he was a skilled workman in everything relating to a logging camp, and understood the handling of the engine and big saw. He was paid so much for each thousand feet of boards, and his wages were made large to humor him, for he was the backbone of the mill. He kept a book of the amount of timber cut, each day's work bearing the O. K. signature of the foreman, Mr. Raynor.

This book was what Willits wanted; he would not steal it outright; yet he believed he would be justified in doing so. He tried to breed discontent in the man's mind, but for a long time Striever would not listen to him. Then avarice gradually brought about what everything else had failed to accomplish. Had Striever belonged to the valley settlers, Bob would not have dared approach him as he did; he told him he was not being treated well; that he should have his share of the lumber that was being sold outright; that he was being deprived of a share in the dividends from the sales; and, at last, that he was a tool in their hands. After this he was wise enough to keep quiet for a few days. The tiny spark was smouldering; it took time for it to blaze up and light the man's brain. Then one day he broached the matter again.

"How about it, Bill? Don't you think we should have our share of the spoils? I don't think we should lose it."

"I think you are right, kid, but how are we to get it?"

"You are better known than I am in the camp. Couldn't you ask for it?"

"Well, I'll do it," said Bill, after a few moments' thought.

That same evening, Striever called Mr. Raynor to one side, and for a long time Bob could hear them talking in low voices. Then the conversation developed a higher pitch, and Bob rubbed his hands with joy as he gloated. Louder and louder the wrangling became, until Bob's conscience tempted him to settle the difference by explaining. But he didn't want to give Mr. Raynor the chance to escape before he had all of his testimony; he preferred to prove all six of the owners guilty; he could not let sympathy conflict with his orders from Washington.

When Bob opened his eyes the next morning he saw Striever at work packing his trunk at the other end of the bunk-house. He was so surly that he would not answer Willits's questions; he continued to throw his belongings into the trunk; he was as surly to the others as to Bob; and then, when the rest of the crew had left the bunk-house, Willits went to him and told him who he was and why he had come into the country.

"And you say they are stealing this lumber from government land and selling it?"

"That's it exactly. They have cut three times the amount given them in the concession; they have abused the trust placed in them, and are now cutting the stuff just to make money for themselves."

"Well," said Bill, "I am glad I quit. I don't want to be mixed up with them against Uncle Sam."

"Will you give me that record book you have been keeping? I want that book badly, and your name and address so we can find you if we need you."

"Yes, you can have the book, but I don't want to go to court if I can get out of it. The book should be enough evidence."

After obtaining the book Bob remained only a few days to gather in the few facts he needed for his report; then one day he disappeared. It was pay day, and his leaving without his wages caused some little interest at first, then as he did not appear the mill crew went on with their timber stealing. The few dollars of Bob's wages merely went to swell the weekly dividend.

As Willits gathered his treasures from the stump, he could hardly keep from voicing the feeling in his heart in a terrible yell of joy; he was going home; he was conscious of a duty well performed; and as he went down his old brush "swale" his feet swung in rhythmic stroke with his pulsatile heart that beat rapidly in his eagerness to be home.

Three weeks after Bob left the Sawmill, a United States marshal rode in upon the mill crew; the affair was handled quietly but thoroughly by the government; the trespassers paid for all of the grand trees they had cut, and were bonded on probation. The old traction engine was moved to more honest work; the mountain quietness was again unbroken by men's noises; and the deer, unafraid, came back to the old salt lick.

In his final report, Bob put great stress upon the value of the Sierra Pelona range as a watershed for the fertile valley below; a forest inspector was sent in to report on the matter; and during later years the entire range was added to the East Santa Barbara division of the reserve.

ROCK ROSES.

A PLEA FOR MORE GENERAL USE IN PARKS AND GARDENS.

By Ernest Braunton.

THOSE who view the Rock Roses or Cistus in Southern California for the first time marvel exceedingly that they do not find wider acceptance in our parks and gardens, for they are wonderfully adapted to the soils and climatic conditions on our hillsides. In its native haunts, no soil is too poor or spot too hot and sunny for these generous, care-free lovers of sun and wind and rocky hillside.

We have hundreds of acres of wind-swept, hilly land in our parks where the rock roses could be made to thrive and bloom in the genial warmth of our semi-tropic summer sun. In fact, the best way to grow them is to leave them to their own resources. They do not enjoy the coddling usually bestowed on the average garden plant. On the rocky, sunny, wind-swept hills of the Mediterranean region they may be seen in thickets of hundreds of acres, seeming to revel in the poorest soil, in the hottest exposure and under the poorest conditions to be found for plant life in general. They only ask that the soil be loose enough or the rocks sufficiently broken so that the rootlets may be thrust down fairly deep into something terrestrial.

On rocky and barren hillsides in Southern California these simple children of the sun should find a home that more than meets their every requirement. Some of the rock roses are not classed botanically with the Cistus, but are sold under the name common to all the family (Rock Rose) or listed in scientific works as helianthemum. These need the same treatment as the Cistus proper. Some of these, planted in Singleton Court, Los Angeles, some years ago, speedily perished from too much water, though only so much was given as is generally accorded groups of mixed shrubbery. No matter in what country they are grown, the best success is had where the plants are entirely neglected. The flowers of these plants range from white to yellow and down to deep crimson. Some are clear in color while others are blotched or spotted, usually at the base of each petal in the same manner as our Mariposa lilies. The foliage runs from a hairy, silvery white through light green and on to the darkest emerald, and some have highly-colored branches. They surely are destined, at some future day, to be more extensively planted in this State.

REINE OLGA DE KURTEMBURG—A RED CLIMBER.

South African Watsonias.

The White Watsonia, from South Africa, is claimed by an English flower-show judge, to be "the whitest flower on earth," and its purity of color certainly justifies the claim. The flowers sometimes measure 3½ inches in diameter, and much resembles gladiolus, to which it is closely related. Unlike the gladioli, however, it branches profusely, often having 200 flowers from a single bulb. On account of its snowy whiteness, fine texture and good lasting qualities, it is much in demand by florists. For the plant lover in the ordinary garden, it is proving to be the most satisfactory novelty introduced for many years, and though as yet little known, it is bound to win favor with the masses and become a universal favorite.

The Garland Flower.

On the grounds of the Hollenbeck Home there is a plant now in bloom that is, to say the least, not common, and well worthy of notice. It is the Hedychium (sweet snow), in common parlance the Garland Flower, and belongs with the ginger in the natural order Lineceracae. The plant is from three to four feet high, the foliage resembles the canna, with which it is nearly allied, one of the endogens; but in some respects it is unique, the arrangement of the leaves and the floral organs is two-ranked instead of three-ranked, as are most of this class. The flowers are a pure white, growing in masses like snowy garlands thrown over the foliage. The individual flowers are from two to three inches across; the long thread-like pistil is closely surrounded by the filament of the one stamen, and has a one-celled, one-seeded ovary; there are four petals, two of which are united, and, as in some of the orchids, seem to guard the other parts of the flower, below these are four long, slender petals.

This plant, unlike its "next of kin," the ginger, has no economic value and seems made to brighten the world by its beaty and its expuisite fragrance; if generally cultivated it would form a desirable addition to our floral treasures.—E. M. C.

Forms of Pampas Grass.

Few of our people are aware that the pampas grasses have any range of color or habit, but many desirable forms are occasionally met with. Next to the common white-plumed, the one most planted in Southern California is the pink-plumed species which is found growing with the white in the mountains of Ecuador at an altitude of from 6000 to 10,000 feet. The erroneous impression is quite prevalent that pampas is a plains or lowland grass, but this is not the case, the vast plains of South America, sometimes called llanos, being covered with other grasses. The variety with striped leaves is also quite popular, but the horticultural varieties of the pink-flowered species, now produced in European nurseries in a variety of shades are the ones most popular with planters at present.

The Rose Acacia.

This beautiful flowering shrub is not very closely related to the acacia, though belonging to the same natural order. It really is a locust tree, and should be so called. We have two fine species, Robinia hispida and R. Neo Mexicana, both of which are of unusual beauty during the flowering period. In the spacious grounds of C. S. Campbell Johnston, northwest of Los Angeles, no shrub or tree was more admired by last spring's visitors than the Rose Acacia.

Eastern Trees in California.

Many costly attempts at landscape gardening are to be seen every year in the State which frequently result in failure, in whole or in part, because of the lack of knowledge of existing conditions. Eastern settlers are familiar with trees around their old homesteads and are very desirous of securing the same trees to ornament their new homes. They conclude, that because it is much colder in the East, any of the trees that will withstand the rigorous climate of that region should also do well here where the winters are comparatively mild. Unfortunately this is far from being true, as the dry atmosphere of summer and the unequal winter season, varying in a few days from very warm to cold weather often plays havoc with all forms of eastern vegetation.

Arrangement of Flowers.

Flowers should be sorted according to form and color. Those of a similar form group much better than mixed forms. Colors must be employed that will harmonize or contrast well, using the darkest shades below and light ones above. Sometimes shades of color are allowed to be of more consequence than size of flowers. Small flowers of a dark shade, arranged in a bold mass at the base of a vase, look well with large flowers of lighter shades arranged above them. Some kinds of flowers which look well by daylight are utter failures under electric or other light. Yellow flowers of any shade, for instance, are very effective by daylight; under artificial light they are much paler, some of the lighter shades of yellow appearing white, or almost white. Bright-hued flowers, such as bright shades of red, crimson or pink, always look well under any light; yet shades of purple are very effective.

Color Combinations.

Much difficulty is often encountered by planners of perennial gardens in making selections of plants whose blossoms will harmonize with their neighbors in the border. Catalogues very frequently only serve to confuse the buyer and, after perusing them, he is so bewildered that he is ready to select in a haphazard fashion. The penalty of this confronts him in blossom time, for in nine cases out of ten, the result will be a garden of warring, jarring colors that cry aloud in protest against their unneighborly fellows.

THE ORIENTAL PLANE.

HAS MANY CLAIMS TO BE USED FOR VARIOUS PURPOSES.

OF all deciduous trees used for street alignment, none find more champions than the Oriental Plane, a tree of many fine characteristics which fit it for a variety of purposes in Southern California. It seems peculiarly adapted to city life and even in factory districts where all else is grimy and black, this noble tree may be seen thrusting its fine large leaves through clouds of soot-laden smoke.

In Los Angeles we have numbers of the Oriental Plane on the streets and in the park and garden, and while not impressive in a young state, they will no doubt prove a comfort to many generations yet unborn. There are many trees alive today in Eastern Europe and Asia Minor that are estimated to be more than 2000 years old and rank among the largest trees of the world. In age it is extremely majestic, often matching our giant big trees in girth and rising nearly a hundred feet without singly or in pairs, in the city gardens, the species of the New Zealand Cordylines are for the most part miserable looking objects, but when planted in large groups in the freedom of parks they make a handsome and interesting sight. So many planters make the mistake of planting them where the soil is heavy and drainage poor, a combination most certain to prove fatal to them. Another common cause of failure lies in the ctting of the long tap root in transplanting and for this reason it is best to use small plants only. In light, well-drained soil of good depth the main stem extends down into the earth for considerable distance, the lateral roots being comparatively small.

The most common species is the narrow-leafed one (Cordyline australis), usually known as Dracena indivisa. This seems to be a tough, long-lived plant, enduring many hardships with little loss in vitality or appearance. It grows larger than the other species, and in its native country attains a height of forty feet. The other species, Cordyline indivisa, usually known as the broad-leafed dracena, may occasionally be found in our plant depots under the name of Dracena australis, but its dwarfed growth, shorter life and more exacting requirements as regard soil and care have prevented its general planting, though it is by far the most handsome of the two. Unless the earth is banked about the stem in winter so that the roots may be kept comparatively dry, this latter species often perishes when young.

Local Park Requirements.

If the park or a park system is perfectly adapted to one city, it will be found unsuitable for every other city in the world; also different sections of the same city have different park requirements. Park work at its best, never admits of repetition. It is a shortcoming of many landscape architects, which is not entirely confined to the lesser ones, that they do not solve their park problems from the study of the community which the park is to serve, or from conditions surrounding it, but rather from their knowledge of parks elsewhere, and by what has been done in other cities. It is impossible for any two cities to be alike; so the park problems everywhere must differ.

We have yet to learn how to estimate or measure cities. It has been too often the habit to measure cities by their size, as if the number of persons living under one municipal government was the thing of all things that determined a city's value. There is an individuality of cities as distinct as the difference between races of mankind, or between individuals. There is a provincialism of cities as well as a provincialism of the country, and the inhabitants of the different cities are as clearly distinguishable as the Westerner from the Southerner. There is a composite spirit in every community, be it city or country, made up of the feelings, the thoughts, and the acts of the people who live in them, made up their different personalities and of everything which influences a person while within its borders. Every human being living there contributes to that composite spirit, and in return draws that from it which influences him, which marks him as being one of them. Cities of the same type may differ widely, and cities of different kinds may have very little in common.

Acacias for Streets.

There are more than 500 species of acacia, and all those here listed are natives of Australia. The family is represented in many countries. We have a few species in the United States. Of Acacia melanoxylon, one of our most common street trees, Von Mueller says: "The well-known Blackwood of our river flats and valleys. In irrigated glens of deep soil, the tree will attain a height of eighty feet, with a stem several feet in diameter. The wood is most valuable for furniture, railway and other carriages, boatbuilding, tool handles, crutches, some portions of organs and pianofortes, caskets, billiard tables, and numerous other purposes. The fine grained wood is cut into veneers. It takes a fine polish, and is almost equal to walnut. Our best wood for bending under steam, it does not warp or twist."

Acacia mollissima is the name by which the Black Wattle is known to the nursery trade. Our best Australian botanists call it a variety of Acacia decurrens, the Green Wattle. It is a very hardy tree and is content with the poorest and driest soils, though in good soil it grows faster. The best Australian tree for yielding tan bark. It grows to 60 feet.

Acacia dealbata is usually known as Silver Wattle, and resembles the foregoing species very closely. However, it frequents much damper soils and attains a height of 150 feet. It is distinguished from the last mentioned by the silvery or ashy hue of the young growth, and further by the fact that it blooms some time before the other species. It supplies a fine, hard, durable lumber much in demand by coopers.

Acacia decurrens, the Green Wattle, is a handsome tree with a wood tough and firm, yet easily worked; useful for tool handles and staves. The so-called Acacia mollisima is a variety of this species. Prof. E. J. Wickson says he considers the Green Wattle the finest street tree growing in Berkeley.

Acacia cyanophylla, the Blue Wattle, is rather a large shrub or tree growing but twenty feet in height, yet making an elegant tree for narrow streets. The leaves are large and undulating and the whole tree shows a striking resemblance to a well-shaped, compact willow.

Acacia floribunda of the trade is really Acacia nerifolia (from Nerium, the botanical name of the oleander). We have a narrow-leafed and wide-leafed form, both of which are among the best for street purposes. They should be pruned for two or three years.

Pruning Street Trees.

Many different opinions will be heard as to the best method of pruning trees. A good pruner will have an ideal shape that he desires to bring about, and every cut with the saw or knife will be done with the knowledge that it will bring forth certain results, all tending to produce a certain shape, which is in his mind and which represents his ideal. More commonly, however, it is generally considered that any one can prune a tree who can use a saw and feel steady on a ladder.

In order to make the best-looking specimens, trees should, as a rule, be pruned very little after the first pruning when they are planted. The tendency to prune all trees alike regardless of the variety is a great mistake. Every species of tree has its own peculiar shape, wherein lies much of its beauty. There will always be dead limbs and superfluous branches which should of course be removed. All cuts larger than one inch in diameter should be painted over with tar, or, if this is not obtainable, white lead or any paint will do.

Our Older Parks.

The city now has parks covering nearly 4000 acres. The oldest is the old Mexican Plaza, the smallest of all; but one that has seen more strange sights than any other park in the country. Though business is moving away from it in the rapid growth of the city, it is still kept in good order; and its old palms, jacaranda and rubber trees, its beds of flowers and smooth lawns are still the same as of old.

The next oldest is Central or Sixth Street Park, covering only about eight acres near what is fast becoming the center of business. This is a mass of shade nearly all the year, the new deciduous trees being dormant but a few weeks in midwinter, while flowers of many kinds ar always in bloom and the brightness of the grass never fades. This park, though small, is still the most frequented of all the city's breathing places.

Railroad Gardening.

The materials applicable to railroad planting need to be hardy on account of the dusty and smoky conditions which they must endure. The short-lived flower patch is a poor and expensive apology for the vastly superior and less expensive perennial planting. Moreover, with the latter, the beauty of the scene is with us throughout the year. Heavy masses of a single species of plants are more effective than the mixing of individuals of several species. These single species masses are to be so placed that they easily blend and together make a harmonious whole. Charming seasonal effects may likewise be produced.

Bohemian Living Abroad.

SOME EXPERIENCES OF A WILD WESTERN WOMAN.

By a Special Contributor.

ONE hears a great deal about the cheapness of living in the great European centers as compared with our own American cities, and one believes it, naturally, until one has been abroad. It may have been the case, a generation ago, that young artists and students could live there on "next to nothing," and save money. Times have changed in Europe as well as in the United States, and rents and prices along with them. You can still live cheaply if you are determined to do so, in London, Paris, or Berlin, but you will have to practice a great deal of self-denial in order to do it, and submit to privations, discomfort, shabbiness and dirt that you would never endure at home.

On the whole, it costs about as much—when all the separate items of fuel, light, service, laundry and bathing, are added to the total of food and rent for the month—for a decent existence in the large cities abroad, as it would in New York, Chicago, or Boston. In the smaller towns and in the provinces it is less, excepting, of course, the fashionable summering or wintering localities and resorts, where it is, if anything, even considerably more.

In London there are about three different ways of living (omitting the expensive hotels) from which the Bohemian tourist may choose. First are the boarding-houses, or "board-residence" places, modeled on the American plan, which abound in Bloomsbury, the so-called American quarter, with its central situation near the British Museum and other notable places and sights of the world's metropolis. Living expenses at one of these houses will range from $7 to $10 a week for a single person, the accommodation for the first-named sum being nothing more than a hall bedroom, furnished in anything but luxurious style.

The second method for the traveler with limited purse, is to take lodgings in one of the numerous "temperance hotels," or other more humble but respectable quarters, where the sum of three shillings, or 75 cents, is paid for bed and breakfast, by the night, or perhaps $4.50 by the week, for a plain room up three flights of stairs. The compensations of this plan are freedom to get your other meals wheresoever you please, or to lead the simple life and save your money by not eating at all!

The third, and by far the best, alternative for the Bohemian traveler is to rent a room in a private home in the suburbs, whose mistress will throw in her own personal attendance, which includes cooking and crockery, with the price of her "bed sitting-room," or two smaller apartments. This will be about ten shillings, or $2.50 per week, and you may do your own catering, or allow her to do it for you, paying merely the first cost of the food.

Meals in the London restaurants vary from 15 cents for poached eggs on toast and a cup of tea at the many modest establishments known by the titles of "The British Tea Table" and "The Aërated Bread Company" (abbreviated to "A.B.C.") shops to the swell establishments and table d'hôtes where as many dollars as you please—or pounds—may be squandered on dainties and delicacies from all over the world. At the chop houses, a shilling must be paid for a thick mutton chop, served on a not overclean marble table, without bread, butter, potatoes, or napkin.

It takes some time to discover all these things for yourself, and in doing so, one has many amusing adventures. Then, when you journey into the country, you have more, and quite different, experiences. I was taking a little British tour, so-called because it was on a small and modest scale, and alighting from the railway carriage at the picturesque village of Rowsley, in Derbyshire, inquired for prices at the "Peacock," a picturesque, ivy-covered inn with some handsome antique furniture and a historic reputation. For these advantages I should have to pay a sum by the day equal to the rate at a first-class hotel in the heart of London.

So I went in search of "lodgings with attendance," or "board residence," and soon found a two-storied cottage at which the same were offered. A withered beldame escorted me upstairs to her "bed sitting-room." She turned to me, saying: "You are an American, I see." Then, with a tremulous pride in the falsetto tones of her voice, pointing to the article of furniture with her aged arm, she uttered the following words:

"On that bed your own poet—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow—slept when he visited Rowsley."

Her keen, piercing black orbs watched me intently for the effect of this interesting announcement. But I was dumb. I regarded the couch itself, then my eye swept round the room, taking in the rest of the furnishings. The old crone nodded in a satisfied way, no doubt construing the silence on my part as one of awe and heartfelt emotion. And, in fact, it is true that my feelings were somewhat intense. Chief among them was a profound pity for the poet.

Finally I recovered sufficiently to state that the veneration I felt for one of the world's immortals would not permit me to profane the pillow forever sacred to his laureate head. The crone regarded me with some displeasure, strongly tinctured with suspicion as to my sincerity, but contented herself with remarking that I would not find anything better than what she offered me (and what, presumably, had satisfied a world-famous poet) in the village.

But I went further, nevertheless, and my search was presently rewarded by an exquisitely clean and cosy room looking out on the everlasting hills. My landlady, Mrs. Ann Eliot, agreed to furnish me with "anythink" I liked, subject of course, to certain limitations, cooking and attendance included in the price of the room, which was ten shillings a week. Honest Mrs. Ann Elliot! You kept your word, and never have I had better care and attention—never do I expect to have again—than that I experienced under your hospitable roof. Long shall I remember your good country milk, recommended to be taken warm, as a soothing potion, before retiring, the stewed apples and pears from your own trees, and the delicious tea cake, warm from your oven, sent up as a surprise with my simple repast, and not deemed worthy of being charged in the bill!

On arriving in the Lake district, too late in the day to search for a similar shelter, I put up for the night at the "George Hotel," in the town of Penrith. This caravansary is true to the traditions attaching to its name, and believes in taxing Americans to the point of armed resistance. Although it held not another guest, that I could discover, the season being well over, and vehicles no longer running to the Lakes, still there was not a solitary single room for a solitary, single lady to be had.

The condition of bachelor-maidenhood, minus a husband to pay one's bills, might be considered rather hard lines. But to be obliged to pay the double rate, for this non-existent spouse as well as oneself, is harder lines still. And, to pile on the agony, as though in mocking derision of my state of single-blessedness, I was given only a single blanket, and awoke stiff with cold in the middle of the night, at this time of the year of decidedly low temperature.

Neither was I consoled, next morning, for my sufferings of the night, when in dressing, I stubbed my toes against the uneven flooring, every time I crossed the room, had to lift a water pitcher heavy enough to break my back in order to perform my ablutions, and was furnished, in the cause of the same, a small milk jug half-filled with lukewarm liquid. In perusing the elegantly-gotten-up illustrated booklet lying on the center table, in which the "moderate prices" and "luxurious comforts" of the hostelry were referred to, it struck me that there was a typographical error here, and these adjectives had gotten themselves somewhat mixed, for surely moderate comforts and luxurious prices would hit the mark, according to my experience.

Next day I walked a block down the street, and established myself at the cosy "Waverly Inn," whose homelike atmosphere, old-fashioned furnishings, with the great open fireplace, shining pewter, and kettle on the hob, so fascinated me that I remained for three times the projected length of my stay.

At Edinburgh, I went to a recommended "temperance hotel," where, on my objecting to the rates, the landlady, a coarse-looking creature tricked out in bogus jewelry like a circus rider, regarded me from head to foot with condescending compassion, as she assured me that I should not be able to find a room, in a respectable place, for less.

I assured her that I felt myself quite capable of judging as to these matters, without her kind assistance, and after inquiring at the corner bakery, received three addresses of families in the neighborhood who took in lady lodgers for a few days, the first one of which I selected, after having inspected it.

I found myself in the midst of a quaint Scotch household, consisting of an aged lady and her three bachelor-maiden daughters, most respectable and interesting folk. The mother had been in her youth a patient of the great Dr. Simpson, discoverer of chloroform, whose statue stands in the public square near by, and entertained me with many stories of this genius and benefactor of his kind.

Hotels in Ireland have the reputation of being the highest-priced on the continent of Europe. One countrywoman I met, who was not, however, a Bohemian, told me I should have to pay $6 a day for moderate comforts of life while sojourning in Erin's isle. What constitutes "comfort" is, of course, a widely-varying quantity, but I resolved in my own mind, on the spot, that I at any rate, should come off with something under this amount.

In Dublin I put up at one of the more modest establishments, similar to the "temperance hotels" of London, at about the same cost. At the Lake of Killarney, I found a private boarding-house, whose overflow was lodged in neighboring homes, where plain, abundant and substantial fare, consisting of the British breakfast and tea, and a meat dinner, was provided for the sum of $1.25 a day, including room.

Much has been written anent life in the student quarter of Paris, yet I fancy no two persons have the same experience in that paradise of good Americans. On taking possession of my snug suite, up three flights in an apartment house on the Boulevard St. Germain, I was informed by my landlady, who wore a smile of infantile sweetness and innocence, that if I did not pay the concierge her customary fee in advance, she would return my letters to the postman!

A window occupied the entire front wall of my room, and was balanced at right angles by a small fireplace, with narrow chimney flue, in which was a toy grate, consisting of a tiny basket of iron work. That fire had to be watched and tended like a new-born infant, after having been constructed with the same painstaking care that nature uses in creating her human product.

Firstly, kindling wood of a particular kind, shape, and quality is placed in the bottom of the basket, being laid regularly in a geometrical pattern; next a layer of charcoal sticks, like Ghirardelli's Chocolate, are placed over them, something in the way a child builds a block house. Then small logs of wood, to fit the grate, must be added, along with a quantity of tiny pieces of coke to encourage the rest.

Still your fire is not yet laid, far less really going. I tried about a dozen varieties of coal, all of which were equally bad, before I was obliged to resort to "boulets" and "briquettes," which are so peculiarly French in their characteristics as to merit a word of description. Their pretty names are so suggestive of cosy warmth and comfort! The former are pretty, egg-shaped things, which when piled up in the grate, allow the flame produced by the other fuel to pass up through the interstices formed by the juxtaposition of their rounded surfaces until the said flame is used up, contributing nothing whatsoever to the blaze. The briquettes are shaped like bricks, with holes about two inches apart punched through them. After long and sad experience I can testify to the fact that the holes burn very well indeed. The rest of the briquette lies there and slowly melts away, along with the "dix centimes" you paid for it.

On the whole, the result—which consists of the raising of the temperature of the apartment two or three degrees by the thermometer after several hours of effort, seems scarcely worth that and the expensiveness of the process. When that time had expired, I usually gave it up as a bad job, and took to my bed to keep from freezing stiff.

In these days the "Grand Bouillon" restaurant on the Boulevard was my favorite resort, not so much for food as for warmth, even more a necessity of life than the former in a climate consisting of damp fog five degrees below zero, most of the time. Here the first item on the bill of fare amply justifies the title of the establishment, and is followed by three courses of meat, fish, vegetables and sweets, according to choice, all excellently cooked and appetizingly served, for the sum of 30 cents. This includes the 10 per cent. fee to the waiter, a pint bottle of the "vin ordinaire," and the finest of French bread in unlimited quantities.

Hither come representatives of all classes of people, students of different nationalities, "professionals" (i.e., actors from the theaters), higher-class working people, family parties, and professors from the Sorbonne. It is an excellent place to study the life of the Quarter. Sometimes the young men students are accompanied by women of rather loud manners and behavior, and no doubt shady character. But these proceed to an upstairs apartment reserved for their ilk, the rest of us being well content to remain below, where, though a "lady alone," I was never subjected to the smallest rudeness from any of the numerous males present.

In the French provinces prices are as high as in Paris, and the dirtiness of some of these inns and hotels, even in famous resorts, justifies the phrase "dear and nasty." To this class belongs the "Hermitage de Jean Jacques Rousseau," situated at Montmorency, in the chestnut wood where that philosopher had his abiding place. Fortunately, however, for his peace of mind and stomach, the hostelry was not in existence at the time of his sojourn. I had paid my bill, including a high charge for service, not stipulated for, but notwithstanding this fact, the young man who carried my things to the station demanded double fee therefor. I refused to pay it, whereupon he turned and walked off, with my grip in one hand and my bike in the other—back to the classical retreat.

I thereupon consulted the station master, secured two small boys willing to earn a few sous, returned to the "Hermitage," and, though my French was scarcely yet in "parley-ing" condition, succeeded, by means of a threat to complain to the "commissaire," in influencing the amiable proprietor to hand over my property, with which myself and the small boys marched off in triumph.

In the course of my tour, I was frequently struck by the difference between a French and a German litre of milk. The metric system as applied to this article of food seems to be a most elastic one. At the "Hermitage" the contents of a pint bowl were supposed to represent the quantity. At the next inn I visited, the sign of "The Golden Sun" seemed to have a special influence on the lacteal fluid, causing it to rise along with that glorious orb, to twice the quantity. For subsequently it dwindled again to half, and before the end of my tour was reached, it filled only a large-sized tumbler. This highly original method of changing the price of an article is surely made in France.

In the historic town of Beauvais, sacred to the tapestries, to the cathedral and to Jeanne Hachette, I patronized a decent-appearing restaurant on the principal street. The interior did not prove inviting, but I was weary and hungry, and ordered beefsteak and potatoes, with cheese for dessert. The beefsteak was not bad, but in asking for a clean knife with which to cut my cheese, I was evidently "the limit" of the waiter's endurance, for in response to my unreasonable demand, he seized the cutting implement from my plate, gave it a brisk wipe on his filthy apron, and presented it to me again with a polite bow.

Everywhere on the continent one gets the impression that drinking is the main business of life, and that eating is of secondary importance. At all of the restaurants you are first asked what you will have to drink, and the American woman experiences an uneasy feeling that she is where she ought not to be. The sight of others of her own sex native to the country somewhat reassures her. For be it known, the "womanly woman" of Europe, in contradistinction to the bold, emancipated female (so considered by Europeans) of the United States, always drinks wine or beer, even stronger beverages, and very frequently smokes cigarettes. In Germany it is beer, in France and Italy wines, and hence with the entire population manifesting an antipathy to water which would lead the man from Mars to infer that it was afflicted with hydrophobia, it is natural enough that the caterers to the community should serve it only as an accommodation, and that every hotel, inn and restaurant should be a tavern or bar room.

A good word must be spoken for the hotels of Germany, however, which are the cleanest, most comfortable and reasonable in price of any I found abroad. The "simple breakfast," included in the price of the lodging at from 50 to 75 cents, consisting of coffee and rolls, superfine, and the other meals, which you may order à la carte, of equal excellence. In the villages, at the small inns, you may get off still cheaper, and always be sure of good bread, milk, butter, and cheese, if nothing more.

Existence in Paris is a continual struggle between and appetite. Choice prints at two sous apiece elbow apple fritters on the next stall, cooked on the spot over a charcoal flame, and served on a paper plate. French finesse is admirably illustrated in the diminutive size of the cakélets and tartlets, which, when I first saw them, I imagined were intended to grace a doll's tea party. But the bakery-woman convinced me of my error, explaining that they were mere "bouches." I assured her that I, for one, would be willing to confess my American mouth of greater capacity. "Ah, Madame," I replied, "they may be adapted to the mouth of the Francaises, but the American mouth is of greater capacity."

French restaurateurs and hotel-keepers are given to all kinds of sleight-of-hand performances, like the heathen Chinee—to "ways that are dark, and tricks that are vain." A notable one is the "candle trick," whereby, if you light one of the pair placed upon your dressing-bureau for a single moment, you are debited on the bill with one franc, the price of both candles, with a profit of about 300 per cent. Angry Americans sometimes retaliate by confiscating the candles—not in the game—to the rage of the hotel proprietors. The napkin trick is practised at the chop houses, and its modus operandi is to supply you with one of these articles unsolicited, and then charge it in the bill at 25 per cent. of the entire cost of the meal.

The best "snap" I enjoyed as a Bohemian sojourner abroad was at that resort of the swells and plutocrats of the world—the Riviera. At Bordighera, frequented by a quieter and superior class of the above, with the aid of a friend familiar with the place, I secured a lodging in the private home of an Italian family of the middle class, for the sum of $2 a week. This included a large, brick-floored room, flooded with sunlight from the blue Mediterranean, on which it looked, further warmed, when desired, by an open grate fire of wood, and furnished with a big writing desk, and the most comfortable bed I had slept on in Europe. All fees for service were refused by my landlady, who waited on me herself, acting as though it were a pleasure and an honor to her to do so, and who furnished me with a portion of the mid-day meal of maccaroni, chestnuts stewed in milk, or tiny fish cooked with wine, for a sum so trivial that I hesitate to set it down here, lest I should not be believed.

In Florence I was almost equally fortunate, finding another charming Italian family with whom I took full board, the most liberal and varied, as well as the best cooked, in my entire experience, for the sum, room included, of 60 cents a day. SELINA SOLOMONS.

MISADVENTURES OF KINGS.

AMUSING EXPERIENCES OF VARIOUS MONARCHS WHEN THEY WERE NOT RECOGNIZED.

[Tit-Bits:] King Alfonso's latest amusing experience, when he had to produce a coin bearing his own presentment before he could satisfy a group of wayside washerwomen at Arqueta that he was really the King, reminds us of several similar stories in which a monarch has had like difficulty in proving his identity to his own subjects.

A story which was widely circulated at the time of the present Czar's coronation was to this effect. After the terrible catastrophe which cost so many lives of spectators on the Hodinskoye Field, His Majesty paid a visit to the hospital to which the injured had been carried. Standing by the bedside of a poor old woman who had been badly crushed in the mélée, Nicholas asked, "Why were you in the crowd?" "Why, to see the Emperor, of course," was the not very gracious answer. "Then why don't you look at him now?" continued His Majesty; "he is standing by your side." "Don't tell me lies," retorted the woman, indignantly; "as if I didn't know Emperors are not made like that!"

When the King of Italy a short time ago called for refreshment at a wayside inn and tendered a coin in payment, the lady of the hostlery looked first at the coin and then at her guest. "Why," she exclaimed, "you are like the King." "So some people say," smilingly answered His Majesty. "But," the woman went on, after another comparison with the head on the coin, "you are not nearly as good-looking." "No," said Victor Emmanuel; "the King is a much better-looking man than I am."

Even more amusing is the story told of the King of the Belgians, which although by no means unfamiliar, is good enough to repeat. One day, when Leopold II was walking with a Scottish friend, he stopped at a farmhouse for a glass of milk. As he was chatting with his companion in English the woman turned to her husband and said, "I wonder how much the long-nosed Englishman will pay?" "Permit me," said the King, as he handed her a coin, "to present you with a portrait of the long-nosed Englishman."

In Paris, where Leopold is known even to the street gamins, such a mistake would have been less likely than in his own kingdom. Not long ago, it is said, a Paris gamin, seeing the tall figure of the King approaching, ran up to him and, without the slightest fear, greeted him with "Ohé, Leopold!"—a greeting which so delighted the unconventional monarch that he presented the lad with a five-franc piece.

When the King of Sweden, a few years since, visited a small town near Gothenburg, he joined the crowd that thronged the streets to catch a glimpse of himself. When the news passed round that the King was coming a shrill female voice at his back exclaimed, "Let me get in front! Do you think I've walked all this way and spoilt my best black dress for nothing? I want to see what the King is like; let me see where the King is." Turning round with a smile Oscar said to the push-inquiring dame, "Here is the King;" whereupon, after looking him up and down, she remarked, "Well, I'm glad to have seen you at last. I've been waiting for hours, and just look at the hole they have made in my best black dress. I was not going to have that spoiled and then see nothing at all."

More startling was an adventure of the German Emperor when, at a late hour one evening, he decided to pay a surprise visit to his uncle at Kiel. On ringing, the door was opened by a maid, who, at sight of the Emperor, promptly slammed it in his august face, shouting out, "Himmel! it is the Kaiser!"

On another occasion when the Emperor was returning to Potsdam, dusty and weary, after a long tramp, he asked a peasant-woman, who was driving a farm-cart, to give him a "lift.". The woman eyed the travel-stained stranger suspiciously, and not liking his looks whipped up her horse and drove away as fast as she could. A hundred yards farther away on she met a soldier, who stopped her and asked, "What did the Emperor want of you?" "I don't understand," she replied; and when the man explained who the wayfarer was to whom she had refused a seat in her wagon she was so alarmed that she lashed her horse into a gallop and quickly vanished from sight.

One more story—this time of the King of Wurtemberg, who, during a recent motor tour round his kingdom, called at a small wayside inn for a glass of beer. He paid the waitress for the beer, and added a mark as a tip. "Well," exclaimed the young woman as she looked first at the coin and then at the generous donor, "one can see that you are not a Wurtemberger anyhow."

The Cathcart Family.

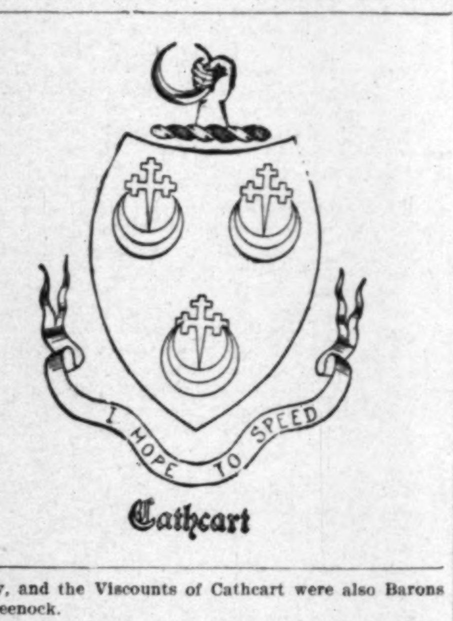
AN ANCIENT SCOTTISH NAME OF PROMINENCE.

By a Special Contributor.

A RIVER running through a narrow channel is the meaning of Cathcart, or the origin of the name. In Scotland there is a parish named Cathcart, a few miles south of Glasgow. It contains the town of Old Cathcart and New Cathcar. There is a river here called Cart, an old Gaelic word. The river happens to be narrow at this point, or a strait, therefore called caeth, another Gaelic word, meaning narrow. The Cart, running in a narrow channel, became Caethcart, or Cathcart, which in turn gave its name to the town, and in due course of ime someone assumed it as a patronymic. The river, it may be mentioned, has branches, one called the White Cart, the other the Black Cart. The town now called Gartside was originally Cartside.

The Cathcart family is one of the most ancient in Scotland, and Kethcart and De Kethcart are other forms of the orthography, possibly the original spelling.

Rinadlus de Kethcart is a name we find in the records of the town of Paisley, Renfrewshire, 1178. At Greennock, another town of this shire, was one seat of the family, and the Viscounts of Cathcart were also Barons of Greenock.



Cathcart

The family name has been of importance in Ayrshire, and the lords of Alloway are of Cathcart blood. Knockdolian Castle, of this shire, is a seat of the Cathcart family, and to this branch belongs the coat of arms reproduced.

One of the Pilgrim Fathers was the Rev. Robert Cathcart, born in Ireland. He settled in Delaware, where he married Mary Latimer.

The progenitor of the New England branch of the family was Gershom Cathcart, who lived in Bristol, Mass., where he married Mary Coleman.

Sir William Shaw Cathcart was one of the most distinguished soldiers of the Revolution, although on the wrong side of the firing line, from our point of view. He was the tenth Baron Cathcart in the peerage of Scotland and the first Viscount and Earl Cathcart in the peerage of the United Kingdom, and son of the ninth Baron Cathcart and his wife, Jeanne, daughter of Admiral Lord Hamilton. Sir William's wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Lieut.-Gov. Elliott of New York.

Sir William was aide to Maj. Sir Thomas Wilson, commanding at Boston, and his gallant conduct won him fame and promotion. At the famous ball, or "mischianza," given in honor of Sir William Howe, in Philadelphia, May, 1778, Cathcart led one section of the "knights."

Returning to England, he won further honors, his services being of the greatest importance in the overthrow of Napoleon. His wife was lady-in-waiting to the Queen of George III, and he was appointed "gold stick."

His son, Sir George Cathcart, was aide to Wellington at Waterloo, and afterward a famous general, to whom belongs the honor of ending the Kaffir war in 1853. He was killed in the Crimea, and buried on Cathcart Hill. His "Commentaries" on the war in Russia and Germany are valuable contributions to literature.

Another author of the family was William Cathcart, born in Ireland, 1826. He came to Pennsylvania when a young man, and was prominent in the ministry and president of the American Baptist Historical Society.

The statesman of the family was Charles William Cathcart, Presidential elector on the Polk ticket and United States Senator.

We must not forget one of the patriots of the family. Of the forty-two ladies who took part in the Edenton, N. C., tea party, October 25, 1775, Margaret Cathcart was one, her name being third on the list. The State library has recently been presented with the book giving the names of these women, as published in a London paper of 1775. The gift came at an opportune time, for the D.A.R.'s were preparing to erect a tablet in the Hall of History commemorating this historic event with names of the signers.

As pictured by a London cartoonist, the "Edenton Tea Party" shows a number of women seated around a table, drawing up and signing a paper; under the table is an infant, and a small dog biting the baby's ear.

Aming the representatives of the family in the Revolution was William Cathcart, surgeon of the Fourth Continental Dragoons.

The arms reproduced is an ancient one, belonging to the earls of Cathcart. The creation of the Scottish barony dates from 1460.

It is azure, three cross-crosslets fitchee, issuing out of as many crescents argent.

Crest, a dexter hand couped above the wrist, and erect proper, grasping a crescent argent, as in the arms.

Motto: I Hope to Speed.

The arms granted 1703 to the Ayrshire branch of the family is quite similar. It has the crosses and the crescents, with the addition of a human heart. The crest is a hand holding a heart royally crowned.

Motto: By Faith We Are Saved.

The crosses and crescents denote crusader ancestors, and the hand is a pledge of faith, sincerity and justice.

The colors azure and argent denote the first loyalty, truth, and integrity; the second, peace, sincerity, and purity.

One branch of the family quarters the arms of Sir Reynold de Kathcart, who attended the Prince of Scotland to the Holy Land, time of Richard I, and also the coat of Sir William Wallace, to whom the Cathcarts were related by marriage. The supporters are two parrots. The supporters—which, by the way, belong only to the highest rank—of another arms, are dexter, a lion rampant, gules; sinister, a savage wreathed with laurel.

EMERSONIANISMS.

Happiness is a state of mind approaching temporary abberation.

Optimism is largely a matter of health and absence of headaches.

A woman may deceive a man, but she can never make a fool of him—he does that for himself.

Burn the sandle at both ends if you will, but painfully or peacefully pay the price, for it will be demanded of peasant, prince or potentate without distinction.

In every sincere and earnest man's heart God has placed a little niche where the poetic, the speculative and the legendary hold full sway. From out of this corner comes the dreams of our lives.

There is in every noble woman's heart a glint of the immortal, a spark of divinity, that, like a star of hope, is never seen in the broad daylight of prosperity, but it comes out in all its sparkling effulgence and luster in the dark hours of night's adversity.

A beautiful woman appeals to the artistic taste of a man, a witty woman appeals to his jovialty, a rich woman to his greed, and a good woman to his sincerity, but no one knows the proportions of the ingredients entering into the composite that appeals to a man's heart.

When it is all said and done, the only real happiness the world affords man is the constant companionship of a sweet and noble woman, clever and sensible, a compromise, not a comedy, one who understands life and accepts it with the salute of a princess and the shrug of a philosopher.—[Willis George Emerson in "The Builders."

WEED AND WASTE.

About their gardens to and fro
I see the busy people go,
Or in each private orchard plot
Seeking a fruit that cometh not.

In sunny light of hopeful morns
They seek to gather grapes of thorns,
And ask a nurture for their needs
From ragged unproductive weeds.

The weeds are fair in flower and shoot,
But only bear a spurious fruit;
And that which on the trees they find
Is tart of taste and harsh of rind.

There in the gardens they complain
It is too late to sow again—
The grief of laborings misplaced,
Of barren hours and seedtime's waste.

O blind in age and rash in youth,
Who have not learnt this common truth:
In earth or spirit, that alone
Is harvested which hath been sown.

A SUDDEN FLAME THAT WAS WELL WORTH THE CANDLE.

By a Special Contributor.

MR. FREDERICK WISHART RHODES came to breakfast on the last morning in May in the most excellent spirits and certainly without the slightest premonition of evil; nor had Alicia ever looked fairer, fresher, or more charming than when she entered the dining-room in Grosvenor Gardens a few minutes later and found her husband gazing down at her plate.

"A letter for me!" she exclaimed, coming to his side.

"Well," he answered, "you're not 'Miss' Alicia Wishart Rhodes, anyhow!"

"Don't you think," she suggested, examining the envelope, "it is a badly written 'Mrs.'?"

"Better open it," said Fred, and watching while she broke the seal, he observed Alicia's mantling color.

She read the short letter from the beginning to the end, then raising her eyes, slowly shook her head.

"I don't know a Mr. Eustace Mildmay!" she cried.

"What has he got to say for himself?" asked Fred.

"You may as well read it," she answered, passing the letter after a momentary hesitation. "But," she added, "it cannot be intended for me!"

Standing with his broad back to the empty fireplace, Fred fixed his pince nez, beginning in his turn to read the letter, and with every line the wrinkles grew more numerous on his forehead.

Number — Jermyn Street.

My Dear Miss Rhodes:

After those delightful meetings in Paris last week, I hope you will be neither surprised nor displeased to hear from me. In spite of the distressful circumstances, I had never spent such an excellent day. Immediately on my return to London, I set about the discovery of your address, adopting the simple expedient of consulting a directory, where I saw your father's name. May 1 have the pleasure of following this letter by an early visit? Fully intending to assume that silence gives consent, I remain, my dear Miss Rhodes,

Very sincerely yours,

Eustace Mildmay.

"Someone you met in Paris last week, then?" exclaimed Fred, endeavoring to speak in his calmest tones, although he could not prevent his lips from becoming thinner. "'Delightful meetings,' the fellow says!"

"I am sure," answered Alicia, "I cannot imagine what he means."

"Of course," suggested her husband, pushing the cat out of the way with his foot, "you spent all your time with your cousin Phillis."

Phillis Needham, a girl of twenty-one, had suggested a flying visit to Paris, and after some demur Fred had consented. Alicia insisted that her four years' seniority and her married state eminently qualified her as her cousin's chaperon, and being required to pay the expenses of the journey out of her pin money, she determined not to take her maid.

So Phillis was invited to sleep at Grosvenor Gardens on Monday night, and on the following morning she set forth with Mrs. Wishart Rhodes via Newhaven and Dieppe.

"Oh, well," answered Alicia, "naturally we didn't go about like the Siamese twins."

"Look here, Alicia," said Fred, with a valiant effort to keep his temper, "I'm hanged if I like this kind of thing!"

"Of course there is some absurd mistake," she returned.

Walking to his chair, Fred sat down with protesting heaviness, but after plying his knife and fork for a few moments, he suddenly laid them down.

"I wish to goodness you would tell me exactly what happened in Paris!" he exclaimed. "What on earth does the fellow mean by 'distressful circumstances'?"

"It is simply a case of mistaken identity——"

"Do you expect me to believe that Mildmay would write in this intimate way to a woman who hadn't encouraged him?" demanded Fred.

"Well," she said, "he has written, and obviously I gave him no encouragement at all."

"He must be some bounder you met at the hotel!"

"You forget that I have said I did not meet him anywhere."

"I suppose," persisted Fred, "there were some men to whom you spoke?"

"I talked to my neighbor at the table d'hote—I fancy he was a gunner."

"What was his name?"

"How should I know "

"There's not much doubt it was Mildmay," answered Fred. "You let yourself go too far, and he has taken advantage of you. Anyhow," he added, "you may safely leave him to me. I shall go to Jermyn street on my way to chambers."

A few yards from his door he hailed a hansom and directed the driver to Jermyn street, where he inquired for Mr. Mildmay.

"Captain Mildmay, sir," said the man who opened the door, and, after some hesitation, he invited Fred to walk upstairs. "What name shall I say?" he asked on reaching the first floor.

"Mr. Wishart Rhodes."

The next instant the servant announced him as he entered the room, where Mildmay was in the act of raising a cup of coffee to his lips, a tall, good-looking, fair-haired man of twenty-eight, wearing a brown shooting suit. Rising, he smiled at Fred in the most conciliatory manner as he twisted the ends of his mustache.

"You can probably guess the purpose of my visit," exclaimed Fred.

"I'm immensely pleased, anyhow——"

"You addressed a letter to my house——"

"Won't you sit down?" cried Eustace, shifting a chair.

"I shall be glad to hear what the devil you mean by it!" thundered Fred.

"Well, you see," was the answer, "I happened to be at the Gare Saint Lazare rather early one morning last week—it was Wednesday—when a young lady was trying to make herself understood by one of the officials. Recognizing a compatriot in distress, I ventured to offer my services——"

"Were those the—the distressful circumstances to which you referred?" demanded Fred.

"Her luggage," Eustace continued, "had been left behind at Dieppe the previous day, and she was naturally rather upset about it. I explained things to the official, and suggested the telephone, but, the wire being out of order, he sent a telegram, with the result that after hanging about for some time, I was able to ask Miss Rhodes to fetch her trunks at 2 o'clock."

"Well?" said Fred.

"When 2 o'clock struck, it chanced that I was at the Gare Saint Lazare again, you understand. But unfortunately the luggage hadn't turned up, and the railway man was afraid it wouldn't arrive until 7 o'clock the same evening."

"When, I presume," suggested Fred, with what was intended to be the most withering sarcasm, "you chanced to be there a third time?"

"Why, yes," answered Eustace, with a genial laugh, "and also the trunks."

"Did the lady who was so deeply indebted to you mention her name?" asked Fred.

"Not at all."

"Then how the deuce did you discover it?"

"Before she was allowed to take away her luggage she was asked to sign a book," Eustace explained. "I confess that I had sufficient curiosity to look over her shoulder. She wore a pair of light gray gloves, you know, and I fancy she found it rather awkward. Anyhow, she signed herself Alicia Wishart Rhodes. May I ask," he added, looking smilingly into Fred's morose face, "whether I have the pleasure of speaking to her brother?"

"No, sir," answered Fred with all the dignity he could assume, "you are speaking to her husband." Eustace's expression of profound disappointment by no means diminished his vexation.

"Upon my word," was the answer, "I had no idea she was married. She—she didn't give me that impression, you understand." Fred's forehead became more deeply wrinkled than ever. "I am sorry," Eustace continued, "that I ventured on what must now appear the imprudence of addressing your—your wife."

Assuming that at least he had taken efficient means to hinder him from addressing her again, Fred left the room without another word. Having no inclination to continue his way to the Temple until he had cleared the matter up with his wife, he took another hansom to Grosvenor Gardens, where he found Phillis Needham seated very close to Alicia's side on the drawing-room sofa.

Phillis was shorter than her cousin, and she possessed a pair of mischievous looking eyes and a great quantity of dark brown hair. She wore a light-colored frock with a short drab cape, and a straw hat with an enormous brim, on which was a profuse display of flowers.

"Now!" exclaimed Alicia, "to bring peace to the mind of a disturbed husband! All your troubles are ended, Fred! Please enlighten him, Phil," she added, and rising from the sofa, Phillis leaned slightly forward, with one hand resting on her hip, while she thrust the fingers of the other in between the buttons of her dress.

"May it please you, m'lud and gentlemen of the jury," she began, whereupon Fred blew out his cheeks and flung himself violently into the nearest chair.

"I have heard about your luggage, if that's what you are going to tell me," he interrupted.

"Why, of course," said Alicia, raising her eyebrows, "I wrote to you about it at the time."

"Omitting the fact that you availed yourself of the services of an interpreter!" cried Fred.

"But how ridiculous you are!" answered Alicia. "Don't you understand it was Phillis——"

"Phillis!" he muttered with obvious skepticism.

"Yes, m'lud," said Phillis.

"Very well, then," exclaimed Fred, unconsciously dropping into the forensic manner which she was burlesquing, "let me put one question."

"Certainly, m'lud. As many as your ludship pleases."

"If it was you who went to the station three times on Wednesday," he demanded, "how was it that you signed Alicia's name?"

"A few simple words of explanation will convince you, m'lud——"

"For heaven's sake drop this tomfoolery," cried Fred, half beside himself with wrath. "It's no joke to me, I can assure you!"

"Phillis promptly returned to her seat beside Alicia on the sofa.

"You remember," she explained, "that I slept here on the Monday night. Alicia suggested it would save bother if both trunks were labelled in her name, so that, when I went to inquire after them at the Gare Saint Lazare, naturally I said they belonged to Mrs. Wishart Rhodes. You know how stupidly particular those people always are," Phillis continued, "so when I was asked to sign the book I thought it would be best to put Alicia's name. Now, do you understand?" she demanded.

"Now, perhaps," said Fred, "you will tell me what Capt. Mildmay is like!"

"I shall certainly do nothing of the kind," answered Phillis, holding back her head as she rose from the sofa.

"And I will ask you," he persisted, turning to his wife, "why you allowed Phillis to go to the station alone instead of looking after the luggage yourself?"

"My head was dreadful on Wednesday," said Alicia.

"You don't usually have the headache!"

"I don't usually cross that horrid channel," she retorted, while Phillis walked toward the door.

"I shall expect the most abject apology as soon as you recover your senses, Fred," she exclaimed as she quitted the room, afraid that she was leaving a rather miserable couple behind her.

It happened that on the following Tuesday, Phillis went to a dance at Lady Grant's in Park Lane, and she had not been many minutes in the room when she saw Capt. Mildmay in the act of shaking hands with the hostess. Perceiving that he recognized her, with an expression of embarrassment, she marvelled (until she realized the mistake under which of course he labored) that he made no attempt to approach, and presently, meeting his eyes, she flashed a message which brought him to her side.

"I suppose," he said, standing in front of her chair, "I need not ask Lady Grant for a formal introduction."

"Oh dear!" she retorted, "you have made the most terrible muddle."

"I can only hope," he muttered, "that I have not been the cause of any very serious—serious inconvenience."

"Not to me, if course," said Phillis, "though you made things a little unpleasant for Alicia."

"But," Eustace demanded, "aren't—aren't you Alicia?"

"Certainly not," said Phillis, and he lost no time in taking the empty seat by her side.

"Then may I ask who you are?"

"My name," she answered, glancing down at her fan, "is Phillis Needham."

"You don't live at Grosvenor Gardens?" he persisted.

"At Number —— Montagu Square," she said, and Eustace seemed to be making a mental note of the address.

"Still," he suggested, "you signed yourself 'Alicia Wishart Rhodes!'"

"You may have noticed how I fumbled over it," she explained. "I am not used to committing forgery. Do you remember what a fuss that man made about giving up the trunks, and if I had put my own name, while Alicia's was on the labels, I don't suppose I should have got them at all."

"Well," said Eustace, "it's the most excellent news I have heard for a long time."

"Excellent!" cried Phillis, facing him reproachfully.

"Nothing could conceivably be better!"

"Than that this wretched thing should come between Alicia and her husband?"

"That nothing should come between you and me," said Eustace, bending toward Phillis.

A warm color tinged her cheeks, and she opened and shut her fan several times.

"I feel very unhappy about it," she murmured.

"Still, the fact remains that you are not a married woman," urged Eustace. She looked up with a brilliant smile."

"It does seem a matter for rejoicing in the face of my recent object lesson," she cried.

"But all husbands are not jealous."

"I wish you could tell me how to convince this one," she said with a sigh.

"You understand," Eustace explained, "that until half an hour ago I believed that you were Mrs. Rhodes—"

"A very absurd idea!"

"But now I have the blessed information that you are not, I can go to Rhodes and assure him that I have never even seen his wife."

"It will be better to go to his chambers," said Phillis. "Number——"

"Please don't tell me the address," he exclaimed.

"Of course," she retorted, "you are clever at consulting the directory."

"I thought of consulting you tomorrow," he said. "To tell you the truth, I have the most wretched memory. Besides, there's a time for everything, and this is pre-eminently the time for dancing."

She laughed with perfect contentment as she put a hand on his arm, and assuredly the ball was not the least enjoyable of that season. It really seemed needless to remind herself that the present was only the second day she had met Eustace, who made his way to Montagu Square the following afternoon, when he was presented to Mrs. Needham. On saying good-by he hinted at his impending visit to Fred at Dryden Court, so that, in her ignorance of the tragic circumstances at Grosvenor Gardens, Mrs. Needham may have believed that Mildmay was a friend of the Rhodes family.

Certainly Fred did not receive him in a very friendly manner at 11:30 the following morning, when Eustace found him on the point of going into court.

"I feel that I ought to tell you," said Eustace, "that there has been a curious mistake from first to last. As a matter of fact, I have never yet had the pleasure even of seeing Mrs. Wishart Rhodes."

"I presume that you have seen Miss Needham," suggested Fred in a significant and disagreeable tone.

"Why, yes——"

"Since your return from Paris no doubt?"

"Both yesterday and the day before."

"Ha!" cried Fred, and with that he opened the door as a hint for Eustace to depart. The latter walked along the Strand in a reflective mood to his club, where he lunched and killed time until he thought he might turn his steps toward Montagu Square, where he rejoiced to learn that Mrs. Needham was not at home.

"Miss Phillis Needham?" he suggested, and a few minutes later he was giving her an account of his visit to Dryden Court.

"Then Fred refused to accept your explanation?" she answered indignantly.

"No doubt," said Eustace, "he imagines we are acting in collusion."

"Alicia was here this morning," returned Phillis; "she looked quite miserable. Oh! what a pity you wrote that letter."

"A pity I sent it to the wrong address."

"Oh, of course Alicia is really absurdly fond of him," said Phillis. "She cried about it this morning. I wish you could suggest something!"

"If you promise absolution beforehand."

"I really think I would promise almost anything for the sake of peace," she answered rather recklessly.

"I warn you that my scheme may appear—well, you may think it a little out of the way."

"Oh, well," she said, "exceptional cases require exceptional remedies."

"Just my idea," answered Eustace, and rising, he stood beside her chair, his right hand resting on its back. "Now," he continued, "the point is, that Rhodes entertains the ridiculous delusion that I have fallen in love with his wife."

Phillis leaned back, glancing into his face; her hair brushing his hand.

"Love—should you call it?" she murmured.

"Yes," he said, bending slightly, "I should certainly call it love."

"Love at first sight, then?"

"You don't believe in that kind of thing?"

"Do you?" she asked.

"I didn't until I learned by experience," said Eustace, bending lower. "But anyhow," he added, "Rhodes has the delusion that I am in love with his wife——"

"It would be immensely difficult to convince him you are not."

"Suppose that I were in a position to prove I loved someone else!" he suggested.

"But how?" demanded Phillis, raising her eyebrows with an expression of perplexity.

"By asking her to marry me."

"I am afraid," she returned, "that the flame would be scarcely worth the candle!"

"It might savor of sentimentality if I said it was the light of my life," exclaimed Eustace.

"You see it has been burning such a very little while," she faltered.

"Still it is a kind of radium," he urged. "And, upon my soul, I don't believe it will ever go out."

Phillis slowly shook her head.

"You wouldn't easily convince—convince Fred of that," she said.

"At the present moment my only object is to convince you."

"And you have seen me precisely four times!"

"More than that," he insisted.

"Once in Paris——"

"That day counts for three," said Eustace.

"Only six times," murmured Phillis, with the faintest of sighs.

"It seems more," he suggested.

"I suppose that is because so many things have happened."

"Why, of course, the evidence would be as irresistible as yourself."

Phillis rose abruptly from her chair.

But it was quite half an hour later when they left [illegible] Square together. C. N. P.

Several of the crowd knocked at the door, and one of the chambermaids demanded in a loud voice that it should be opened at once. The clerk came from the office and demanded admittance in the name of the law; after some little delay the door was opened, and a woman stood in the opening and asked what was wanted.

Heavenly Twins.

WITH A THEOLOGICAL DISSERTATION ON A DEAD MOUSE.

From the London Mail.

"AUNT BETTY, isn't it time for tea? Me and Bil thinks it must be."

I was half asleep in a hammock on the lawn, but I defy any one to sleep with Tommy and Little Billee in her immediate neighborhood. I woke up.

"Yes, I think it must be," I said, hastily. "Tommy, don't swing the hammock. What have you and Bil been doing?"

"Watering the flowers," he said, with conscious pride in his tones.

I raised myself on an elbow to see him better. "Heavens, child! You're dripping wet! Go to Marie at once and get changed. Haven't you been told not to touch the flowers? And in this blazing sun! What have you been watering?"

"The g'raniums and the fuchers," he answered, aggrievedly. "I never touched 'em, Aunt Betty. And you know you was saying you didn't want to have to do 'em yourself, 'cos Blake's ill."

His big gray eyes were so reproachful that of course I gave in.

"You darling!" I said. "But it was naughty all the same, Tommy. I expect you've spoiled grandpapa's geraniums. And where's Billee?"

"Bil——," he said, hesitatingly. "Bil's round there," swinging his arms heavenward.

"Go and call her," I ordered with fresh qualms.

"She's—well, the twoof is she's—rather soiled, Aunt Betty," he said, deprecatingly.

I recognized the quotation. Tommy has taken a violent liking for cook, and that is her delicate way of describing anything dirty.

"Not worse than you, surely?" I cried, slipping out of the hammock in a hurry. "What has she done?"

"You see," he explained, trotting beside me as I fled in search of his sister, "she got rather in the way and the water went over her, and she tummelled into a bed."

I turned a hedge at the moment and came full upon Little Billee, minus her hat, seated in the middle of the croquet lawn in the blazing sun, contentedly crooning over a dead mouse in her lap, her fair curls clinging damp and dirty round her baby face, thickly plastered with fast-drying mud.

"You little sweep!" I cried. "Get up at once, Bil, and you and Tommy both go to Marie and be washed and dried. Throw that mouse away, Bil. Ugh! Where did you get it?"

"Oh, my mouf!—my dear mouf!" cried Bil, as I seized her gingerly and set her on her fat, bare feet. "Don't be cruel to it, Aunt Betty. 'Tis aseep."

"It is dead, darling—horrid! Let it alone."

But Billee broke into a wail. "'Tisn't dead. What's dead? It 'poke to me, Aunt Betty. It faid, 'Week, week.' Oh, my mouf!"

You can't argue with a baby too wet to be hugged and comforted, so I compromised.

"See," said I, "put it here, in this little hole under the rose tree. Mice love little holes. Now, come along, Bil, and be dried."

I hurried them away, both protesting that the mouse wasn't dead; but when they came back a few minutes later, once more clean and dry, they had apparently talked the matter over with their French nurse, and Tommy, at all events, was prepared to admit that it might be. Billee, I could see, clung to the hope that it might again say "Week, week," and Tommy watched her rather anxiously as they sat decorously eating bread and jam. She had a good deal of character—not to say obstinacy—and Tommy has a wholesome respect for the strength of her convictions when once they are formed.

"What does 'dead' mean, Aunt Betty?" he asked.

"Oh, it means that you don't breathe, or open your eyes, or walk about," I tried to explain.

"There, Bil!" he cried; "that's what Marie said, too. And I told you that mouse didn't do any of those things. It just layed on your lap and be-ed."

"Now, children," I said, when they had finished tea, "you are not to go off this lawn, and you are not to touch the flowers, and you are not to touch the water, and——"

"All right, Aunt Betty, we'll be all right," said Tommy, reassuringly. "We've got a lovely game."

Rather suspiciously I set myself to watch the game. First Tommy brought out a small cardboard box, in which he proposed to deposit the mouse; but Billee saw to that—she did it herself, with much murmured consolation addressed to the dear departed. Then, to my horror, Tommy produced from his pockets two stumpy candle ends and a box of matches. At this point I swooped upon him and seized the matches.

"But, Aunt Betty," he remonstrated, "I only wants to light the candle. I won't burn myself. You can't have a funeral without candles, you know—Marie says you can't."

"Where did you get them, Tommy? Surely Marie didn't give them to you?"

"Tooked 'em out of Susan's cupboard," he said, cheerfully. "Marie wouldn't give me none, and I couldn't find hers. What are we to do now? Tell you what, Bil, we'll just purtend—the candles is lighted now—see?"

Bil is quite his equal at pretending, and presently they were marching in solemn procession—Bil carrying the box and Tommy the candle ends—round the lawn, both chanting the most appallingly dismal dirge, that would make any Gregorian I ever heard sound like a joke. When they were tired of this they put the coffin back in the hole under the rose tree, not burying it, however, because, as Tommy observed, they would have another funeral tomorrow. Then he came over to me, leaving the chief mourner to sit beside the corpse, and describe to it in her own language the splendors that awaited it next day.

Tommy appeared to have become thoughtful, and I trembled, for his questions at such times would floor Greek philosophers and Roman theologians combined.

"Aunt Betty," he said, dreamily, "what's the next thing when people is dead?"

"What do you mean, Tommy?" I asked, weakly trying to stave off discussion.

"There always is a next thing," he argued. "When you goes to bed, you gets up, and when you've had your breakfast you play or you does your lessons. What's the next thing to being dead?"

"I don't know, Tommy."

"That's what father says," he sighed. "Why don't you and him know? I wants you to know badly."

"Nobody knows until they go and find out, and then they don't come back to tell us," said I.

"Some people knows," he answered. "Marie does."

"Well, what does Marie say?"

"She says they go to a place where they're sorry for the naughty things they've done, and when they've been sorry enough they goes to a lovely place with music and flowers and sun—a bigger sun than what ours is—and lots of nice people. And she says," he added triumphantly, "I'll always be able to do just what I like, 'cos none of the things I do'll be naughty."

It was like Tommy to twist his nurse's moral so conveniently to himself.

"I can't think," he repeated, "why you and father don't know about it, too. I likes big people to know about things; it's so tiresome when they says 'don't know' when you asks."

THE GIRAFFE WHO WAS FOOLISH.

A little pigeon was sitting quite comfortable in its little nest on the top of a tree in an African forest, when it suddenly became aware that it was being gazed at by a pair of strange eyes set in a strange face in front of a strange head.

"My word!" said the pigeon, "that's the head of a camel. How on earth did it get up as high as this?"

But, on looking over the side of its nest, the pigeon discovered that it was the head of a giraffe, and not of a camel. The mystery was explained.

"My word!" said the pigeon, "but you did give me a start, Jimmy Giraffe!"

James, the Giraffe, looked sad. He always does. "I'm in search of information," he remarked.

"What do you want to know," inquired the pigeon.

"I want to know," said the giraffe, "whether you are pigeon-toed?"

"Anything else?"

"Yes, please; and do you talk pigeon English?"

"What has that to do with you?" asked the pigeon.

"Nothing," admitted the Giraffe.

"Then why do you ask?" inquired the pigeon.

"That's why," said the giraffe.

"So I shan't tell you," announced the pigeon.

"I am much obliged to you for the information," said the giraffe, courteously, and he proceeded on his way, carrying his head carefully, in case he got a crick in the neck.

His next call was on Dr. Monk. He found him in his surgery, on a high branch.

"I've got a cold," he said.

"I'll give you a hot drink," said the monkey.

"Don't," pleaded the giraffe.

"Why?" asked Mr. Monk.

"A hot drink is no good to me," said the Giraffe. "It's always cold before it gets half-way down my neck."

"I say," remarked the monkey, changing the subject after drawing his fee, "but you are a swell!"

He had noticed that the giraffe was wearing one of those new soft collars that they stick safety pins in.

"You are a swell!"

"Ain't I?" chortled the giraffe. "I'm going courting."

"Oh!" cried the monkey. "Where?"

"At Leoville," said the giraffe. "I want to marry one of Mr. Lion's girls."

"Well, of all the impudence!"

"Not at all. I'm just going there now. I'll tell you all about it when I come back."

"You won't," said the monkey.

"Why?" inquired the giraffe.

"Because if you go to Leoville with that amount of cheek, you'll never come back to tell the tale."

But the giraffe went.

And Mr. Lion's family had neck cutlets for months.

REMEMBER YOUR FALSE TEETH.

The chambermaid of the Ocean House handed to the head clerk a little packet wrapped in brown paper.

"Another set of false teeth?" the man asked, as he put the packet in the safe.

"Yes, sir."

"That makes the second this week, doesn't it?"

"The third, sir."

The clerk turned to a guest.

"It's amazing, sir," he said, "how many of our male guests, in quitting the hotel, leave their false teeth behind them in a glass of water. In the outrush of departures at this season there are always some half-dozen sets of false teeth left behind.

"They are always men's. You can tell women's false teeth by their greater strength and solidity, and by their greater breadth across the jaw. Women never forget their false teeth, even in fires or shipwrecks."

A Clever Animal.

MAYOR TOM L. JOHNSON of Cleveland has been pluckily fighting a law-infringing street railway. He tore up some of the railway's tracks, an injuction was served against him, and then he in his turn secured another injunction.

"We are like the old lady and the dog, with our injunctions and mandamuses and what not," said Mayor Johnson the other day.

"There was, you know, an old lady who rented a furnished villa for the summer, and with the villa a large dog also went.

"In the sitting-room of the villa there was a very comfortable armchair. The old lady liked this chair better than any other in the house. She always made for it the first thing.

"But, alas, she nearly always found the chair occuuied by the large dog.

"Being afraid of the dog, she never dared bid it harshly to get out of the chair, as she feared that it might bite her; but instead she would go to the window and call 'Cats!'

"Then the dog would rush to the window and bark, and the old lady would slip into the vacant chair quietly.

"One day the dog entered the room and found the old lady in possession of the chair. He strolled over to the window, and, looking out, appeared very much excited, and set up a tremendous barking.

"The old lady rose and hastened to the window to see what was the matter, and the dog quietly climbed into the chair."

The Deacon Was a Corker.

O. H. KUHN, of the great banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., is a lover of fresh air, and when he crossed the Atlantic on La Provence during her recent record-breaking westward trip, he insisted on having all the public rooms well ventilated.

To a Frenchman who complained that there was too many open windows and portholes, Mr. Kuhn said:

"You remind me, sir, of an old minister who used to preach, though he loved fresh air, in a small, crowded, and ill-ventilated church.

"It happened that one Sunday, through some oversight or other, a window in the church was left partly open. The old minister actually began to preach in a fairly decent atmosphere. But in a minute or two an aged deacon arose, clumped solemnly to the window, and closed it.

"The minister paused in his sermon to say bitterly:

"'Deacon Jones, if I were preaching in a bottle, I verily believe you'd put the cork in.'"

An Evening Spoiled.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON, the noted novelist, was condemning the Mormons and their ways.

"Imagine," she said, "a Mormon wife and husband, on a cool autumnal evening, sitting by their cozy grate, she with her knitting, he with a book or newspaper.

"The wife looks up affectionately every little while, thinking that she was lucky to have secured such a considerate, home-loving chap for a mate, when suddenly the man rises and takes his hat and gloves.

"'Where are you going, dear?' the wife asks gently.

"'To see young Miss Smith.' the husband replies. 'I have an appointment with her. She is to give me her answer tonight.'"

He Fell Down.

A. H. BROCKIE, the well-known Philadelphia architect, designed the replica of Independence Hall that the city of Norfolk, Va., is to erect, and at the ceremony of ground breaking for this structure Mr. Brockie, apropos of speech-making, said:

"Whenever I listen to a poor speaker, I think of a physician whom I once heard wading through an after-dinner speech in Philadelphia.

"The physician did not wade very far through this speech. He said:

"'Unprepared as I am—in this impromptu—totally unprepared, I will—ah—extemporaneously, being unprepared—'

"Just then the physician's wife, who sat next to me, said to her husband in a low, encouraging voice:

"'Go on, Tom! You had it all by heart this afternoon. Go on.'"

A Poet's Wit.

THE late Charles Hodson, chief clerk of the American Embassy in London, served under eight American ministers—under Lowell, Welsh, Bayard, Hay, and so on down.

"Mr. Hodson," said a New York importer, "became an intimate friend of Lowell's during the poet's incumbency. He had all Lowell's books with autograph inscriptions, and he would narrate many stories of Lowell's quick wit.

"At a dinner I once heard him say that Lowell was travelling on a Mediterranean steamer when a shabby old musician took out a fiddle in the evening after dinner, and prepared to make a few pennies by playing a tune or two.

"A little American girl stood beside Mr. Lowell. Watching the musician, she said:

"'Why does he put a handkerchief under his chin like that when he plays? Is he afraid of soiling his collar?'

"'No, my dear,' said Mr. Lowell. 'He is afraid of soiling his violin.'"

No Soul for Beauty.

THE Rev. L. E. Hawk, of Sebring, O., who is the Prohibition candidate for Congress, preaches very powerful and graceful sermons.

In a recent sermon Mr. Hawk said that the average woman had a higher sense of beauty than the average man, and he clinched with an anecdote this statement:

"An American girl visited some English relatives in Devonshire, and one moonlit evening, as she was walking with a young man, her cousin, down a lovely lane, a nightingale from the thicket began its passionate song.

"So clear was the moonlight that the brown bird was quite visible, poised on a branch, with head thrown back, and pulsating breast.

"The young girl listened, enraptured. Then she creid:

"'A nightingale! Oh, I have so long wished to have one.'

"'Cousin,' said the young man, whipping a pistol from his pocket, 'in two seconds the bird shall be yours.'"

The Accommodating Thief.

JUDGE LANDIS, of the United States District Court, who recently decided that the Zion City funds belonged to the Zionists and not to Dowie himself, told at a dinner in Chicago a good story about a New York detective.

"This detective," he said, "came to Chicago to trace out a crime that the Chicago police had had trouble with. He thought he would succeed easily, but as a matter of fact he failed, though his failure has nothing to do with my story.

"My story concerns the boarding-house that the detective put up at. As he came toward the boarding-house one evening, worn out with a hard and fruitless day's work hunting clues, he saw a man emerge from the place cautiously, with a great bundle of coats, overcoats and trousers on his back.

"This man was a thief, though the detective did not know it. Still he suspected something, and he said:

"'What have you there?'

"'Clothes to be pressed, sir,' the thief answered. 'I'm from the tailor's on the next block.'

"'Ah, I see,' said the detective. 'Take my overcoat, too.'

"'Certainly, sir,' said the accommodating thief, and he took it and hurried off."

Mr. Vanderbilt's Banter.

"ON the Alfred G. Vanderbilt coach," said a Pittsburgher, 'I rode from the Hotel Windsor to the Atlantic City Horse Show for the small sum of one dollar.

"Mr. Vanderbilt was in good spirits the day I was his paying guest. He bantered very gracefully the beautiful young lady who sat beside him on the box-seat.

"I heard Mr. Vanderbilt say that women are never satisfied. No matter what you gave them, they always wanted something else, and if they couldn't get what they wanted by fair means, then they got it by foul.

"He said that last fall a lady who had just returned from Newport sent for a fashionable physician.

"The physician, on arriving, found the lady reclining on a couch, one maid fanning her, and another holding to her nose a gold bottle of smelling-salts.

"'What is the nature, madam, of your complaint?' the physician asked.

"'Oh, doctor,' said the lady plaintively, "I am suffering dreadfully from—er—oh, what was that illness, anyway, for which you sent my friend Mrs. Golde on a yachting tour in the Mediterranean?'"

A Bad Break.

CHANCELLOR JAMES R. DAY, of Syracuse University, in a discussion of the craze for athletics that sometimes becomes too rampant in the universities of America, said with a smile:

"Why, I know a young clergyman—he had been an excellent first-baseman at college in his time, who, after reading a portion of the Scriptures, said solemnly, as he closed the Bible one Sunday morning in the baseball season:

"'Here endeth the second innings.'"

Monotony of the Country.

MAJOR C. L. McCawley, the "social aide" of the White House, said at a dinner, apropos of country vacations:

"For country vacations I have no great liking. They talk of the quietude and calm of country life, but I have found the noise of a farm so dreadful as to banish sleep. Ducks quack all night long. From two on to daylight cock crows to cock by the dozen over a radius of miles. Cows low and bellow, horses neigh and stamp thunderously in their stalls. Dogs bark. Cats wail and shriek.

"Undoubtedly a summer night on a country farm is noisier than a summer night on the Bowery or in Coney Island. Oh, the noise of the country, and oh, the lack of interest, the dull monotony there!

"I once went to the country to spend a week on a cousin's farm. I turned in, the first night, about ten, but the dogs and cats, the ducks and roosters, the cows and horses kept me awake, I think, till about four.

"At four or so, as the gray dawn came on, the farm animals discontinued their racket, and I fell asleep. But this sleep that I so much needed had hardly descended on me when my friends, fully dressed, hastened into my room.

"'Up with you, lazybones!' they shouted. 'Out of this, or you'll be too late!'

"In a comatose condition I leaped from the bed, shaved, bathed and dressed, while my country hosts urged me to greater and greater speed.

"As my dressing neared its completion and my senses became acuter, I began to wonder what was the use of all this hurry, and I said:

"'What's up, anyway Is something going on?'

"'Sure,' they said impatiently. 'The coal boat passes the wharf in four minutes.'"

Haughty Servants.

HENRY TYSON HUGHES, a millionaire of Cleveland, entertained in August at his bungalow at Dark Harbor, Me., a rich English cousin.

The cousin, as the custom is abroad, put his shoes out before his door every night to be polished; but, though Mr. Hughes's servants numbered a dozen, not one of them, under any circumstances, would consent to clean the shoes of the English visitor. The host, to avoid a domestic strike and to avoid embarrassing his cousin, secretly took away and blackened the shoes in question every morning himself.

He was discussing the matter the other day at Dark Harbor.

"The average American servant won't black shoes," he said, "and that is all there is about it. I had consideration for my cousin's feelings, though I think now that I ought to have informed him gently how the land lay. I ought to have acted like a certain mining town hotel keeper.

"An Englishman, on a prospecting tour, stopped at this man's hotel, and, after his room had been assigned to him, he said to the landlord, among other things:

"'And I'll put my boots outside the door of my room.'

"'All right,' returned the hotel man. 'I'll guarantee nobody'll tetch 'em.'"

Blasted Hopes.

SAMUEL BYERLEY, the New York clerk whose brilliant Panama bond coup netted him $30,000 and a better position with his company as well, was talking about his success the other day.

"How did I feel," he said, "when I found that I was actually going to make all that money? Well, it is hard to say how I felt. I suppose I felt just the opposite to a friend of mine on the first night of his first and only play.

"My friend had spent two years writing the play. He was forty, his salary was fifteen dollars a week with no present prospect of advancement, and he hoped out of the play to be delivered from that grind.

"Well, on the first night, at the end of the first act, my friend, rushing up to the stage manager, said joyously, with visions of European travel floating in his mind:

"'Listen! They're calling for the author. What shall I do?'

"The manager, who understood the nature of the calls, answered grimly:

"'You'd better skip out of the stage door and make your escape while there is yet time.'"

Humors of the Law.

ONE day as John W. Mugridge, the lawyer, and Judge Minot were walking along the street in Concord, N. H., together, Mr. Mugridge, in his sepulchral voice, said: "Judge, let's go into partnership. You furnish the capital and I'll furnish the brains."

The judge quickly pulled a 2-cent piece from his pocket, and, holding it in the palm of his hand, said to Mugridge: "Very well; cover that, John! Cover that!"

An old lawyer in speaking recently about Gen. Butler, said:

"Ben Butler was a terror and torment to the judges. On one occasion Judge Sanger, having been bullied and badgered out of all patience, petulently asked: 'What does the counsel suppose I am on this bench for?'

"Scratching his head a minute, Butler replied: 'Well, I confess your honor's got me there.'"

While Hon. E. B. Flynn of Springfield, Mass., was on his way to the Supreme Court one day he carried under his arm several law books. A friend remarked to him, pointing to the books: "Why, I thought you carried all that stuff in your head."

"I do," quickly replied Flynn, with a knowing wink, "these are for the judges."

F. M. Beckford of Laconia, N. H., was once arguing a case in the Belknap county court, and he opened his argument as follows:

"Your honor, and gentlemen of the jury: This case is one peculiar in circumstances as well as in fact. It comes to me as a legacy from my late brother, Col. T. J. Whipple, who was engaged in its preparation at the time of his death. The County Attorney who brought the case into court has long since gone to his great reward. The justice who held the original hearing has long since passed away. Our Attorney-General Barnard, since became interested in the case, has been called to the land where litigation is not known. Several of the leading witnesses, too, are dead——"

"All of which," said the court, "reminds us of the uncertainty of human life. Proceed, or none of us will be able to see the case through."—[Harper's Weekly.

Humoradas de un Rey.

RASGOS Y ANECDOTAS DE LA VIDA DE LUIS XI DE FRANCIA.

Colaboracion Especial.

CUENTAN las crónicas antiguas que el Rey Luis XI era hombre que gustaba mucho de las bromas, chistes y jocosidades, y continuamente se le veia andar en jovialidades, abandonando los intereses de su gobierno, de la religión y de cuanto deber y obligación tenia en su calidad de Rey y de hombre sério.

Rara era la ocasión que no se le echaba de ver en banquetes y tertulias aun en las mas baratas, cortejando á las cortesanas y dando caza á las damitas mas encopetadas como cazaba á los animalitos que merodeaban por sus cuadras reales. Ya se le veia sobresaliendo en medio de unos tantos discipulos de Baco empinando el codo con un descaro verdaderamente real y envuelto en los humos del champagne ó de un vino menos costoso, echar esparajos y cebollas como el mas refinado purista en [illegible].

Han habido sin embargo botarates que han querido hacer aparecer á este esplendido libertino nada menos que como un socarrón y asi han manifestado que Luis XI era un digno imitador de el santo Luis Gonzaga, cuando á las claras se ha visto por ciertos documentos privados, pero ya conocidos, que el susodicho rey era un corriente tunante, un valiente enamorado, un zumbón divertido y un petardista de grandes dotes.

Ya sus ministros y mas personal del gobierno y familia le tenian muy conocido por todas sus heroicidades pero mas principalmente por su buen humor y haciendo mérito á la verdad por su buen corazón que era noble y generoso como noble y generosa era la sangre que circulaba por sus venas.

Se cuenta que de sus labios tenia siempre pendientes estas chuscas sentencias, que las repetia á menudo que principiaba sus jocosidades: "Que para la vida son indispensables y muy oportunas cuatro cosas, tales son: comer caliente, beber fresco, tapar duro y tragar blando."

Como es sabido en las antiguas cortes europeas el lujo asiático era una de las mas estrictas obligaciones y por cuadros y retratos hemos podido adquirir una idea de los tesoros que alli se usaban en trajes, bordaduras, joyas, etc., pero en tiempo de Luis XI ese lujo era por demas deslumbrador, y habian articulos especiales en las reglas de palacio por los cuales se decretaban severos castigos para los que no eran correctos en el vestir y en la exibición de sus riquezas. El rey era, naturalmente, un figurin de la moda y de él partian y se copiaban todos los cortes de sus casacas y pantalones de gala, de casa y caza y no podia tolerar que se presentasen ante él, damas ó caballeros en que no luciesen el buen gusto y una exquisitez en el arreglo de su persona. Pero con todo tenia sus caprichos que mas de una ocassión sacó de sus casillas á sus obedientes y respetuosos certesanos, quienes no pudiendo comprender las intenciones de su bufon soberano, á una raspa que él les echaba ellos se arrojaban á llorar como un Jeremias y echaban pestes contra la hora en que habian nacido con la obligación de soportar las chanzas, y bufonadas de su Señor. Si aparecian un poco descuidados en la etiqueta en su persona los largaba de su presencia á paso de pica y les hacia descontar algunas pesetas de sus sueldos como una multa por no cumplir con las órdenes de lujo incomparable. Si se presentaban soberbiamente [illegible] y delicadamente perfumados se reian en sus [illegible] y reuniendo á todo el personal de palacio les hacia el blanco de sus burlas, señalándoles con el dedo y decia: "Que os figurais ó que pretendeis con al cargaros de tantos terciopelos, hilos de oro y piedras preciosas y al bañaros en aguas de violetas, tréboles y azahar?... pensais acaso, conquistaros el amor de mis damas con vuestras disfrazadas como ridiculas figuras? Vaya, yaye con mis seóritos mas encopetados [illegible] una mona!" y soltaba una sonora carcajada cuando ya veia que el liquido rojo se agolpaba á los rostros de los avergonzados cortesanos: luego para terminar la pesada broma les decia: sabed amigos que para la mujer queda eso de cuajarse de adornos y hermosearse sus figuras, porque la mujer debe ser bonita, dulce y [illegible] mientras el hombre debe ser feo, fuerte y hediondo." Concluidas las risas y dejándoles á los pobres cortesanos mas trieste que un caballero de la Mancha y mas rojos que una amapola se largaba el rey á sus [illegible] y "cazerios" con la puntualidad acostumbrada.

Con respecto á su vida privada era un hombre mas regular aunque algunos escudriñadores de la verdad han dicho que la vida de Luis XI encierra algunos [illegible] con todo no han sido comprobadas sino insignificantes cosas y casi todas se refieren á su caracter jovial y burlesco. Cuando se ofrecia algun caso serio en [illegible] que afectaba á la regularidad de los sistemas que empleaba en la gobernación de su nación no era un individuo violento ni execrable y si mandaba decapitar á alguno siempre lo hacia sobre bases de justicia y con la certeza de que obraba como las leyes le autorizaban [illegible]: eso si era inexorable en sus sentencias.

[illegible] hay muchos que podria citar en que se manifiesta el caracter tan singular de este soberano y muchas que versan sobre su vida de soberano y de hombre, algunas de las cuales merecen recordarlas por ser [illegible] muy conocidas.

Uno de los actos de ese rey que ha sido graciosamente [illegible] es una equivocación que tuvo, tal vez la única, en la persona de un Señor Verville, aunque tambien en [illegible] se le atribuye esta equivocación, un tal Tristan compadre del mismo rey. Veamos el hecho segun lo refirió el dicho Señor Verdille, es decir, os un [illegible] del caso que seria muy extenso referirlo con [illegible] pormenores. Vamos al grano.

El dicho rey habia dado la abadia de Turpenay á un gentil hombre que, disfrutando de la renta, se hacia llamar Señor de Turpenay. Sucedió que estando el rey en Plesis-les-Tours, el verdadero abad, que era monje, fue á presentarse al rey y le hizo su instancia, observándole que canónica y monasticamente el estaba en posesión de la abadia, y que el gentil hombre usurpador le inferia agravio contra toda razón y justicia, y por consiguiente, que él suplicaba á su Majestad, para que lo amparara en su estricto derecho. El rey con su acostumbrada sangre fria y verbosidad y con sacudimientos de cabeza le prometió satisfacer á la justa petición que el abad le habia hecho, oyendo lo cual este salió de lá sala de audiencia haciendo á su Majestad infinitas genuflecciones y reverencias.

Habiéndole agradado al abad la recepción que le hiciera el Rey, gustó de ella y se acostumbró cada vez que este salia despues de sus comidas á dar su paseo por el jardin, á ir á su encuentro y empezar á incomodarle con sus monótonas conversaciones; el Rey cargado ya de tanta impertinencia del monje llamó á su compadre Tristan, su secretario privado, y le dijo:

"Compadre, aqui hay un Turpenay que me fastidia, quitamelo del mundo."

Turpenay resistió, lloró, clamó, pero no hubo medio de hacerse oir y fue llevado á la horca sin remedio alguno, alli le colgaron de un bonito patibulo y con la mayor delicadez le ataron la soga al cuello y dejándole colgadito durmiendo la mona de la eternidad. Luego que Tristan hubo cumplido su misión que le hubiera encargado el Rey volvió donde éste y le manifestó que el Señor Turpenay habia sido perfectamente estrangulado y que lo habia hecho como á un Turpenay, pues ni siquiera se quejó después de muerto. Después de algunos dias de haberse ejecuatado la sentencia, acudió el monje al salon del Rey, pues en ese intervalo habiase sentido indispuesto, pero inmediatamente que pudo salir quiso ver á su Majestad. El Rey al verlo quedó profundamente asombrado al ver al monje que creia requetemuerto muy en su presencia. Con disimulo llama á Tristan y le dice al oido:

"Oye, vergajo de secretario, tu no has hecho lo que yo te ordené."

——Oh, si Majestad, no penseis en tal cosa; Turpenay esta mas que muerto, morido.

——He! cual es ese Turpenay; yo te hablé de este monje.

——Oh, perdón Majestad, pero yo entendi que queriais que muriese el gentil-hombre.

——Pero que es lo que has hecho, lo has hecho morir al gentil-hombre?

——Si, señor.

——Pues bien, valiente barbaridad!

Luego volviéndose donde el monje lo dijo.

——Venid aqui, padre.

El monje se acerca, y el Rey le dice.

——Arrodillaos.

El pobre monje tenia miedo; pero el Rey le dijo.

——Dad gracias á Dios fue no ha querid—que fueran. muerto, como yo lo habia mandado. Pero el que os tomó vuestras rentas lo es. Dios os ha hecho justicia. Id, pues, á rogar á El por mi, y no os movais de vuestro convento.

Efectivamente la culpa fue casi ninguna del Rey sobre la muerte del gentil-hombre y si hubiera querido tomar mayor venganza del monje con mas pretexto lo habria hecho que corra la misma suerte del difunto pero su corazón era muy noble para esas papeladas.

He aqui otra anécdota de nuestro héroe real que aunque al parecer inmoral no pasa de ser sino una chocarreria de las que siempre él acostumbraba como un mero pasatiempo. Todos la habrán oido pero no habrán sabido que al creer á la version fue inventada por el Rey en mesa. Esta es insulsa diversión de "Besa mi trasero." La pongo en cuento porque estamos refiriendonos á las comicidades y bufonadas de su Majestad el bellaco Luis XI.

Este cuento sucedió una vez que el Rey estaba de muy buen humor y quizo pasar unas horas entretenidas. Oigámosle á Balzac en sus Cuentos Picarescos.

Habia en Tours tres avaros por excelencia. Era el primero maese Cornelio bastantemente conocido. Llamábase el segundo Peccard y vendia bagatelas, papeles pintados y joyas de iglesia. El tercero se llamaba Marchandeau y era un viñador muy rico. Estos dos turonenses pasaron por personas honradas no obstante sus latrocinios.

Cierta noche que el rey se encontraba de buen humor en casa de la señora de Beaupertuys, muy conocida suya; como que habia bebido mas de lo regular se deshizo en chistes y dijo á su compadre Le Daim, y al viejo Dunois, que estaba tambien algo alegre.

Es preciso reir, amigos mois! . . . Y creo que seria una buena comedia ver á un avaro delante de un talego de oro sin poderlo tocar. . . Hola!

Al oir esto compareció un criado.

Vete, le dijo, en busca de mi tesorero y que traiga aqui seis mil escudos en oro. En seguida iras á prender, primero á mi compadre Cornelio, depues al papelero de la calle del Cisne y luego al viejo Marchandeau, trayéndoles aqui por candato del rey.

Vinieron los seis mil escudos, que Luis mandó poner sobre una mesa muy bien alumbrada, con lo que brillaron como los ojos de los convidados que se alumbraron tambien involuntariamente, por lo que se rieron de mala gana.

No esperaron mucho tiempo á los tres avaros que el criado trajo estupefactos y jadeantos, excepto Cornelio, que concocia los antojos del Rey.

Hola amigos mios, les dijo Luis, ved los escudos que hay encima de esta mesa. Y los tres burgeses los miraron guiñando el ojo.

Son vuestros, añadió el Rey.

Dicho que hubo esto, los tres bellacos ya no miraron mas los escudos, sino que comenzaron á examinarse de arriba abajo el uno al otro, y los convidados conocieron perfectamente que los monos viejos son mas expertos en visajes que todos los demas, como quiera que sus fisonomias adquirieron rasgos de curiosidad como los de los gatos cuando beben leche.

Vaya! dijo el rey, todo esto será de aquel de vosotros que diga tres veces á los otros dos, "Besa mi trasero!" metiendo la mano en el oro; pero si no está muy serio, y llega sonreir siquiera al decir esta bufonada, pargará diez escudos a la señora de la casa. No obstante, padrá repetirlo hasta tres veces.

Pronto estará ganado, dijo Cornelio, quien en su calidad de holandés, tenia la boca tan á menudo cerrada y seria como á menudo la tenia abierta, desternillándose de risa, la comitiva.

Asi que puso denodadamente la mano en los escudos para ver si estaban bien acuñados, y los empuñó con gravedad, pero como mirara á los demas para decirles cortesmente: "Besadme el trasero" los dos avaros, temerosos de su gravedad holandesa, le respondieron como si hubiese estornudado: "Valgaos Dios! lo que hizo reir á todos los convidados y al mismo Cornelio.

Buando el viñador quiso tomar los escudos sintió tal comezon de poseerlos en toda su persona que de su rostro escapó la risa de la avaricia sin poder articular ni una palabra.

Tocóle entonces el turno al tercero, que era un truan de á folio y tenia la boca cerrada como cuello de ahorcado. Cojió un puñado de escudos, miró á los demas, fijó la vista en el Rey y con ademan burlón le dijo.

"Besadme el trasero."

Esta sucio? le preguntó el viñador.

Fácil será verlo, contestó con gravedad el preguntado.

A esta contestación el Rey se sintió nervioso pues ya creyó perder su dinero, viendo que Penard comenzó sin reir, y que por la tercera vez iba ya á proferir la frase consabida, cuando Beaupertuys le hizo señal de consentimiento que le hizo perder su gravedad, echándose á reir como un bobo.

Como la has hecho, preguntó Dunois, para matenerte serio delante de seis mil escudos?

Oh, monseñor! primeramente pensaba en uno de mis procesos que se falla mañana, y despues en mi mujer que es una carga muy pesada.

La codicia de ganar la respetable cantidad hizoles todavia practicar nuevos ensayos, y el Rey se divertió durante una hora con los gestos, las preparaciones y las tontadas que hicieron mas propias de monos que de figuras humanas, teniendo al fin el dolor inmenso que les causó haber de entregar cada uno cien escudos á la señora de la casa, conforme al convenio estipulado.

Cuando estuvieron fuera, Nicolas dijo al Rey con desparpajo.

Señor, quereis que ahora haga yo la prueba, besandoos vuestro real trasero?

No, por Dios, contestó Luis XI, yo os besaria por mucho menos dinero.

Esta ultima jugada del Rey causó nueva risa á los convidados del Rey, que guardaban silencio muy de mal humor con lo que se despidieron y cada uno se fue por su via respectiva pensando los avaros en la ganguita que se les escapó de sus garras y el Rey y criados riendo como loros con cosquillas. Bién se ha visto que su Majestad Luis XI fue una gran pieza y nada imitador se San Luis Gonzaga, como lo han querido asemejar diferentes admiradores de la real persona.

WASHING BIG BEN.

For the first time in three years Big Ben at Westminster is having his hands and face washed. The process occupies three weeks, for each of the dials has a diameter of 23 feet; the figures are two feet long, and the spaces between each minute are a foot square. The work has necessarily to be thoroghly done, for probably three years more will elapse before the soot and grime deposited by London's atmosphere is again removed.

The dial on which the men are working today is the dirtiest of the four. It is the one which looks on to Westminster Bridge. The change that has been wrought almost startles the citizen who takes his time from the great clock, and has perhaps forgotten that the face is set in a gilded frame. Two dwarfs—who are in reality burly men—swing in a "cradle" 180 feet above the pavement. They are the cleaners.

Actually, Big Ben's hands have not been washed for fourteen years. They have been taken down from the southern dial, and they will be painted before they are put back in their place. From the street people have the impression that they are black; as a matter of fact, however, their color is dark blue. Before this work is completed a good deal of paint will have been used, for each of the minute hands is 14 feet long, and weighs about 224 pounds.—[London Tribune.

WHY SHE DIDN'T WIN.

They were at Monte Carlo, and, like other visitors to that insidious paradise, they considered the Casino a place which ought to be visited.

They stood hesitatingly before one of the tables, and at last the temptation to join the players proved too strong for the lady.

"I must just risk one £10 note," she said to her husband. "Give me one, darling, and I will put it on the number of my age. That will be lucky."

Hubby was inclined to be sceptical; but he might have spared himself the trouble of grumbling, and the £10 note was duly deposited on No. 24.

Alas! No. 36 proved to be the winning numeral, and the lady gave a gasp of despair.

"Serve you right," said her husband. "If you'd told the truth you'd have won."—[Tit-Bits.

BOHEMIAN HAPPINESS.

We men of the world boast that we are always ready to pay for so-called Bohemian happiness, but I have observed, and profited by the observation, that the pendulum invariably swings back the next morning as far as it went abnormally forward the night before. We pay double; we pay in gold, and, not infrequently, in a loss of self respect.—["The Builders," by Willis George Emerson.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

WATER OF CONFINED FOWLS.

CLEANLINESS A CONDITION OF HEALTH IN POULTRY.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

A GREAT deal has been written and said about drinking water being kept pure for fowls in confinement, yet often we find very impure water causing disaster to a flock. It is astonishing what different estimates different people put upon the conditions of water served fowls. Not long ago a veteran breeder went a long way, upon solicitation, to visit a poultry farm which was visited by a curious disease, reducing the numbers. He had been assured that all the conditions were for health—that no rotten vegetables or fruit were thrown the hens, no overdose of mash fed to same, that the drinking water was freshly supplied twice a day. The man, new in the business, had started with healthy stock, and his pens were well ventilated and draft proof, he felt confident. On the way out to the little farm the veteran was assured of the conditions that do make for health. When he arrived the first thing he did was to examine the drinking vessels. They were not fountains but brown earth dishes. He stooped down and emptied the fresh water out of it and running his fingers over the inner sides of the dish pushed up quite a furrow of jelly-like accumulation. The dishes were all scum inside and when a hen with a cold drank, and dropped fever germs, they at once stuck to the jelly, and waited to infect the pure water put in. That was all that ailed his business, but enough. He sincerely thought the dishes clean because clean water went into them twice a day. Had they been white the jelly would have shown as filth, but the brown did not show it up.

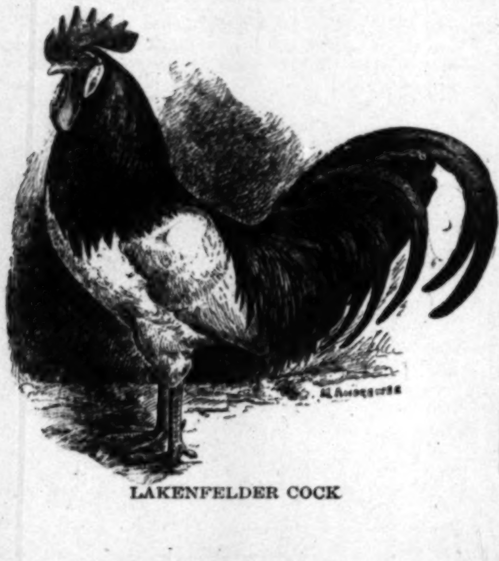
Many a breeder of poor experience makes an estimate of purity in drinking water. Just consider how careful one ought to be about drinking from a glass at a public fountain, and how careful most people are, though nothing accumulated shows on the glass. How readily disease is carried in drinking glasses from one man to another by unseen medium! Then reflect how easily the drinking water of hens may become contaminated—when nothing foul is seen to accumulate. Hens are quite as susceptible to drinking disease as men. Every morning the drinking dishes should be washed out carefully, and if a little sand is put on the wash rag, it will surely start any attempt at "jelly" forming. It is impossible to keep the dishes too clean. The white earth dishes show green slime in a very few days if not treated to sand, and of course the brown ones have it. This slime readily damages the fresh water, and carries deadly germs.

If one uses earth dishes do not scald them. The glaze of these dishes is not hard and a few scaldings crackle and the deadly germs can hide in the biscuit beneath, and by a crack in the enamel or glaze easily communicated with the fresh water. Earthen dishes should be scrubbed and rinsed to be made clean.

Because no hens are ill should tempt no one to neglect the drinking dishes. Healthy saliva, which a well hen may let fall in drinking, will become a deadly poison in twelve hours if exposed to elements of air and water.

Lakenfelder Fowl in Southern California.

A BREED that has commanded some attention in the East, and with which a number are experimenting hereabouts, are the Lakenfelders, one of the German races of fowl said to have originated in Westphalia, in which locality it has been popular for the past fifty years. The first specimens of which we know anything were imported into this country in 1901, since which time a few have been exhibited at leading Eastern shows. The Mission Poultry Ranch at San Fernando (Mrs. C. D. Hubbard) has a small flock as a nucleus for larger numbers and reports them to be good layers and full of promise. Their eggs are of good size and pure white in shell. Possessing the Leghorn type they are not so desirable for table purposes as the Rocks or Wyandottes, though being quick growing renders it not entirely out of consideration for broiler purposes. Experience shows that they are non-setters in the usual sense in which that term is applied by breeders, and also that they are hardy, good foragers, small eaters and rather shy in disposition. Those who have bred them rather extensively say they do best where free range is provided rather than in confinement.



LAKENFELDER COCK

The Lakenfelder is small in body, narrow in front, back rather long, but deep and broad behind; body carried nearly horizontally; neck medium, head small, surrounded by a rather heavy comb in both sexes, but larger in the male; wattles small; earlobe almond-shape and white; thighs short and strong; legs medium length and slate blue in color; wings small and carried high; tail carried well with sickles fully furnished in the male. The plumage is pure white with black tail and neck hackle, rendering the bird of striking appearance. Being, like all Mediterraneans, of an active disposition and not heavily feathered like the Asiatics, it should find climatic conditions congenial to its well-being in the Southwest.

John Bull Views Uncle Sam's Poultry.

EDWARD BROWN, secretary of the National Poultry Society of England, has only recently returned from a tour of investigation and observation covering the eastern half of the United States, the results of which are to be embodied in a bulletin to be issued by his society. In the meantime, however, Mr. Brown has given a brief report of his conclusions to the poultry papers of his country, from copies of which that have come to hand we gain some idea of our weakness as well as strength within the realm of money-making poultry culture. In the pursuit of his investigations, Mr. Brown traveled something like 7000 miles, visiting about 75 of the large poultry plants situated east of the Mississippi River, besides many packing houses and the agricultural colleges and experimental stations. As a result of this work he is quite certain that this country is far less advanced in all the essentials of successful breeding than Great Britain. Indeed, he goes as far as to assert that many of the exclusive commercial (market) plants are of doubtful profit to their owners; that the more successful plants are those catering to the trade for pure breeding stock, show room specimens, and eggs for hatching and also the general market for table fowl and eggs; and finally, that many flocks which are adjuncts to fruit farming, market gardening, etc., are a source of profit to their owners because kept at a minimum of cost by consuming such material on the farm that but for the hens would go to waste. In this adverse criticism, or rather free expression of what he regards as the facts, he also includes other considerations of a negative character, viz., that our table fowl as a whole is vastly inferior to that of Great Britain, and that the American hen fruit is sadly wanting in quality of flavor, size, and quality of shell. In so far as Eastern conditions go, these criticisms may be true, though reflecting more severely on the people who manage poultry than any inherent weakness in American fowl due to climatic conditions or environments. The truth is, we have not observed the small economies in our agricultural practice to the extent to which they are followed in Europe. Our table fowl which finds its way to the best trade (if we are to believe what visiting American breeders report) are not bred "up" from chick to butcher shop along the careful lines observed in England; the same is true applied to the selection and grading of eggs as well as their inherent quality. Educationally, it is Mr. Brown's opinion that his country offers better schooling to the novice who aims to make poultry culture a life work than we do, but that in original work of an experimental character, we are easily in the lead. This is due to the extensive work done by the several agricultural colleges and experimental stations.

The writer feels that it is a matter of regret that our distinguished visitor did not find opportunity to visit the country west of the Mississippi, and especially California. In the Petaluma country he certainly would have found an advanced poultry culture calculated to make him take notice. A community sustaining a million head of poultry is certainly "going some" in the way of producing both eggs and market poultry of prime quality. Here he would have learned something in the way of modern methods of marketing products calculated to convince one that poultry culture possesses a commercial importance second to none other in the country, and that the quality of product is in keeping with the quantity.

Gratifying Results in Day Feeding.

THE following communication has been received from Mr. H. S. Church:

"It affords me a pleasure to acknowledge the many valuable suggestions I have received from reading this department in The Times, and more especially the references that have been made to the subject of economic feeding and management of poultry along commercial lines. There is probably no one subject of more vital importance to the poultry breeder than the practical feeding of fowl. In this connection I wish briefly to state some results attained among a few leading breeders in experimenting with dry feeding, in place of the mash foods which have been so long a feature of the industry. I am a strong believer in the hopper dry feeding system as being based upon practical and scientific lines, and hence the method calculated to produce successful results to those who use it. My reasons are that fowl should be kept as busy as possible during all of their waking hours. By dry feeding I mean a well-balanced ration (any one of the tried and approved feeds now on the market) consisting of just the right proportion of grains (the cereals and other seed foods), beef scraps (bone and blood meal, providing animal food so essential to bird life), and charcoal, grits and shell food (the elements providing teeth and hard substances which enable it to grind its food properly). The method of feeding a well-balanced ration of this character is simplicity itself, namely, feed in hoppers about three feet long, so constructed as to hold about one hundred pounds, affording the bird free access thereto and yet rendering it impossible to scratch the feed out of the receptacle. Once filled, the birds may feed at all hours, thus enabling each individual to eat as the dictates of hunger may suggest. Of course, the water supply is provided along similar lines. In this way fowls feed as hunger commands, hence the system is nourished and sustained along natural lines, and the birds are always active, healthy and contented. It goes without saying that the active bird is invariably healthy and vigorous, being thus in a condition to perform all the functions in the way of breeding, table specimens and the production of a fine quality of hen fruit.

In contradistinction to this method, let us for the moment note some of the objections to the wet or mash foods. Obviously these are fed at specified times when the bird is correspondingly hungry and makes a grand rush for the feed trough. This leads to crowding, the vigorous and strong invariably jostling the weaker ones, thus a certain per cent. of the flock being underfed. Again, this method leads to gorging, overtaxing its digestive organs, rendering assimilation difficult and retarding nourishment to a considerable degree. Particularly is this true of young stock, reducing vitality by overtaxing the organs by this forced method of feeding. The negative influences are particularly noticeable in the larger breeds of fowl such as the Barred-Rocks, Brahmas, and Orpingtons. As a practical demonstration of this fact, I some time ago persuaded one of our larger commercial poultry breeders, who has been a strong advocate of the mash feeds, to try the dry feeding method. The number of birds on this ranch totaled about 900 head; the experiment was tried on a number of pens which were not giving the best of results in the matter of eggs. After a three-weeks' trial the birds were found to be far in the lead of the remainder of the flock fed on the mash foods. This soon brought a radical change from the wet or mash foods to the dry methods, the change involving a re-arrangement of the plant, and in its final application covering something like one thousand head of fowl. By using the 100-pound hoppers, labor was unmeasureable reduced and uncleanliness avoided.

With the supply of dry food in the hoppers it is of prime essential that pure water is always available to the birds. At night a small quantity of grain is fed—in this particular case usually wheat and Kaffir corn. To these duties must be added the daily harvesting of the crop of fresh-laid eggs, which on this particular ranch is from forty to fifty dozen. So much for its practical value and application.

It is the experience, however, of practical breeders who have given the dry method a thorough test that it enhances the health and vigor of the flock. One breeder reports that out of a flock of 700 head last season, that under the dry method he lost about three birds out of every 160, while for the previous years with the mash or wet feeding system the loss on the same number of birds was eight or ten out of every hundred. The saving of labor is also an important item, in many cases reducing the cost fully sixty per cent.

It seems to me that this method in large measures solves the problem of profitable poultry culture in California. Anything that will reduce the mortality in the rearing of chicks; that will enhance healthy and vigorous constitutional qualities; that will reduce the expense of labor very materially; and that will give better results in the way of growing table fowl as well as the production of eggs can certainly be recommended to the poultry fraternity. Let me express the hope that other breeders having experience in this line will write their results for publication in this column of The Jottings.

Separate her from the flock and feed lightly to reduce. She is too fat and may become seriously so.

MUNICIPAL FRUGALITY.

An example of the frugality and business methods by which municipal governments in Europe are conducted is afforded by the Swedish city of Orsa, which, in the course of a generation, has sold $5,750,000 worth of and by means of judicious replanting has provided a similar income every thirty or forty years. From Pest to Profit.

Turning His Australian Rabbit to Account.

Special Correspondence London Mail.

BY the irony of circumstance, just at the time when Dr. Danysz, the famous French bacteriologist, has arrived in Sydney with his tubes of "pasteurellas"—mysterious microbes which he thinks will obliterate the rabbit pest in Australia by the spread of a contagious disease—the rabbit is becoming a valuable commercial asset. One exporter estimates that already it brings £2,000,000 a year to the Commonwealth, but Mr. C. C. Lance, who was not long ago the commercial agent in London for New South Wales, prefers to put the figures at £1,500,000.

The industry, it is to be remembered, is still in swaddling clothes, but, judging from the development of the last few years, the million and a half of today should quickly grow into millions. There are immense possibilities ahead. But, of course, there is Dr. Danysz to be reckoned with. It is exceedingly doubtful, however, whether he will be permitted to proceed to any length with his experiments. Apart from the existing fear that he will set loose a disease which may be dangerous to human beings and to other forms of animal life, there is a strong feeling that, with the great and increasing demands for the carcases and skins of rabbits, the rodent will, in the ordinary course of events, cease to be a pest. And moreover, it is coming to be recognized that not only will the industry bring millions of pounds to Australia annually, but that it will afford profitable employment to a vast army of men. For this reason, the Labor parties, Federal and State, are bitterly opposed to Dr. Danysz and his scheme.

The Prosperous Rabbit Trapper.

Already the pastoralists are complaining of a scarcity of rural labor. They are no longer able to obtain the services of able-bodied men for 10 shillings a week and their "tucker." For rabbit-trapping has of a sudden become a remunerative profession, and it is characteristic of conditions here that within the last few days a rabbit trappers' union has been formed. The freezing and export firms in Sydney and Melbourne are sending hundreds of men away into the country every week to districts where the local supply of trappers is insufficient, and thus there is a steady absorption of the metropolitan unemployed. Likely applicants are provided with traps on time payment, and the new comers are placed at first beside experienced men, who teach them the routine. At Narrabri, Gunnedah, Tumut, Dubbo, and some other places, good trappers are earning, according to one authority, five pounds a week. Another authority puts it at "seventeen or eighteen shillings a day."

Men with young families to assist them do even better. In this connection the report of a country inspector of state schools to the Public Instruction Department of New South Wales is significant. "At the present juncture," he says, "it is a difficult task to get children to do any home lessons. The high price of rabbit skins induces parents to employ their children for half the night in trapping rabbits. Many families in this district are earning as much as from £12 to £20 per week at the business. In many of the towns there is a 'wood famine,' it being impossible to find carters willing to 'waste time' drawing wood when they can earn so much at trapping rabbits. From this cause also the attendance at country schools during the quarter now ending will be greatly reduced."

Solving the Unemployed Problem.

A piece of further evidence is supplied by Mr. Schey, the Director of Labor in New South Wales. In his last report to the Minister he quotes the following from his various country correspondents:

"Coonamble: 'The off-season, but no such thing as unemployed. Usual resorts of loafers deserted. All gone rabbiting, the money earned at which is likely to increase the rates of wages demanded by roustabouts, etc. Spending capacity of the working classes greater than for years past.'

"Cowra: 'Very good. No unemployed. All unskilled labor absorbed in rabbit trapping.'

"Dubbo: 'The rabbit industry has absorbed all the genuine unemployed.'

"Forbes: 'Great demand for farm hands. Most local laborers are now rabbiting, and all state that their earnings are good.'

"Junee: 'Any men previously unemployed are now rabbit trapping, and earning good money.'

"Mudgee: 'No local unemployed, and very few travelers (swagmen.)'

"Young: 'Labor very scarce. Demand much in excess of supply owing to the large number of men and boys employed rabbiting.'"

What a contrast to the story of one short year ago! Then from every quarter and from the same correspondents came accounts of unemployment and distress. The Australian has at last been persuaded that even the rabbit has its uses.

The Capitalists' Point of View.

So much for the workers' point of view. The individuals and companies who are finding the capital have equal reason to be satisfied. The state governments of New South Wales and Victoria have provided cold storage accommodation in Sydney and Melbourne respectively, but of late this has been found ridiculously inadequate, and private enterprise is supplementing it. Among the firms that supply cold storage in Sydney are the Fresh Food and Ice Company, turning out 1800 crates a day; the Metropolitan Ice Company, turning out from 500 to 700 crates a day; and the Inland Freezing Company—which has branch works in several country centers—turning out 1100 crates a day. In addition, the government Cold Storage Department turns out 900 crates a day, and there are a large number of smaller storers and freezers with daily outputs varying from 100 crates to 500.

There are twenty-four rabbits in a crate, and recent prices paid in London range from 15s. 6d. to 11s. per crate, according to the classes in which the carcases are graded by Government graders. Considerable consignments are sent regularly from Brisbane and Adelaide, and these, like those from Sydney and Melbourne, go to the United Kingdom, South Africa, Hongkong, Japan and the Philippines. It is to be noted that the exported carcases are inspected and graded under official supervision.

Profits in Skins.

But the profit accruing from frozen carcases is only a part of the whole profit. There is good money in canned rabbit, and this is a branch of the trade the prospects of which should be improved by the Chicago disclosures. The greatest return of all, however, is derived from the skins. Last year the value of the exported skins slightly exceeded that of the frozen carcases, and this will again be the case during the present year. Every week 130 to 140 tons of skins are sold in Sydney and about 100 tons in Melbourne, and the prices have advanced 50 per cent. since January. The prices now are from twelvepence to fourteen pence a pound, and on an average seven skins go to a pound. The buyers come mostly from the United Kingdom and from America, but the hat manufacturers of Sydney and Melbourne are large purchasers. Just now 2,500,000 rabbit skins, representing an approximate value of £20,000, are weekly arriving in Sydney.

So profitable, indeed, has become the skin industry that many trappers, especially those in the far-out districts, are devoting their attention entirely to it. By retaining the skins and discarding the carcases they avoid the cost and risk of forwarding the latter hundreds of miles to cold storage. The effect of this is that exporters are often apt to be unable to get sufficient supplies of carcases.

Of course an incidental, but important, advantage will be that the industry will serve to keep the rabbit pest under control. In fact, news comes from Carcoar this week to the effect that, owing to the activity of trappers, rabbits are, for the first time in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant, no longer a nuisance in that center. Another advantage will be that the British householder will have larger supplies, at a smaller cost, of a good, wholesome, palatable article of meat diet. The development should assist the realization of the cheap dinner table.

A BRIGHT BELLBOY.

In a hotel in Washington a certain congressman from the West had hurried to the clerk's counter. He had just ten minutes in which to pay his bill, reach the railway station and board his train. When he had transacted his business with the clerk and had turned to dash out of the door it suddenly occurred to him that he had forgotten something. "Here, boy," he shouted to a diminutive negro bellboy on the bench, "run to room 48 and see whether I have left a box on the bureau. But be quick, as I have only five minutes." The boy rushed up the stairs. In two or three minutes he returned, out of breath. "Yes, sah," he panted, "you left it, sah."—[Story Teller.

POSSIBLY MISTAKEN.

An officer of a certain regiment was one morning inspecting his company on parade when he came to an Irishman who had evidently not shaved for some days. Halting in front of the man, he said: "Doyle, how is it that you have not shaved this morning?" "Oi have, sor," was the reply. "How dare you tell me that?" said the officer, "with a beard on you like that?" "Well, sor," said Paddy, "it's loike this. There's only one shaving glass in our room and there was nine of us shaving at the same time and maybe Oi shaved some other chap's face."—[Unidentified.

CAUGHT HIS NAME.

Prof. Wiley, the chemist of the Department of Agriculture, recently went to a Washington store for the purpose of purchasing a fountain pen. The obliging young man at the counter furnished the professor with a sheet of paper, a bottle of ink and several fountain pens, so that he might try each kind. In doing so the professor soon covered the sheet with the words "tempus fugit," the clerk looking on the while with kindly interest. "If you should buy one and it don't suit you, Mr. Fugit," said he, "you can bring it back and take another."—[Unidentified.

MISSOURI JUSTICE.

The tall Missourian was on trial for participating in a lynching affair.

"Have you any request to make of the court?" inquired the judge

"Only one, your honor. I request that I be tried by a jury of my own choosing."

The judge smiled complacently.

"'Tis but a simple favor," he said, "and I would be pleased to grant it had I not already decided to acquit you. Call the next case, Mr. Clerk."—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

Leprosy is increasing in both North and South America. Colombia, where there were only 400 lepers forty years ago, is said to have 40,000 now, and many find their way into the United States. Such a medical authority as Dr. Ashmead, who was formerly chief medical adviser to the government of Japan, says the increase is alarming. When leprosy is brought into a new country it takes fifty years for the seeds to take root, and it becomes epidemic after 200 years. It has been shown that mosquitoes are active in transferring the bacilli of leprosy.—[Chicago Chronicle.

FIELD NOTES.

Mosquito Control.

THE idea that the Eucalytpus tree is a mosquito repellant has been effectively dispelled by the investigations made last season upon the San Francisco peninsula. It was at Burlingame that the first lot of Eucalyptus were planted—the original importation from Australia. It is yet the predominant tree upon this portion of the peninsula. In five minutes of netting a pint of mosquitoes was captured immediately under a row of Eucalyptus, and all over this territory the mosquitos were so numerous prior to the drainage of the marshes that the farmers and gardeners were compelled to wear netting over their faces to make it possible to work. The bulletin by Quayle entitled "Mosquito Control Work in California" has just come out and is now being distributed to citizens of the State. It gives in detail the methods of ridding Burlingame and vicinity of this pest, and the restoration of real estate values following. Send to the Agricultural Experiment Station, Berkeley, for this publication.

Codling Moth.

THE discovery of codling moth in the orchards of an isolated section heretofore free from the presence of this pest proves the impossibility of keeping out insects where communication between localities is so free. In this case extreme precaution has been observed by the fruit growers and inspectors to prevent the introduction of this moth, yet to no avail. Such experiences indicate the great necessity of securing a parasite for the apple worm that will control it, which we may have in the new importation from Spain. On the other hand the largest apple grower in the southern part of the State has wisely refused to wait for the increase of the codling moth parasite. He knows it may not be of any practical help and has sprayed his 30,000 trees to destroy, if possible, the first broods to infest the young trees. If there ever was a clear case of conservatism needed it is in this, that growers should neither depend upon beneficial insects to keep down the pests, nor fail to encourage the trial of every parasite that promises success.

Manufacturing Interests.

CALIFORNIA is not one of the States in which urban manufactories have predominated to a great extent over the rural enterprises of similar character. Of the 6839 manufacturing establishments in the State, 4035 are located in the eleven cities having a population of 8000 or more, and 2804 are doing business in the country and small towns. In this list are not included fruit-packing-houses, or any other industry in which manufacturing has no part. When we consider the enormous capital invested in fruit and grain growing, in small farm and dairy enterprises, vegetable growing and bee raising it is easy to account for the rank California has attained industrially. A State whose manufacturies are not principally centered in its metropolis and a few other cities is in a pretty fair way. While the manufacturing establishments of the State have increased wonderfully in the last five years (37 per cent.) the number of children working in them has decreased by 15 per cent.

Horticultural Values.

THE citrus fruit growers are boasting themselves of the enormous revenue their orchard products has brought to the State within the last twelve months. And well they may, for it approaches all the horticultural products of the State combined, excluding fresh fruits of other kinds. Here are the figures: Value of canned vegetables, $2,366,661; canned fruits, $6,978,083; dried fruits, $13,800,601; other manufactured fruit products, $664; total, $23,809,988. Of these revenue-producers, canned tomatoes head the list of vegetables, with 541,776 cases of 72 pounds each; in canned fruits, peaches lead with 744,715 cases of 72 pounds each, raisins and prunes among the dried fruits leading with 121,409,881 and 114,580,431 pounds respectively. This places California first of all the States in the industry of canning and preserving fruits and vegetables. With $20,000,000 worth of citrus fruits marketed in the year just closing, one may see how nearly this industry has come to equalling all manufactured fruit products, even with California exceling every other State in the latter industry.

Dove a Weed Destroyer.

THE mourning dove (zenaidura macroura) is abundant throughout much of the United States, and is especially common in stubble fields and waste places grown up to weeds. It is preëminently a weed seed eater, and although at times turning its attention to grain it nevertheless consumes an enormous amount of weed seed. The crop of one dove secured in a rye field in Warner, Tenn., contained 7500 seed of the Oxalis stricta. Just outside the District of Columbia the bird has been seen feeding in fields overgrown with pigeon grass and ragweed, and especially in old corn fields, where smartweed and bindweed formed tangles of sufficient extent to injure the crop. In the Eastern States it has the habit of picking up pokeweed seeds and crushing them in its muscular stomach. Several weeds belonging to the genera Lithospermum, Oxalis and Euphorbia are also utilized as food to a lesser extent. In California the dove feeds upon the seed of a leguminous weed, known as turkey mullein (Eremocarpus setigerus.) The habit is so well known in some localities that a botanist upon inquiring how he could collect some seeds of this plant was advised to shoot a few doves and open their crops. The ground dove of the Southern States is very similar in its habits, and probably does almost as much good in eradicating weeds.—[U. S. Biological Survey.

Belated Testimony.

I HAVE had the opportunity of reading a letter from each of three Horticultural Commissioners outside of Los Angeles county in which the writers take strong grounds against the use of distillate spraying for scale insects. Two years ago the manager of over 500 acres of bearing citrus trees rolled his spraying outfits under the shed, there to remain indefinitely, and one week ago this gentleman informed me he would never allow another spraying crew in his orchards. This change from spraying back to fumigation has become so general that it is now impossible to find sufficient skilled help to start the new fumigating outfits, and several of them are tied up awaiting men to run them. It is true that a number of our best orchardists still hold to the use of distillate, yet they are so few that we are justified in stating that fumigation has again become almost universal. There seems to be no way of determining such questions as these except by long-continued and general trial. Yet no one can estimate the losses that have occurred through using distillate and other washes in attempting to control the scale pests. The only valid excuse for its continuance has been the slack and unscrupulous work of many of the contracting fumigators prior to the last two or three years, some of our officials and others who have put themselves forward in advocacy of spraying, making this an excuse for recommending a remedy as subject to contractors' abuse and as inefficient at best as the slack fumigation of past years. To complicate matters more completely, some of our agricultural journals have either shied furiously at this whole question, or advocated, without understanding, the remedy now so generally repudiated.

And yet the growers have not been without warning and should have come to the present conclusion long ago from the data at hand. On the 28th of December, 1901, the Horticultural Commission of Los Angeles county issued the following statement:

"To the Fruit Growers of Los Angeles County: This commission has been called upon at various times within the past three months to inspect orchards in different portions of the county where attempts had been made to eradicate scale pests by the use of distillate sprays. As a result of these inspections, we find that great injury has been done to the present crop of fruit, amounting in some cases to 50 per cent. of the total value." The board also found much of the foliage damaged and that the method was of little value as a remedy for the scale. "In view of these facts we would recommend that this method of disinfecting orange trees be discouraged until such time as the manufacturers of these compounds can guarantee them to be entiely free from damaging elements, or until the cause of such damage can be definitely determined and positively prevented."

Raw Swindle.

A SCORE or more of Pomona ranchers have recently received circulars and typewritten letters about the wonderful profits to be made by growing potatoes in boxes without earth. The schemers, who are located in San Francisco and Denver, allege that the new variety of potatoes are simply marvelous producers, and are sought after at fancy prices by the millionaires and restaurant and hotel-keepers, wherever the tubers have been introduced.

The potato promoters say that these new tubers are fine keepers, and so easy to raise; you just put them in a box, or frame, in layers a few inches apart and cover them with "potatine," for which the discoverer graciously condescends to promise never to charge more than $4.50 a package, and it will produce about 100, or more, bushels of potatoes.

Recently it was noticed in an Eastern paper that a fraud order was issued by the postal authorities forbidding people to mail letters to the proprietor of the "vineless," on the ground that it was a fraudulent method of obtaining money. The proprietor, Darst, charges $100 for county rights.

The names of several citizens in California who had purchased the right to raise "vineless potatoes" have been obtained by a San Diego man who wrote to them. Many answered inquiries by saying that they had bought the right, but had not tried it yet. A report on the "potatine" describes it as a very common sort of fertilizer and the method not a new discovery of principles, and warns the people not to use the mails for defrauding themselves.—[Pomona Review.

Fly Parasites.

IN my report to you on May 16 I referred to the receipt of two jars of possible horn fly parasites that we received from Prof. Koebele, which he collected near the Mexican border in Arizona. The insects were turned over to Mr. Kotinsky for propagation. He placed the parasites in breeding jars containing "horn fly" and other dung fly maggots and pupae. On June 4 the first local-bred parasites issued. A second generation was again bred out on June 29, and on July 25 he had the fly parasites in such numbers that they were sent out to the principal cattle men on the various islands and liberated by him in various desirable districts of this island.

It gives me pleasure to again report the discovery of new districts (Maunawili) where the torpedo fly egg parasite has established itself, and Mr. Kotinsky has distributed further colonies to other districts.

Pampas Roads.

THE pampas of Argentina are said to exceed any other large area of level land in the world. One railroad runs through them 175 miles without an inch of curve and might have continued thirty miles further in the same direction. It is unnecessary to say that the problem of roadmaking, if it is ever seriously undertaken will be a corker. At present the mud in winter and the dust in summer are something awful, and the cost of hauling the tremendous crops produced on the fertile virgin soil greatly reduces the profit of grain growing. In time, of course, the whole country will be gridironed with railroads as the Illinois prairies are today, but at present for most persons there is a very long haul to the rails. It is said that many of the wagons in use are fifty feet long and from twelve to fifteen feet wide. The hind wheels will be from twelve to fourteen feet high and the driver's seat twenty feet or more above the ground. The horses used at times number as many as three score to a wagon. The principal idea of such a large wagon is to have something that will not be engulfed by the mud or dust of the bottomless roads of the pampas, and it also has its economical advantage in a country where men are scarce and horses plentiful.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

The Arab's Mission.

THE Arab horse has a mission. Our present thoroughbred is a living witness to the Arab's capability as a founder and creator of racers. Himself a natural racer, bred through centuries for running rather than draft, bred also for speed and stay, the Arab possesses every gift and qualification—courage, docility, temper, endurance, action, determination. If he cannot go with the fliers of the course, bred and trained solely for speed, neither can he be called slow. He has run two miles, with Derby weight up, in three minutes and forty-eight seconds, yet on the course he keeps nearly to his normal speed. Long or short, his race is run true from end to end; moreover so excellent are his temper and constitution that he stands training for years and years, and has been known to win races in his 'teens. In the point of endurance, no other horse is worthy to be named with him. Under the trying Indian sun, the two little Arabs, Honeysuckle and Gray Leg, were matched for two-mile heats, best three in five. It took seven heats to decide the match, and three of them were dead heats. Fancy such questions being asked of our thoroughbreds—even the best! —[Country Life.

The Old-Time Question.

AGAIN a correspondent of the foothill section "writes to inquire" why The Times does not advocate the selling of oranges f. o. b. Only courtesy to an old friend of the paper's provides a reply to this old question. It is not within the province of this department of The Times to do much theorizing upon any proposition. If the correspondent would keep his eyes open and his understanding alert he would soon discover many facts that would assist him upon this puzzling question. He would discover, for example, that perishable products are not sold f. o. b. anywhere, unless in the case of nuts, celery or the like where the growers have practically no competition and the trade is anxious to take the product offered. Too many assume because there are difficulties and disappointments in the orange markets that it is entirely chargeable to the present system of selling, while as a matter of fact to dispense with the Eastern agents would probably make the conditions no better and perhaps permanently disastrous.

Even with the imperishable products of California growers have to take them to market instead of waiting in vain for customers. A Stockton stock raiser has adopted this plan. He is establishing a Holstein market in Chicago in which to dispose of his high-grade cattle. California horses have been sold in this manner in the East for years where they would have not had a bid if sold on the ranch till the trade came to bid. Another fact should be of some weight, namely, the fact that so many thousands of growers, having tried all systems of orange selling, are firmly convinced that they can take their fruit to market to better advantage than to trust that great responsibility to transient agents.

Mortgages Paid Off.

"I HAVE been struck with the fact that so many mortgages have been paid off dring the past few months by Pomona orange growers," said County Recorder Hartwell to a Review reporter yesterday. "I think I am correct in saying that about five mortgages a week have been canceled in this office for Pomona orange growers. This month the number has been above the average. This is the very best indication of the prosperity that reigns in this locality. One man in Pomona told me that he had made more money from oranges and lemons during the past seven months than he had made in any three previous years. Another man from Claremont told me that he had paid for his place by two years' crops of oranges and had about [illegible] spare."—[Pomona Review.

Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

Left-Over Beans.

A GARDENER of many years' experience in California tells me that the garden bean of different varieties makes a much better bean for cooking dry than the ordinary field varieties. When string beans are out of market, there is often a large crop left to ripen, and this may be gathered and shelled for family use. I have seen a large plot of bush beans this summer bearing a heavy crop of ripened pods, and the owner will gather the crop for winter use. I do not know as to the economy of utilizing these crops as compared with the cost of field beans, but many home gardeners find pleasure in saving the products of their own grounds.

Tomato Varieties.

THE tomato, like some strawberries, becomes red before it is really ripe. More than that, it can be picked before it is ripe, before it has even become thoroughly red, and kept in a warm place, it will greatly improve, and ripen up after a fashion. As a means of extending the tomato season into the late fall months, this is a valuable feature; but too often the desire to make things run along as easily as possible leads to the gathering of imperfectly ripened fruits during the summer months, just because they can be handled with greater freedom and less care. We even venture to think that many people who are growing their own tomatoes do not even yet realize the rich lusciousness of a well-grown, properly ripened tomato!

Taken all in all, there is very little intrinsic difference of flavor in different varieties. By this is meant that the range of flavor is very small—infinitely smaller, for instance, than it is among the desert fruits. Still, there are some varieties that are better than others, and they have come to be universally known. But the merits of a variety for the home garden are measured not entirely by flavor. Cropping quality, color and substance—that is to say, solidity—are equally important.—[Garden Magazine.

Black Scale.

WHEN the Scutellista was introduced some years ago, it was hoped that it would solve the black scale question and results obtained in different sections of the coast seemed to show that the little bug would, but it has apparently been demonstrated conclusively that this parasite of the black scale is not built just right to do a thorough job. Spraying with distillate was substituted for gas for a few years, and is still used to some extent. It came into use at first in spraying lemon trees, and on them it worked very well. Lemon trees having to undergo severe pruning in order to secure the best results, which allowed the trees to be opened up presenting a less dense interior. This permitted a more thorough spraying, and the effect on the tree was apparently not detrimental. With the orange, however, the case was entirely different. It seems impossible to reach all the scales, and in some instances the trees have been injured. These difficulties could not be insured against at any time, and there were many deserters from the sprayers' camp early in its career. Spotted fruit, dropping leaves and a good sprinkling of scale in widely scattered districts had a tendency to discourage the use of the spray to considerable extent. There have always been a few growers who shied at spraying from the beginning, and their ranks are receiving new recruits each season.

This season will see a dozen or more new fumigating outfits in the field between Pasadena and Riverside. Many of those who have given spraying a thorough test have gone back to fumigating. It is a pity that such a cheap method of killing the scale was so defective. Results seem to show that until some parasite that will do the work is introduced, fumigation will have to be resorted to in order to give us clean fruit and healthy trees.—[J. W. M., in California Cultivator.

is a comparatively rare color among our cultivated plants, and for that reason the Delphinium, shows this color in great variety, is particularly The brilliant flower spikes can be seen from a distance and are strikingly effective in beds or masses, in borders, shrubberies, or in combination with white lilies or other plants where a high contrast is desirable. The tall sorts should be planted among shrubbery or used as a background for the other low-growing plants whose bloom will produce a pleasing contrast with the larkspur. The dwarf types are better suited for bedding and for low borders. Improvements are continually being made in the size of the flowers, as well as in the length and fullness of the spikes. Some of the species flower both early and late, and the season for all can be prolonged by care in cutting away withered flower stems as fast as they appear. The Delphinium is sometimes increased by division, but like most other plants, they are more robust when grown from seed. This plant is easily propagated and adapts itself to many conditions, but in a soil deeply dug and well enriched with fine old manure their blooms are largest and best. For best results the plants must have ample room to grow, one and a half to two feet each way is not too much for the taller sorts.

Annual Varieties.—These include the rocket and hyacinth-flowered larkspurs, so called from their long, narrow flower spikes. They bloom best in a rather cool, moist soil. The seed may be sown in the open border, either in spring or fall, preferably the latter, so that germination may take place very early in the spring. As the seedlings grow, thin them to stand 6 to 18 inches apart, according to variety. The shades of color include light, dark, and azure blue, white, buff, rose, apple blossom pink, brick red, red lilac, dark lilac, violet, and fawn. The varieties are seldom kept separate, as they are quite as pretty and convenient for cutting when sown in mixture. Some of these are really hardy biennials, but because they bloom the first season they are treated as hardy annuals.

Perennial Varieties.—These are usually taller than the annuals, requiring more space between the plants. If sown in the autumn or very early in spring many will bloom the first season. The foliage is clean and attractive and the habit of growth strong, producing long flower spikes. In California these sorts are at present blooming for the second time this summer.—[California Cultivator.

Canning and Cooking Tomatoes.

THE principal part of the nutritive quality of the tomato is contained in the juice, therefore the practice of drawing off the juice, in order to have more solid packed tomatoes in canning is to be condemned.

The best way to can tomatoes is simply to pack them without peeling into wide-mouthed jars, half fill the jars with cold water; put the jars in a large saucepan, or the wash boiler, with water to reach half way up the jars, bring the water to the boiling point, boil half an hour, take out the jars, fill them to overflowing with boiling water, and seal. By this means you get all the value of the tomato. Should you have tomatoes left over after a meal, don't throw them away, but can them. Just a jar at a time will do after a meal, while you are washing your dishes, and in a remarkably short time you will have a goodly array for a "rainy day." The green ones can also be made into jam. They are better than the red for this purpose.

Propagation of Raspberries.

THE red raspberry, blackberry, juneberry, banana, pineapple, fig and date are best propagated from suckers dug in fall or spring, and planted immediately.

The best red raspberry, blackberry, and mulberry plants are secured by cutting the larger roots into pieces from two to four inches long. These are packed in moist sand over winter, and planted in the spring like hardwood cuttings, except that the upper end is covered with soil to the depth of one inch. Be careful to plant the top end up; that is, the end that was nearest the stem, indicated by the growth of the fibrous roots. These root cuttings make excellent plants in one season. If necessary, any of our common Northern fruits, as plum, cherry, peach, pear and apple, can be multiplied by root cuttings; but of course they will not come true if the parent is a grafted tree.—[Garden Magazine.

Offering Free Seed.

THE war against free distribution of seeds by the government is likely to be renewed more actively than ever before. During the last session of Congress actual progress was made toward doing away with this abuse, and it was brought out incidentally that public opinion, as expressed by the newspapers and various associations, is against the practice. The seed dealers are, of course, among the leaders of the anti-free seed movement, because it is to be supposed that free distribution injures their business, and they argue with justice that the government has no right to compete with them in such way any more than with other lines of business.

The situation is a curious example of the growth of a great abuse from a small beginning. At first it was the practice to send out new varieties for trial, there being no experiment stations at that time. Of late years there has been no pretense of sending new varieties, the free seeds being apparently a haphazard selection, sometimes good and sometimes poor, and always ill assorted. Some people, however, like to receive those seeds, and the Congressmen seem to imagine that it helps their position to be able to send them, hence the practice is increasing, and it has been difficult to get it voted down in Congress. It appears that the government seed distribution amounts to about half the total number of packets sent out by seed dealers. As one of them says, "What industry could survive if the government gave away free half as much as those engaged in the industry sold?"

The practice seems to have been kept alive for lack of organized effort to suppress it, but it would appear that the verdict of the granges, the agricultural press and many farmers' organizations ought to suffice to show that the people really do not endorse a practice of this kind.

It would be far better, as any one would concede, to devote the $280,000 paid for these miscellaneous seeds to the support of the agricultural experiment stations or other lines of work which would be of real advantage. —[American Cultivator.

Small Farming.

TO the inquiry regarding the prospect of the small farmer and his ability to make a living under present conditions, Prof. L. H. Bailey takes the position that there is room for large area farming and small specialty farming. Where markets are quick and nearby small area farming will increase and a very moderate amount of land is sufficient to support a family when the land is devoted to high-class specialties. Men who have the ability and disposition to manage large affairs should go farther back into the country where large areas can be had and employ much labor to organize the business after the principal of large manufacturers. Men without this managing ability would find it more and more to their advantage to work under the direction of men of greater ability for management. Young men of thorough agricultural education and good executive ability would be able to handle large farming enterprises and furnish employment for numerous others who lack special business ability. Thus, there would be two classes of farming, the small farms devoted to special crops and the large farms employing much capital and managed on strictly business principles.

A BLIND MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

A blind man was making a tour of the New England coast on his vacation. In Maine, in the pretty village of Castine, a lady said as she waited with him at the pier:

"What pleasure is there in travel for a blind man?"

"More pleasure than you think," he replied. "I enjoy this fine, invigorating wind from the sea as well as you do. The noise of the water is as pleasant to me as to you, and the warmth of the sunshine is as agreeable. And when we get aboard the boat, do you think I shan't appreciate the swift sail seaward?

"The blind are not so blind as the world imagines. When I walk the streets, I know the shops I am passing by their odors. Meat, perfumes, tobacco, leather, flowers tell me as well as eyes would that a butcher's, a tobacconist's, a shoemaker's or a florist's is near.

"So it is in the country. A spicy smell tells me I am in a grove of pines. The sweet breath of new-mown hay floats from the meadows, and in fancy I see the haymakers. The wild blackberries have their pungent odor, and it is easy to know the presence of the wild honeysuckle. The lowing cows, the neigh of a horse, the bleating of sheep tell me the occupants of the field I pass, and the gurgle of water assures me that in that field there is a running brook.

"Do you wonder how a blind man makes his way in a crowded street? I will tell you. He walks fearlessly as long as he hears nothing, but when the sound of approaching foosteps reaches him, he turns a little to the right, and passes by without delay and without collision. Further on he meets children. Children are easy to recognize by their noisy prattle and their light, quick, irregular steps. And the blind man, knowing that it is difficult to count with any degree of certainty upon the actions of these little people, goes very prudently, creeping along at a snail's pace until the children are passed.

"He knows a street crossing by the increased violence of the wind, the louder noises, and the gradual descent of the pavement for some forty or fifty feet. He knows when he draws near a wall or big stationary object by the different sounds his steps then have and by the different feel to his flesh of the air, which is much more compressed.

"A blind man gets along better on a dark night than at any other time, for then all the world goes cautiously and slowly, and there is little danger of being run over or run down."

WHERE HE BELONGED.

The phrenologist, standing on a soap box, declared that a man's bumps infallibly revealed to him the man's profession.

"I'll fool the charlatan," said a joker, limping forward on a crutch.

"You, sir," said the phrenologist, as with his large, white, bony hands he caressed the joker's many remarkable bumps, "you, sir, it is easy to see, belong to that great and constantly augmenting class, known as automobile victims."

ONE ON US.

"I know of but one authenticated case of a person's hair turning white in a single night," said the physiologist. "It was the case of a young and beautiful girl who—"

"Who was jilted?" we interrupted eagerly.

"No: who fell head first into a barrel of flour."

Nerve Waste and Nerve Repair.

"NEUROLOGY" is the title of a book of 250 pages, by Dr. A. P. Davis, now of Los Angeles. It embraces also "Neuro-ophthalmology," a new science for the successful treatment of all functional human ills.

Many will say: "A new pathy! We have too many already." The editor thinks so, too. Too many pathies, and two many religions. What is particularly needed just now, in the treatment of disease, is "commonsenseopathy." After reading this book of Dr. Davis the editor is free to admit that the doctor has come pretty near to filling that "long-felt want."

Dr. Davis is no chicken. His portrait shows him a man with a white beard, who somewhat resembles Socrates. You may remember that Socrates was not a beauty. However, "handsome is as handsome does." The wise man doesn't pick a dude to treat him, when he is sick.

Dr. Davis is an M. D. He is also an "Oph. D.," "D. D." and "D. O." After leaving the "regular" fold, he took up the study of osteopathy, then of "chiropractic," and later of opthalmology. He is also a graduate of the homeopathic school of medicine, so that his forty years of medical practice has evidently been what we may call a "checkered career."

To put it briefly, the basis of this school of healing is the fact that all ailments are dependent upon some aberration of the nervous system. The seat of such aberrations may be found along the spine, where so many of the nerves end, in the abdomen, or in the eyes, where there may be nerve strain, a frequent and much ignored source of disease. Such conditions are treated by a combination of osteopathy, chiropractic and ophthalmology.

To put it still more briefly, Dr. Davis's ideas may be summoned up in the statement that all disease is due to congestion. Remove the congestion, and normal conditions are reëstablished.

In simple language, easily understood by the "layman," Dr. Davis explains how marvelous relief may be at once obtained by simple pressure on the starting point or end of a nerve, and describes how it is done. He claims that the mystery of health and disease is to a great extent explained by the fact that one set of nerves, ending in the abdomen, generate an acid secretion, while those nerves which pass from the spine have an opposite effect, generally generating an alkaline secretion. It is a lack of harmony between these two sets of nerves that is, according to Dr. Davis, the chief cause of disease. The two sets of nerves he denominates the positive and negative forces of life.

Less than a dozen pages of the book are devoted to the subject of diet, the importance of which the author, however, fully recognizes. He says:

"It is not all in knowing how to remove nerve strain and nerve pressure, for there must be a supply furnished to rebuild the lost nerve substance which has brought the individual to the condition found, and for which treatment is demanded."

What he says on this subject is sound. As to meats, he declares they are not necessary, but injurious, and truthfully adds that the greatest physical and mental feats are performed by those who never eat meats, nor use stimulants. He also indorses a statement frequently made by the editor, namely, that the majority of people eat three or four times as much as should be eaten, especially of starchy foods. He enters a strong protest against the use of "predigested" or prepared foods. A table is given of the chemical constituents of foods. The first line evidently contains a typographical error, the total contents of asparagus aggregating 111 per cent.

In regard to the "bug" superstition, the author's views are eminently sound, and entirely in line with those frequently enunciated in this department. He says:

"The fact is, 'bugs' (bacteria) do not cause diseases. There never was a flimsier excuse for diseases than the 'bug theory.' If these are involved in the case, it is after the disease is advanced sufficiently to form a nidus for their habitation, and under these circumstances they may do harm; but healthy blood is certainly not infected with them. It is a singular fact, nothwithing the asserted cause of typhoid fever having its origin in a specific bacteria, that a good, strong spinal treatment knocks the bugs into 'kingdom come,' and stops the fever as if by magic, so that if the bugs were the causus belli, they are an army with very weak fortifications! The facts are, as stated elsewhere, when the two forces are united (which is a result of proper spinal treatment,) the cause is removed which perpetuates the so-called typhoid fever (bacilla,) and Nature restores the normal conditions to harmony, and the fever vanishes like frost before a warm morning sunshine. . . . It is a fact, proven by much experience and close observation, that it makes no difference what name a disease is given—that it has a cause for its existence somewhere in the nervous system, and as soon as the impingement which interferes with these nerves is removed, the disease, however, malignant, acute or chronic, changes itself into one of health, be it typhoid fever, puerperal peritonitis or a headache; and this is what should be considered, in preference to spending time to find a 'bug' to accuse of causing the difficulty, when the poor little mite found its way to the pathological spot, after the nidus was formed by the decomposition of the tissues involved, due to the paralysis of the nerves ending in the spot or region diseased, and not as a prime factor in its cause. We detest a theory which has no possibility of verification from actual demonstration. As long as the vague notion of the 'bacteria theory' prevails, we shall have foolish and ignorant followers, who will continue to be duped and deceived, and pay big money to the deceivers."

Dr. Davis takes issue with the "chiropractics" who claim that pinched nerves are the cause of 89 or 90 per cent of all diseases, and that these impingements are due to luxation of the vertebra. Such luxations, he declares, are rare. He says:

"The ridiculousness of assuming to set a spine every time it clicks, or makes a noise as of cracking the finger joints, only louder, is a subterfuge to show wisdom superior to others. If there could be such a thing as a luxated vertebra, when such an occurrence takes place, the verdict would be legion, for it does not take much of a pressure on a vertebra to make a noise similar to the 'cracking' of the finger joints."

The part devoted to ophthalmology—ailments and treatment of the eyes—is of much interest. The author shows how many ailments may be directly attributed to eye strain, that has become so severe in these latter days, when so many people get their living by working with their eyes. In the past, this important subject has been left to more or less unskilled oculists, and much damage has resulted. Ophthalmology is now recognized as an important branch of the healing art, and at least one publication is devoted to the subject. Dr. Davis says:

"The eye is the most delicate, and yet capable of performing more labor, than any organ in the body. It suffers more abuse with less complaint, and shows least signs of distress, and keeps up under the extraordinary task it performs, than any other organ in the body. This may be in part accounted for on account of its superabundance of nerve supply. It has no less than four and one-third cranial nerves ending in and supplying it. That nerve power is expended in proportion to its exercise or use is a well established fact, needing no proof from us. The overuse of the eyes makes extraordinary drafts upon the nervous system, exhausting the nerves used, but through sympathy, correlation of elements, taxes the other nerves all through the whole body as well."

Dr. Davis might have called attention to two leading causes of eye strain in this country. One is the reading of abominably small print in the newspapers. This is especially harmful when the paper is read by artificial light or in an incorrect position, or when traveling on the cars. In Germany, the size of type in school books is regulated by law. Another prolific cause of eye strain is the foolish, unhygienic and inartistic custom of painting so many objects white—fences, houses, etc. Until recently, it was quite a common thing to leave the walls of rooms a dead white, looking bare and unfinished. Even now, you may see pillars of pretentious hotel dining-rooms in this condition. White sidewalks are the rule, and lately some misguided individuals have been painting the roofs of their houses a white color, that glares like a mirror in the sunshine. This custom is particularly obnoxious in a land like Southern California, where the sun shines undimmed more than 300 days in the year.

A chapter is devoted to palmistry and another to phrenology, in which the author sees much that is true. He strongly indorses the use of the rectal dilator, for spasmodic conditions of the nervous system, capillary congestion and hysteria, asthma and many other similar affections.

Dr. Davis does not "take much stock" in Hudson's theory of the subconscious mind. He thinks these divisions are hypothetical and wholly imaginary, and that mind, simply mind, controls the body. He says: "To conjure up any hypothesis that would subject a necessity for two minds seems wholly unnecessary and an excess without a reason.

The author gives the following as the "key to long and happy life:"

"Never satiate the appetite with food, and only eat the kind of food which agrees with you.

"Avoid much cold water or cold drinks. Avoid too much exposure to wind or sunshine. Take moderate exercise, and breathe throughout the lungs.

"Eat but few articles of food at one meal, and avoid worry, anxiety, and excesses at all times. Be temperate at all times. Love God and keep His commandments, and length of days, with unalloyed happiness, will be yours to enjoy in this life, and the assurance of eternal life when done with earth."

From which it may be seen that Dr. Davis is religiously inclined.

So much by way of commendation. Now, for a few words of criticism. For, it would, indeed, be strange, if nothing were found to criticize in a book of this size, treating on so important and comprehensive a subject. The only criticism the editor has to make in regard to this book, from beginning to end, is that Dr. Davis indorses certain so-called biochemical elements, "tissue elements" or "tissue salts" a maker of which he names. He says, referring to these salts: "No case will be in a normal condition unless the elements are supplied, ther, by the use of the food containing them or supplied by drug means." Again, he says: "There are cerain characteristics nature manifests when there is an ess or a deficiency in these elements, or in one of them, and unless supplied in food should be otherwise.

They are best supplied in a form of two-grain tablets, tainable at any homeopathic pharmacy, or of any omeopathic physician." He says further: "These, be understood, are not medicines, in the common accepance of the use of that commodity, but one of the ele-ents of the system, essential to its very existence and rmony." Finally, he declares: "To object to this uld only exhibit a narrow-minded prejudice, un-rthy the thought of any intelligent person."

n that case, the editor of the Care of the Body dertment must be narrow-minded, prejudiced and un-lligent, for, as frequently stated in these columns, holds absolutely that these so-called "tissue salts," ng inorganic salts, are, like all other drugs useless, if dangerous. As every kindergarten student of hyne is aware, no inorganic salts can be utilized by the em, but are cast forth as rapidly as possible. This s true of chloride of sodium, or common table salt, is of the deadly mineral poisons, with this differ-that the latter destroy life before nature can elimi-them from the system, as she does chloride of som, or any other poisonous mineral. When more of Carque, on medicinal foods, published in this rtment, and since reproduced in pamphlet form, the manner in which you can possibly get the highly rtant organic salts is in foods, most of the fruits, ables and salad plants being especially rich in salts. A chemist may analyze an apple, and he semble together all the component parts of that but he never can make an apple. He never will ble to make an apple. There is a broad line of rkation drawn by nature between the organic and inorganic. Vegetables feed on inorganic matter, but Doubtless, the fur of cats and dogs is as likely to carry disease germs as any other medium, but those germs will be harmless, unless they fall into suitable soil—impure blood. Apart from this, however, it is certainly disgusting, to a normal mind, to see a dainty woman permitting a dog to lick her all over the face, when one is acquainted with the customs of dogs, and reflects where the animal's tongue might have been a short time previously.

The Calf Cure.

HERE is yet another snakebite cure. It comes from West Virginia, where a man was bitten by a rattlesnake, while gathering berries. The dispatch says:

"In a nearby field were two calves attempting to feed from a cow. Thoroughly frightened, McCormick leaped the fence, caught one of the calves and placed the bitten finger in the animal's mouth. The calf immediately began sucking forcibly on McCormick's poison-filled digit, drawing all the venom into its own system. McCormick has suffered but little from the effects of the bite, but the calf is dead."

A drawback to this cure is the inconvenience of always taking a calf along with one when visiting a snake-infested region.

Have a Seidlitz Powder?

IT is a well-known fact that Long Beach is a place where you cannot possibly get a drink of any alcoholic beverage—unless you "know the ropes." For those who do know the ropes it is said, by those on the inside, that there are all the way from fourteen to forty establishments where, by giving the right kind of a wink your thirst for intoxicants may be satisfied—if you have the price. On the other hand, there is certainly no lack in Long Beach of places that minister to the craving for "soft drinks"—coca-cola and that kind of thing. In strolling along the wharf, a few evenings ago, the editor encountered a sign that seems to touch the limit in this kind of hilarious beverages. One of the soft-drink dispensers exhibited a placard reading "Seidlitz Powders and Bromo Seltzer." Now, just think of a young man, who has been treating his inamorata to the dissipation of a skate—on rollers, of course—asking the young lady to have a seidlitz with him, to wind up the debauch.

It is no wonder that Long Beach forges ahead with marvelous rapidity. Its citizens could not help rising, when they are raised on such inflated beverages.

Patent Medicines.

A PHYSICIAN of New York State sends a communication, strongly indorsing the exposé recently made by a popular New York publication of the patent medicine business. The correspondent asks why a person, when sick, should not employ a physician "who has acquired his knowledge by experience and study of the history and science of medicine?" Because the people have awakened to the fact—a fact admitted by hundreds of eminent members of the profession—that medicine cannot, in the most liberal acceptation of the word, be termed a science. As one eminent physician of world-wide repute has said, it is "founded on conjecture and improved by murder."

Readers of these columns should know well, by this time, that the editor has no use for drugs, of any kind. When it comes, however, to a choice between drugs prescribed by a physician, and those sold as patent medicines, he would give the preference to the latter, because then he would know about what he was getting, while in the other case he would not.

The present campaign against the patent medicines is engineered by the medical fraternity, who find that these household remedies are interfering with their business. Hence, the woeful complaints that we see, from month to month, in medical journals. In these same journals you will find glowing advertisements of scores of proprietary remedies, that are "ethical," and widely prescribed by "regular" physicians. We are told the contents of these drugs are given. That may be, but the action of these poisons is known to very few of the doctors, who prescribe them on the say-so of the manufacturer. Several of the leading medical journals of the country are beginning to call attention to the danger of these coal tar and other remedies, which have already slain their thousands.

The editor believes that the contents of all patent medicines should be printed on the bottle. He also believes that all medical prescriptions should be written in plain English, so that the recipient may know what he is getting. "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." In conclusion, the editor once more strongly advises all readers of these columns to let severely alone all drugs, in whatever form they may be presented—whether bought at the cut-rate drug store, or prescribed by an eminent M.D. They can never in any case cure, but only abort symptoms and retard recovery.

Cures and Colds.

A FRIEND of the editor, a man past middle age, who has been reading the Care of the Body department, and adopting a temperate dietary, including little meat, and not too much of anything, complained that he had been afflicted with half a dozen "colds" during the past year. The editor suggested that possibly some of his depurative organs were out of order—the bowels, liver, kidneys or skin. Apparently, that was not the case. Another cause for these colds might be found in impingement of some of the nerve centers, or neds, which would tend to throw the circulation out of order, and gradually affect the entire system. Or it might be due to eye strain, the obscure cause of many ailments. For further particulars on this subject see a book reviewed in this department. Any one who is feeling "out of sorts' and cannot locate the cause, would do well to see a skilled osteopath, and a skilled ophthalmologist or oculist.

SYLMAR (California) OLIVE OIL

From the earliest history of mankind, both traditional and recorded, down to the present time, the value of olive oil as a food and medicine has been recognized, and especially is this true in Biblical history. Like many other good things, which flourished in "ye olden time," however, its use was rather lost sight of among the Caucasian races during the confusion of the Dark Ages, but within recent years the benefits of its increased consumption are noticeable. Its food value far exceeds that of any form of animal fat, and for many human ills no substitute has been discovered which can approach it in medicinal worth.

Sylmar Olive Oil received the Grand Prize at the St Louis Exposition and the Highest Award at Portland, in competition with leading brands from all over the world.

Supposing all the above causes to be absent, the editor would suggest that such a set of colds may be simply a result of the adoption of a temperate diet, that gives nature a chance to throw out from the system morbid matter that may have been floating around in the blood for twenty years. The editor has known cases in which men who had been afflicted with gonorrhea—which is merely a "cold" in another part of the body—and had supposedly been cured by the drugging system, having no further visible signs of the malady, come after five or more years to a hydropathic institution, in Germany, where a thorough treatment is given, and developing thorough cases of the disease, after which they were really cured.

When a person begins to adopt a hygienic mode of life, it is quite natural that this should cause a casting forth of impurities which foolish people—encouraged too often by yet more foolish doctors—regard as a dangerous symptom, and return to the old mode of life, as the dog returns to its vomit.

Don't try to suppress, but rather encourage these symptoms of cure.

Prof. Behring on Tuberculin.

A FRIEND has sent the editor a pamphlet printed in English, French and German, entitled "Modern Phthisio-Genetic and Phthisio-Therapeutic Problems in Historical Illumination," by Prof E. von Behring, privy councilor. The mere title of the pamphlet is sufficient to instill awe into the mind of a common "layman."

Prof. Behring, it may be remembered, is the sponsor for the latest widely advertised inoculation "cure" for consumption. In his pamphlet, he does not go nearly so far as some of the enthusiastic writers in the press would have us believe. He says: "The scientific principles of this new 'tuberculo therapy' are yet to be established." He says it is "homeopathic," at which statement some of the German regulars have been greatly shocked, and have implored him not to cast such a stigma upon the profession. Dr. Behring says: "The therapeutic part of my book is not to appear until corroborating evidence of the harmlessness and efficiency of my remedy against human tuberculosis is forthcoming, from clinicians more familiar than I with the course and prognosis of the different forms of tuberculosis in man." From which the average reader might gather the idea that Prof. Behring is a horse doctor. Further on, he again declares that "the applicability of the new tuberculosis remedy remains to be demonstrated, empirically and statistically." He calls attention to the fact that Koch's old and new tuberculin and the tuberculin sera of two other investigators could not be verified in other laboratories. As to the time that may elapse before his tuberculosis remedy can become an effective weapon in the battle against human tuberculosis, Prof. Behring says: "I don't know."

So here is the slender basis upon which another new and wonderful "cure" for consumption has been widely trumpeted all over the world, raising false hopes in the minds of unfortunate sufferers and leading them to neglect the only possible chance for recovery—the open-air cure, with plain, non-stimulating diet—until, perhaps, it is too late for nature to restore them.

Following is an extract from a paper on tuberculosis, delivered before the Los Angeles county Medical Association, by Dr. S. A. Knopf, of New York, who was the first graduate of the College of Medicine of the University of Southern California:

"One word about tuberculin in diagnosis. I advise you never to use it. The cases where the tuberculin test has caused a generalization of a seemingly incipient tuberculosis are by no means rare. I personally do not approve of tuberculin as a diagnostic means because it is not infallible, is not infrequently productive of harm, and last, but not least, I would not wish to have it injected into myself, and it is well for physicians to practice the Golden Rule."

How much longer will the medical fraternity continue to waste precious time, in experimenting with mysterious, unnatural and impossible "cures," that never cure, these, in time, to be discredited in favor of some other newer and still more wonderful "cure," that in its turn goes to the rubbish heap, being meanwhile the direct or indirect cause of thousands upon thousands of deaths. And all this while the natural and only effective road to health is so plain that he who runs may read—and recover. There is, however, nothing in this for the medicos, and they must live, even if thousands die that they may do so. The eyes of the public are, however, rapidly becoming opened. They no longer take for gospel the utterances of medical college graduates, any more than they swallow, confidingly, all that priests tell them about hell fire.

The Opium Trade.

A London dispatch expresses the belief that China will ask India to consent to an annual reduction in the import of opium to China, which would have the effect of extinguishing the trade in ten years. The dispatch continues:

"As an evidence of good faith, China will issue an imperial edict condemning the use of opium, forbidding the employment in the government service of any opium eater, and ordering an annual reduction in the cultivation of the native poppy, which will lead to the extinction of the plant in ten years."

The action of England, in forcing the importation of opium into China, against the wishes of that country, was one of the greatest of national crimes.

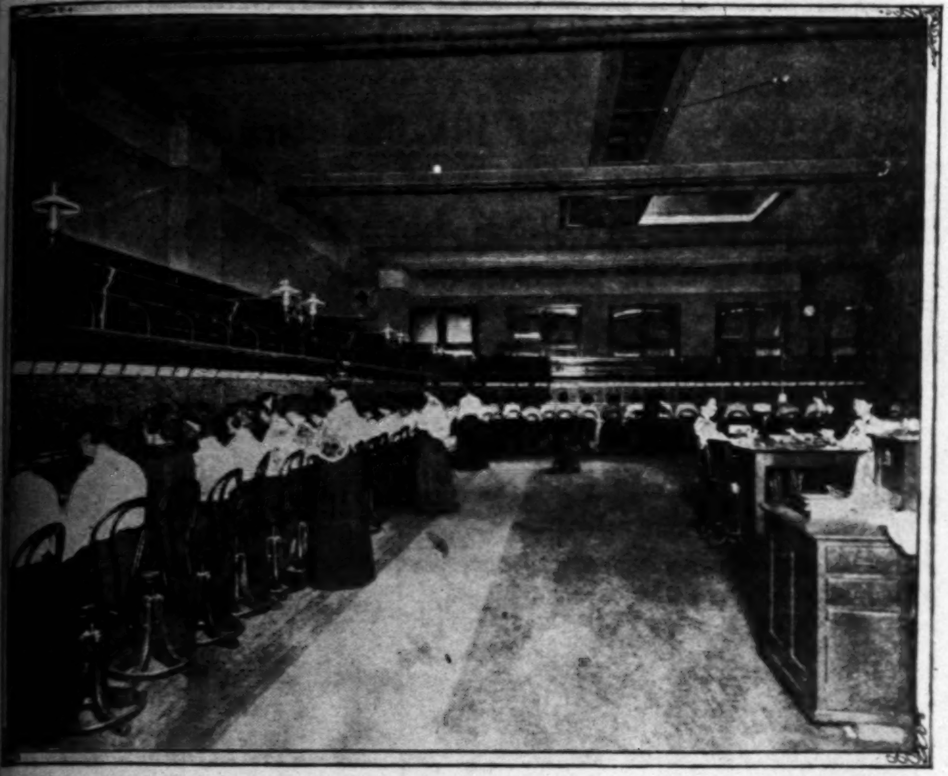
The Telephone Girl.

SOMETHING ABOUT HER WORK AND HER WORRIES.

By a Special Contributor.

HARDLY more than a quarter of a century ago the first woman telephone operator took her place at a switchboard in an exchange at Bridgeport, Conn. Today there are some 50,000 telephone operators in the thousands of exchanges scattered all over the United States, and the majority of these are bright young women not very long out of school.



PART OF OPERATING ROOM. LOSANGELES MAIN OFFICE.

Telephone work appeals in a particular way to the well-educated and refined girl who chooses or is obliged to earn her own living. In the first place, the necessary qualifications, though strict as to standard, are comparatively few. The ideal operator, according to the telephone experts' opinion, is a healthy, cheerful, quick-witted, sweet-mannered girl, and such, indeed, are the majority of the operators to be found in the public exchanges; but for several reasons it is very difficult to keep the supply anywhere near the demand. First of all, the telephone business is growing so rapidly—the companies alone are growing at the rate of sev[illegible] hundred thousand subscribers a year, the present [illegible] being somewhere in the vicinity of 2,800,000—that [illegible] difficult to find the right kind of candidates for the positions that are constantly making, and, in the [illegible] place, the very qualifications that make the telephone girl so important a feature of the industry [illegible] consideration are the very ones which make [illegible] attractive outside her profession, with the result [illegible] after a few years in the service the average operator resigns to get married and give Cupid a chance to employ himself elsewhere.

Theoretically the ideal telephone operator should be a high-school graduate. The telephone experts say that the girl at the switchboard is a sort of medium of communication between the most influential people in the community she should be equal to settling any questions that may arise quickly and satisfactorily. But this [illegible] that the operator should be a high-school graduate, [illegible] in the sciences and languages, is purely theoretical, for, as a matter of fact, many of the most competent and reliable girls at "Central" have simply had a grammar-school education. After all, aptitude counts in the work of the telephone operator as much as it counts in other professions. The ready will, sweet temper and general willingness that count for much in the make-up of the successful operator are born in some and are acquired by others.

There are a few things that the companies, it is said, insist upon in regard to their operators. They make it a rule that the girl who is applying for switchboard work shall possess the clean mind in the sound body which the ancients admired so much. The girls at "Central" are, during working hours, a company all by themselves, just like a class of girls at school, and the companies take care that their health and morals are well protected. A girl who shows any physical weakness which would make her an undesirable companion is rejected without any hesitation, and a girl who is inclined to be mischievous and who [illegible] upon the ideals of her associates is sent away as soon as her peculiar proclivities are discovered. The girls are studied very carefully during their apprenticeship, as it might be called, and after they take regular positions at the switchboard they are supervised with unusual strictness. But for this supervision some of the complaints made by subscribers would never be settled.

To illustrate: A subscriber calls up "Central" and says: "Give me Main 23." Probably any other person in touch with the public in general would say, "Skidoo," but the operator, being free from such levity, goes about the work of making the connection. She finds the line busy and so reports. The subscriber raises a doubt. He says that that is his house, and that his wife never presumes to use the telephone when he is away. "Central" has no words with the subscriber, but if he is insistent she connects him with the chief operator, who, "listening in" for a minute, discovers that the subscriber's wife is engaged in shopping. She has called up one of the department stores and is ordering goods. If this sort of supervision were absent, the operator would be in hot water half the time, for subscribers are very human and they have no one at their side to say: "Now keep cool. Wait a minute. Perhaps the mistake is yours."

As a rule, the girl at Central is too busy to pay much attention to the idiosyncrasies of the exceptional subscriber. She works mighty hard, and with all the patience and pleasantness at her command, to please the ordinary subscriber who knows just what he wants and who generally gets it without any trouble. The operator's work is watched day by day, both by supervisors and by the chief operator; and some day, in the ordinary course of events, the girl who is armor-proof and proves impervious to Cupid's darts, will rise to occupy one of these advanced positions.

Of course, even though honorably and lucratively situated, she is not by any means out of danger so far as Hymen is concerned, but, as a rule, it is the operator who is in the business only a few years who leaves to shine elsewhere.

In some cities where the companies have schools for operators the pupils are under salary, just as the cadets are at West Point and Annapolis; but in the majority of exchanges the girl serves an apprenticeship and in time takes a regular place at the switchboard, working day or night as she pleases, and is paid wages considerably in excess of the wages ordinarily paid girls entering other lines of industry requiring no more preparation.

The human element in a telephone exchange is something that has constantly to be taken into account. Even if a company wished to treat its employés impersonally it could not as a matter of business do so. The provisions that are made in every Bell exchange for rest and recreation are absolutely necessary for the prompt and accurate handling of traffic which the public has learned to expect. The companies hold exchange managers responsible not simply for the condition of the inanimate machinery, such as the switchboards and distributing frames and storage batteries, but for the health and contentment of their employés. Accordingly, the managers learn to be watchful and in particular to tolerate no overwork among the girls at the switchboard. A clever exchange manager, without seeming to be impertinently interested in his employés' home conditions, tries to arrange it so that her work does not suffer from too little sleep or too little nourishment. In fact, sometimes he becomes abnormally sensitive as regards the conditions of operation in the exhange.

As an example of this, telephone men will tell you that they have heard a manager say he can describe the kind of day it is without looking out of a window. The combined murmur of the operators' voices serves as a barometer. There are days in every climate which are trying to the nerves, and on such days there is always a slight lifting of the general tone of the operators' voices. Similarly, when an extraordinary pressure of traffic is upon the switchboard, and the girls are handling calls at the rate of a couple of hundred an hour, the same tendency to pitch the voices in higher keys is noted. At such times the manager makes it his business to be especially alert, and any operator who shows signs of fatigue or nervousness is sent to the rest room to refresh herself.

The companies take great pride in the rooms in every exchange devoted to the convenience and comfort of the operators. Generally in the exchange there is a matron who at lunch hour, when the company serves tea and cocoa, etc., without charge, and assists the girls to prepare their lunches. In some of the exchanges coöperation on the part of the operators and the company has resulted in the establishment of various helpful institutional features, such as libraries and sewing circles and mutual aid associations.

A WOMAN'S TEARS.

Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean.

A woman's tears! Ah yes, a woman's tears!
  You, in your manly strength, say: " 'Tis not much
That stirs the fountain of her hopes and fears—
A woman weeps e'en at the slightest touch."

And yet, so little do you know, indeed!
  So little in your own life's stirring part,
How deep that fountain is, what currents feed
  That fountain's troubled source—a woman's heart.

When you are loved, you take it but your right,
  Saying: "She loves to love me." Do you know
Aught of that inner heart-flood, whose swift might Sweeps to her eyes their first warm overflow?

Or when you prove, in tenderness, to be
  Not all her love had thought you, do you take,
In chiding to your heart, this comfort, she
  Her tears and prayers will mingle for your sake?

Or when your child—her hard-earned treasure—lies
  Safe on the heart that dared for it death's fears!
But then you would not question if those eyes—
  Those weary, wistful eyes—were filled with tears.

Why question you at all? Her tears are not
  The idle things they seem; they are the flow
Of darkly troubled waters, oft begot
  In hidden depths that you can never know.

For woman's life is strange—yes, strange indeed;
  And that which can but little time defer
The busy schemes of men, demands its meed—
  'Tis love and smiles; 'tis love and tears with her.

And so she weeps—sometimes she knows not why,
  Save that the heart is full, and God has given
This safeguard for her nature, swept too high,
  Lest in its flood-tide should the heart be riven.

GRACE ADELE PIERCE.

DOCTORING WILD ANIMALS.

"The most interesting part of our work, the doctoring part," said Henry Love, the Philadelphia zoo-keeper, "is a thing that the public never sees. How would you like to see, for instance, a lion getting his claws cut, or an elephant having a tusk filled?

"These things take place often in zoos. The animals, getting so little exercise, are seized with all kinds of complaints. We are continually doctoring them.

"We once had an elephant who broke a piece out of his left tusk, and went nearly crazy with toothache. Iodoform was applied to the cavity, and after a time the pain ceased. But the cavity needed to be filled, or the whole tusk would be lost. To have applied a gold filling would have cost $500 or more, so tin was used. Our elephant dentist made a plug of pure tin, smeared it over with mastic, and drove it home with a crashing mallet blow. You should have seen the tears raining from the poor elephant's eyes.

"From lack of exercise the claws of lions, tigers and leopards grow too long and begin to pierce the flesh. We then tie the animals up and manicure them with shears—an exciting job.

"Sometimes we even doctor the fish in the aquarium, taking them out in our hands and dropping a little castor oil down their throats, or else medicating the water they live in—a method that some specialists consider the best one for fish ailments."

A PICKPOCKET'S TRICK.

A great crowd, cheering bravely, watched the parade pass by.

"Now," said Lecoq the detective, "I'll show you a pickpocket's trick."

And he shouted in an authoritative voice:

"Look out for your valuables, gents. There's crooks about."

Instantly, upon all sides, men's hands went to their pockets. One rammed his first into his hip pocket; one touched a waistcoat pocket; one shielded with his palm a small projection in the breast pocket of his coat. And so on indefinitely.

"Now," said Lecoq, "we know where all these men's valuables are, don't we? If we were crooks, we'd know in each case what pocket to attack, wouldn't we?"

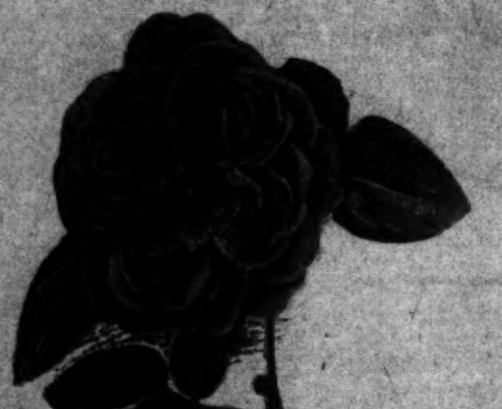
A Bush Rose that is Three Inches in Diameter and Blooms Constantly.



Dr. Van Fleet's Latest Triumph, a Free Growing Hybrid of Perpetual Bloom

GIVE a true genius facility to carry on his chosen work, and he asks for nothing more.

No better illustration is needed than that of Dr. Walter Van Fleet, pottering about in his rose garden at Little Silver, N. J., oblivious to the praise of experts, who pronounce him the greatest hybridizer of roses; caring nothing for money or the world's goods; content to put fortunes into the pockets of nursery owners, and receive for himself only the satisfaction of doing congenial work.

To produce new varieties of flowers he has given up a medical practice which bade fair to make him wealthy; he has undergone severe physical hardships, and at times has been upon the threshold of poverty

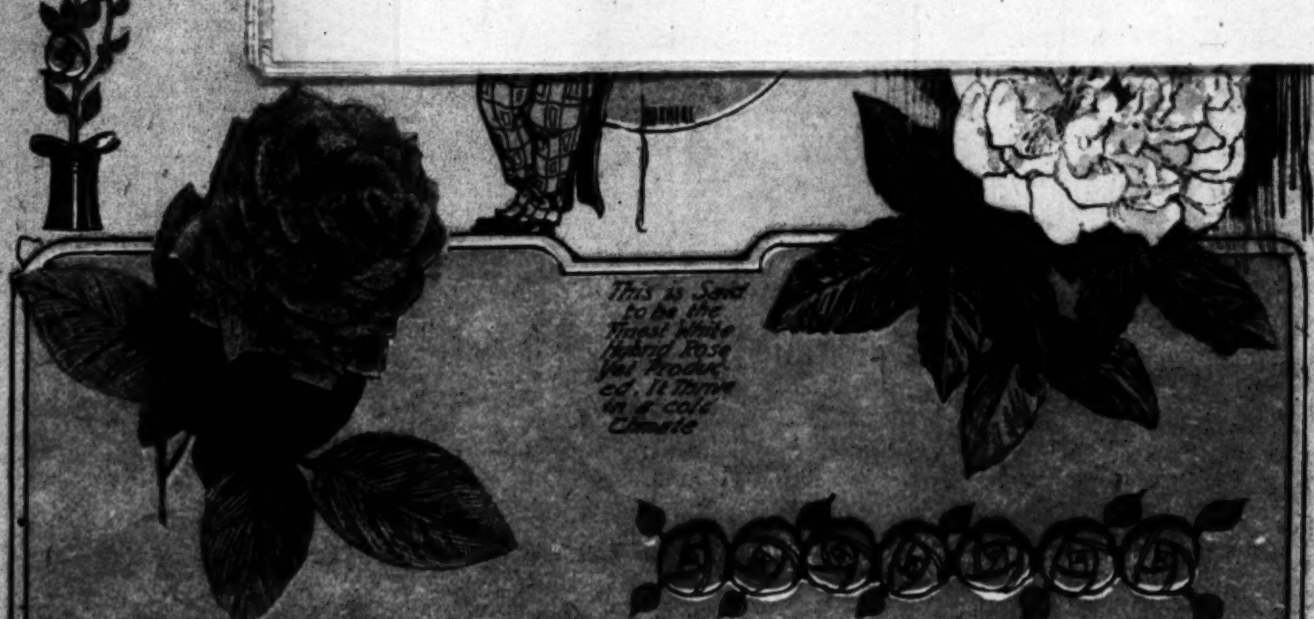
Curiously enough, his work has received greatest recognition outside of America. In Europe horiculture experts do not hesitate to pronounce him greater than Burbank in the hybridization of roses and gladiolas.

Even more important than the invention of beautiful roses has been Dr. Van Fleet's conquest of climate. He has taken the glorious flowers of California and fitted them to the rigorous winter of the East.

For ten years he tried patiently to secure a double hardy climbing rose of free-blooming habit, and at last succeeded.

WHEN you look from your window at, say, a Sir Thomas Lipton rosebush, whose immense white blooms are enjoyed all summer; when your nostrils are delighted by the fragrance of the double pink New Century; when over fence and wall your eye traces the pink, white and red course of the May Queen, Pearl Queen and Ruby Queen ramblers, you may consider yourself indebted to this quiet, hard-working, praise-shunning physician in the little New Jersey country town.

The popular ever-blooming pillar rose, Birdie Blye, is another of his creations. He produced the noted Magna-Frano, whose large pink flowers bloom constantly from early June to frost.



This is Said to be the Finest White Hybrid Rose Yet Produced. It Thrive in a cold Climate

An Ever-Blooming Tea Rose Created by Hybridization.

climbing habit and a distinctively

Again, he desired to get a rose of bloom which would bloom freely, have a double flower, would climb and would retain a hardy nature. "Impossible," said friends in whom he placed his confidence.

Never once did he give it up. He knew that from the Wichuriana he could get the hardiness and the climbing habit, but he would have to eliminate that rose's single flower. Then in the Marie Lambert rose he saw the double flower; but this is a bush rose and not hardy. Here were a good many qualities to combine.

Year after year for ten years he persisted in the crossing. Every season he saw dozens of flowers come from his hybridization, but not one possessed the qualities he desired. He knew, however, that if he persevered, some time a single successful rose might come from the exertions. And one did come. Flower experts consider it the most marvelous accomplishment in this line.

Next year one of his roses, the Charles Wagner, is to be put on the market. It is a Victor Hugo, crossed with an ordinary rose, producing a hearty hybrid perpetual free bloomer of deep crimson color.

The Philadelphia Rambler, which blooms two weeks in advance of the old Crimson Rambler, and which, last summer, was given a certificate of merit at the London Temple Flower Show, is a Van Fleet production. Another well-known child of his genius is the American Pillar

RESUMPTION OF BOXERISM.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 9.—A missionary, writing under date of August 18, from Suphing, in the province of Shansi, states that a large party of "boxers" entered Tsounhsien. The missionaries and native Christians fled to the Yamen for shelter, and the boxers following overawed the officials and got control of the city. A German lieutenant, who was traveling in the country, arrived opportunely and rallied the small force of Chinese soldiers, who killed the boxer leader and eleven others and made prisoners of forty-two while the remainder were dispersed. The missionaries were saved. A Chinese general with a force of troops subsequently appeared on the scene. Native reports speak of the persistent uneasiness, especially in the Yangtse Valley, following on the floods, which are resulting in a scarcity of food. The Foreign Office advises against inland traveling for the present.
